MISS LUCKEY'S PUPILS GAVE THEIR RECITAL.

Delightful Entertainment Given in Y. M. C. A. Hall Last Evening.

YOUNG WOMEN WERE CLEVER

PROGRAMME WAS CONCLUDED WITH A ONE ACT SKETCH.

In Addition To The Recitations There Were Several Drills And Statute Posing—Affair Reflected Much Credit On Miss Luckey.

An event, that was fully enjoyed by an audience that completely filled Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening, was the recital by Miss Mary Adelaide Luckey's pupils, which demonstrated Miss Luckey's ability as an instructor.

Part first of the programme opened with an Amazon drill given by the Misses Jessie Burt, Clyde Slater, Edna Burr and Ruth Bullock. The young women were gowned in Grecian costume and the series of movements, illustrating physical culture, were given with precision and grace, showing careful and earnest study. This was followed with a recitation "The Revolt of Mother," by Miss Mabel Stevens. This young woman's work was exceedingly good and evidenced much care.

"The Minuet" was the title of a recitation given by Miss Muriel Collins. She was gowned in the fashion of a century ago, and in describing the minuet, she gave parts of the fascinating dance. "King Robert of Sicily," another recitation, by Miss Edna Burr, was given in a style that showed that this young woman has much talent that is being carefully improved.

Miss Mabel Pound gave a clever recitation entitled "The Rose Act," by "Samantha Allen's Wife." The dialect was perfect, producing much laughter. Another recitation entitled "Hess," was given by Miss Clyde Slater. She was perfectly at ease and recited the lines in a pleasant manner. The last number in part first was a recitation, "The Painter of Seville," by Miss Ruth Bullock. Her work was pleasing, and she gave the selection in a delightful style.

In opening part second a May drill was given by the Misses Muriel Collins, Mabel Pound, Edna Burr, Ursula Krewson and Bessie VanArsdale. As in the other drill, these pupils showed the same precision and grace as they followed out the beautiful exercise in physical culture.

"A Private Rehearsal," a monologue by Miss Ellen Vandervoort, was clever. She was perfectly at home in her part and her actions and words called forth hearty approbation. "The Death of Marmion," a recitation by Miss Jessie Burt, won deserving praise for its excellence, as did also the recitation entitled "Molly," given by Miss Bessie VanArsdale.

A number deserving of special mention was the recitation entitled "The Legend of Bregenz," by Miss Ursula Krewson. The selection called for much effort and the young woman proved herself equal to the task.

The next number on the programme was statue posing by Miss Edna Burr. In a Grecian costume she gave a number of representations that were pleasing. Her work was painstaking and called forth frequent applause. She was exceedingly graceful and every movement was true.

The entertainment concluded with a short play in one act entitled "A Precious Pickle." The cast of characters was as follows:

Miss Pease.....Miss Mabel Stevens
Juno.....Miss Jessie Burt
Mrs. Gabble.....Miss Ruth Bullock
Sissy Gabble.....Miss Muriel Collins
Sadie Bean. } Young Ladies } Clyde Slater.
Jennie Frost. } from the City. } B. VanArsdale
Bessie Snow. } from the City. } Mabel Pound.

Each part was cleverly taken and Miss Jessie Burt, as "Juno," represented the colored servant in a manner that was delightful. Miss Bullock, as "Mrs. Gabble," was funny, as she related all her woes and deplored the fact that her washing was not finished.

Miss Florence Burt was the efficient accompanist of the evening and assisted in making the affair a success. Every one of those who took part in the programme was pleasantly remembered with handsome bouquets of choice flowers.

Trial Postponed.

A new trade mark is a pennant containing a circular device, in which is printed in conspicuous letters in blue and white "Consumers' Coal Company." The company's circulars will reach Plainfielders today. The members of the company are all well-known business men and can be depended upon. They have all been in the coal business for some time.

MAYOR AT ODDS WITH THE WATER COMPANY

Trouble Started Over a Little Bill and Ended With a Serious Breach.

ORDERED METER TAKEN OUT

MAYOR SMALLEY REFUSED TO HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH COMPANY.

Wm. F. Doud Wanted to Collect Bill and Shut Off Water Because the Mayor Refused to State Time For Settlement.

A water bill, amounting to the paltry sum of $4.32, figures as a basis for what gives promise of being a breach of some magnitude between Newton B. Smalley, the mayor of North Plainfield, and the Plainfield Water Supply Company.

For some time past, according to the various rumors floating about the borough, it has been understood that the administration has not been in entire harmony with the local water company. This breach between the official head of the administration and the water people is taken by many to be of some importance.

From the story heard over the brook this morning it appears that Wm. F. Doud, representing the water company, approached His Honor yesterday morning on Somerset street and requested payment of a bill for water furnished to the Mayor's butcher shop on that thoroughfare for the January-April period of the supply. Mayor Smalley informed him that he would give a check for the amount, and Doud, it is said, urged him to set a fixed time when the claim would be paid, adding that if it could not be arranged definitely the water would be turned off.

It was then that the parting of the ways came. The Mayor says he became incensed at Doud's insolent manner, which, he declares, was clearly expressed in his face and tone of voice.

"You can turn you water off, I don't care," the Mayor is alleged to have declared. With this statement the conversation ended.

In a very short time the water was turned off by an employe of the company and then came the climax.

His Honor appeared at the local office of the water company and ordered that the meter be removed from his store within one hour. From all accounts the discussion between Amos Andrews, the superintendent of the company, and His Honor became somewhat heated. There were several talks held during the day. In one of them Mr. Andrews is alleged to have accused the Mayor of being instrumental in having the present year's sprinkling agreement changed to the detriment of the concern. His Honor says that he declared that the public business had nothing to do with the subject matter of the conversation and that what he was remonstrating against was the important attitude of the representative of the water people.

Both Mayor Smalley and Superintendent Andrews are loath to speak upon the subject today. Mr. Andrews explains, however, that Mr. Doud was acting within the scope of his powers and under orders. The employes of the company are expected to be courteous to the customers of the concern, he said, and Mr. Doud had not been disrespectful to any one before so far as he knew.

"The demands of the Mayor were complied with," said the superintendent; "the water was turned off and the meter taken out."

Further than this the superintendent did not desire to discuss the affair. His Honor is of the same turn of mind. He will not talk, but admits that he was greatly angered over the matter.

HAY BLOCKED TRACK.

Attempt to Remove Broken Wagon Upset Load Over Street Car Tracks on West Front Street.

An attempt on the part of a West Front street trolley crew, to remove a load of hay from the tracks early last evening, met with different results than was expected. Instead of clearing the tracks they were blocked worse than ever.

The wagon belonged to John Darling, of this city, and was proceeding westward. At the corner of Compton avenue, the front axle broke and the load dropped to the ground. The succeeding trolley cars transferred passengers, but one crew decided to get rid of the obstruction and attached a rope to the disabled wagon.

Instead of throwing the wagon to one side, it followed the car, the hay in the meantime falling in the rear and covering the tracks to a depth of several feet. After going one hundred feet the crew desisted and with the aid of bystanders threw the wagon and what remained of the hay into the gutter. Pitchforks were then secured, but it was fully an hour before the tracks were cleared.

FOR THIRD TERM.

President E. T. Barrows And Vice-President F. H. Andrews, Renominated.

Nominations for offices for the New York Produce Exchange have been made and have resulted in the renomination of both Elliott T. Barrows for president and Frederick H. Andrews for vice-president for the third consecutive term. It has not been customary for any one man to hold those offices for more than two years and this honor now accorded to the two Plainfielders is an unusual one. The election will be held Monday. There has been some talk about an independent ticket in opposition to the regular one, but it is not expected to make much of a showing.

INSTALLED PASTOR.

Brother of a Plainfielder Takes His Charge at Flushing, L. I.

The services, which took place Monday night, passed off with spirit, and notwithstanding the unpleasant weather, there was a good audience.

Mr. Swain enters upon his work under most encouraging conditions, the church building, a handsome stone structure, is a new one and complete in all its details, including a fine room for pastor's study, and all has a look of prosperity, which speaks well for the people and for the cause they uphold.

HOW VOLNEY GREEN'S BODY WAS DISCOVERED.

A Dog Was the First to Get Trace of the Body Hidden Under the Sand.

STORY TOLD IN A LETTER.

FORMER CLASSMATE OF YOUNG MAN WRITES OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

Dog Located Body Which His Master Finally Unearthed On a Sand Bar—Body Was in Remarkable State of Preservation.

Frederick S. Green, of 947 West Sixth street, received this morning a letter from W. C. Burd, of the Dr. S. S. Still School of Osteopathy, at Des Moines, Iowa, telling him details of the finding of the body of Volney F. Green. Mr. Burd was a classmate of Mr. Green and was with him at the time the latter was drowned. They were hunting ducks along the Raccoon river, a tributary of the Des Moines river, at a point six miles from DesMoines.

As stated in yesterday's Press the body was found a half mile from the place of drowning and under peculiar circumstances. A man named Flinn, the eldest of two brothers, whose land is located near the river, was out searching for the body hoping to get the reward offered. He had his dog with him. During the search his dog followed a track to the river near a sandbar. Mr. Flinn followed and when he reached the bar he noticed that a few flies were hovering about. This still more attracted his attention and he began to remove some of the sand.

A few minutes' work revealed a sweater and presently he discovered the body. Mr. Flinn at once telephoned to DesMoines and word was sent to Mr. Burd. From the description given it was believed undoubtedly to be the body of Mr. Green, and Col. A. B. Shaw telegraphed Mr. Green in this city.

In the meantime Mr. Burd secured a horse and wagon at a local undertaker's place and hastened to where the body was. It required considerable work to recover the body as some wading was imperative. A coroner accompanied Mr. Burd and all necessary matters were attended to. Permission was obtained to bring the body to DesMoines and after the inquest arrangements were made to send the body to Plainfield. The body left DesMoines Thursday night and will arrive late tonight.

Considering the length of time the body was in the water it is in a remarkable state of preservation. The head and face is in the worst condition. The body was covered with twenty inches of sand and it was in a contracted position with the left arm extended. The right arm was doubled up beneath the body which lay face downward.

CLOSING NIGHT OF FESTIVAL.

CONTINUATION OF AFFAIR AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH WAS A SUCCESS.

Feature Of Second Night Was The Musical Programme—Those Who Took Part.

The second and closing night of the festival and entertainment, held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church, in the edifice of that church, proved to be a successful affair. As on the previous evening the cake, candy, ice cream and other refreshments met with a ready sale, the large crowd, which always attends entertainments given at Grace M. E. church, being as liberal as usual in bestowing its patronage equally well at the various stands.

The particular feature of the affair, however, was the musical programme. A pleasing piano solo by Miss May Conroy was well received. There was much applause when twelve young girls gave an interesting flag drill. They had been well trained for the drill by Mrs. E. Lowe and Mrs. E. E. Winekler, and succeeded in going through the exercises in a creditable manner.

It was the elocutionary work of Miss Josephine Murphy that chiefly attracted the attention of the assemblage. Her recitation entitled "General Joe Wheeler at Santiago," which was of a sentimental character, was thoroughly enjoyed, though a humorous selection entitled "Mary Had a Little Lamb," served better to bring out her ability as an elocutionist. The latter was a clever imitation of Henry Irving as given by a Vassar College girl and a country lass. Another one of her recitations that delighted everyone was a laughful piece called, "It Was Only a Dream."

ARE WORKING SLOWLY TOWARD A SETTLEMENT.

Conferences Between Employers And Strikers Are Now Being Held Daily.

MEN ARE FEELING HOPEFUL.

WORD RECEIVED THAT PRATT-WHITNEY WORKS HAVE RESUMED.

Men Have Reached An Agreement With Their Employers—Several Conferences Held Today, But Results Not Made Public.

One of the most encouraging reports received by the local machinists since the strike began, was contained in a telegram delivered at headquarters this morning, announcing that the Pratt-Whitney Company, of Hartford, Conn., one of the shops in the Niles-Bement-Pond combine, had recognized the International Association. In recognizing the union the agreement was made whereby the men commence work on a fifty-four hour week schedule with sixty hours' pay. As this is one of the largest tool making shops in the country, the victory is gratifying to the men.

As far as the situation is concerned locally there is no apparent change although conferences still continue to be held between employers and employes. One of these took place this morning between Superintendent Leary, of the Aluminum Plate and Press Company, and his employes at the former's request. The men were closeted for some time but at the close refused to make known the import of the meeting. In response to a request from Walter Scott, the strike committee of that shop will meet him at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The result of the conference will be made known to the leaders in Trades Union hall immediately after its conclusion.

It is reported that the terms offered by Superintendent Leary to the men of the Aluminum Plate and Press Company were fifty-five hours' work with sixty hours' pay with time and a quarter for over time. The committee telegraphed immediately to Grand Master O'Connell at Toronto to see if the terms might be accepted. If he declares that they may the men will return to work Monday morning. A settlement is therefore pending.

Settlement of the strike so far as the situation at Scott's Press Works is concerned is as far off apparently as it was a week ago. Further than this there appears to be no immediate prospect of settlement. This is the substance of the present condition as gleaned from an interview with Mr. Scott before 9 o'clock this morning.

The proposition made by the shop committee to the owner of the works has been declined. Last evening he notified some of his striking employes that he had concluded not to accept the demand of his machinists. Just what this demand was, Mr. Scott declines to say, but from a representative of the strikers it is learned that it was, briefly stated, nine hours' work for ten hours' pay coupled with a rate for time and a half for over time work.

Mr. Scott expresses a willingness to meet his men at any time, but from his statements he would vastly rather have them in such a position as to deal with them as employes and not as strikers. In conversation with an owner of a large plant in Philadelphia, Mr. Scott learned in New York yesterday that the strikers in the Pennsylvania city had agreed to go back to work Monday, and trust to a satisfactory adjustment of the differences within a week. That particular strike will then be settled, it is understood, by allowing the men to work fifty-five hours per week with an increase of six per cent.

Mr. Scott says in response to invitations he has attended some of the meetings in New York of the National Associations of Metal Workers, although neither he nor any other Plainfield manufacturer is affiliated with the union. The greatest increase, that has been discussed at these meetings he says is five per cent., though the strikers are asking for twelve and a half per cent. increase. The increase demanded, Mr. Scott declares, would amount to $50,000 a his works in twelve months. With this fact confronting him the owner says it is cheaper to shut down than to run.

Some more machinists have returned to work during the present week, according to Mr. Scott, but just how many it is impossible to learn.

On calling at the office of the Potter

THE WAR IS NOT OVER

British Lose Heavily In Fight With Delarey.

FOUR OFFICERS AMONG THE KILLED.

General Dixon's Force at Vladfontein Attacked by Boers and Driven Off After a Severe Struggle.

LONDON, June 1.—On the anniversary of Lord Roberts' entry into Johannesburg the country has been startled by the receipt of news of desperate fighting and heavy British losses within 40 miles of the Gold Reef City.

The battle at Vladfontein, on the Durban-Johannesburg railroad, reported by Lord Kitchener yesterday, is the most serious engagement since General Clements' reverse at Magaliesburg. It shows General Delarey is in no way daunted by the capture of 11 of his guns by General Babington six weeks ago. The garrison of Vladfontein, apparently largely composed of yeomanry, had 174 men put out of action. That their assailants came to close quarters and suffered heavily is shown by the number of dead left on the field.

The dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, May 30, is as follows:

"General Dixon's force at Vladfontein was attacked yesterday by Delarey's forces, and there was severe fighting.

"The enemy was eventually driven off, with heavy loss, leaving 35 dead.

"I regret that our casualties also were severe. The killed and wounded numbered 174."

"Four officers were killed."

Mr. Frederic Harrison, the positivist philosopher, contributes a timely letter to The Daily News, bristling with stinging invective against Mr. Chamberlain, Sir Alfred Milner and Lord Kitchener. Mr. Harrison declares that Great Britain's inability to subjugate the Boers is not only ruining, humiliating and making us odious as a nation, but is making us the laughing stock of the world." He calls the ministry's assurance that the war is over" a "grotesque fooling for party ends which is rapidly transforming us into a race of blackguards."

The South African casualty list, which filled three columns of the London Times, recall forcibly to the unwilling British mind that the Boer war is still in full and fiery action. The heavy losses of killed and wounded are chiefly the result of engagements which Lord Kitchener had not condescended previously to report. This fact has unloosed a flood of indignation and criticism, of which the antiwar party enjoys the monopoly.

Hurricane In Georgia.

DAWSON, Ga., June 1.—A hurricane struck the northern part of this place. The residences of M. P. Hoyle, J. W. Adams, Tom Fields, Sarah Jackson, Duke Major, Minnie Morris, the Dawson Oil company's ginhouse, also their cold refinery building and tanks, warehouse of the Seaboard Air Line, Dawson Odd Fellows' hall (colored) and the Sardis Baptist church (colored) were wrecked. The depot of the Central railroad, warehouse of the Dawson Grocery company and Dawson Compress company were practically unroofed. Seven or eight tenement houses and outhouses and much fencing have been destroyed. The damage so far as known at this time probably will not exceed $10,000. Mrs. J. W. Adams had her arm and leg broken, and Sarah Jackson and daughter and Ruby Newman were injured, but to what extent is unknown.

New York Police Parade.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The annual police parade took place yesterday afternoon, the line forming at the Battery as usual and marching up Broadway and down a part of Fifth avenue. The parade started at 2 o'clock. There were ten battalions of them all told, with a brass band at the head of each battalion, and the show they made was all that was desired. Commissioner Murphy ordered that a special effort be made this time because of the presence here of the chiefs of police and detectives of other cities who have been entertained here for the past week. A special stand from which these visitors viewed the parade stood opposite the reviewing stand on Fifth avenue by the Worth monument.

Tunnel Strike About Over.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Unless something unforeseen happens the strike on the rapid transit tunnel will be ended Monday and the strikers will return to work under union conditions at noon. Any nonunion men who have been employed during the strike either will be discharged or have to join the union. An agreement which will prevent all strikes on tunnel work will be signed. The first sign of an end to the strike came last night, when the strikers on Contractor Shaler's contract at Forty-second street were ordered back to work pending the settlement.

Sentenced at Goshen.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 1.—In the county court at Goshen Judge Beattie has sentenced John H. Crouse to nine years and six months in prison for the killing of William Hinman in a drunken brawl in the former's saloon in this city. Abraham Campbell was sentenced to four years and six months for assault on James Kells, an orphan boy whom he had taken from the Snake Hill (N. J.) almshouse.

Died of Leprosy.

NEW YORK, June 1.—According to a death certificate filed at Newark, N. J., Mrs. Rose L. Steel, a colored woman who died May 28, was a victim of leprosy. Mrs. Steel, who was 31 years old, had for years before her death worn a mask which covered the affected part of her face. The board of health was cognizant of the case, but did not consider it one which called for action.

Serious Trolley Accident.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 1.—Joshua Hillman, aged 26 years, was killed and about a score of people were injured, some probably fatally, in a trolley accident in this city. The accident occurred on the Sixth street line of the People's Railway company, which had been opened for business only the day previous.

Machinists Win Their Fight.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.—An agreement has been effected between the 250 machinists of the Pennsylvania Iron company who have been on strike for the past ten days and the company. The men will return to work on a nine hour basis.

Cuban Constitution as Adopted Will Not Do.

PRESIDENT AND CABINET SO DECIDE.

Spirit and Letter of Platt Amendment Considered to Have Been Disregarded—No Modification Permissible.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The cabinet continued in session until 1:20 o'clock yesterday, and immediately thereafter it was made known that the president had refused to accept the Cuban constitution as adopted by the Havana convention.

The full text of the constitution was laid before the meeting by Secretary Root, and there was a minute examination of those clauses in which the provisions of the Platt amendment or modifications of that amendment are embodied. It was assumed from the first that the constitution could not be accepted in its entirety, for it was evident that not only the spirit but the letter of the Platt amendment had been disregarded in some particulars.

It was decided that the secretary of war should immediately inform the convention through Governor General Wood that the conditions laid down by the Platt legislation must be incorporated in the constitution of the new republic and that no modification of those definite provisions could be acceptable to this government.

Before the meeting of the cabinet Senator Platt of Connecticut, chairman of the committee on relations with Cuba and author of the resolutions now in question, had a conference with the president. This consultation was a continuation of the talk which Mr. Platt and Mr. Spooner had with the president Thursday afternoon and left little doubt that the decision of the cabinet would be adverse to acceptance of the insular constitution as it now stands. The cabinet deliberations were not curtailed, however, and it was not certain until the council ended what the outcome would be. It is expected that the communication to the constitutional convention will be brief in character, but that it will be a firm statement of this government's position.

Secretary Root declined to discuss the action of the cabinet and said the war department would make no official announcement at present. Immediately after the cabinet meeting Secretary Root returned to the war department and began the preparation of a cable dispatch to General Wood outlining the decision of the president. General Wood will lay before the convention the statement from Washington as soon as it reconvenes.

The effect of the president's action may prolong for several months the next step contemplated by the convention. This is the enactment of an electoral law to provide for the organization of a general government. It is said to be the opinion of the cabinet that the United States cannot be satisfied with an interpretation by Cuba of the terms of the Platt amendment, but must confine itself to the amendment itself. It is held that the interpretation given by Secretary Root was not for the purpose of having it incorporated in the plan of relations, but was given merely to enlighten the convention and clear up any misunderstanding among the delegates.

A further effect of the convention's action will be to delay the withdrawal of American troops from the island, as until the relations are determined upon a government cannot be established, and until that is done the troops will remain.

THE NEWS IN CUBA.

Rejection of Constitution Causes Great Disappointment.

HAVANA, June 1.—The decision of the United States government not to accept the Cuban constitution as adopted by the Havana convention caused great surprise and keen disappointment to those members of the convention who voted in favor of the constitution as adopted. Two leading conservatives who were interviewed last night on the subject said in substance that they had reason to suppose that the constitution would be acceptable to Washington and that otherwise they would not have voted for the majority report as submitted. They also pointed out that in order to avoid a possibility of rejection the report had been changed at the last moment by striking out the interpretation at the end of the clauses and putting these in the form of a resolution by themselves, thus accepting the Platt amendment as passed by congress.

"It is true," said one of the conservatives in question, "that the committee's interpretations of the explanations of the Teller resolution which were offered by Governor General Wood and Secretary Root, together with the Washington commission's report, were included with the Platt amendment as an appendix to the constitution, but when we voted on the report it was with but one purpose in view—namely, to accept the Platt amendment."

Both delegates expressed regret that a misunderstanding had arisen and said they doubted that the convention would now reconsider its action, as the fight had been hot, the victory had been won by only one vote and those who had tried to do their duty toward their country had been bitterly assailed as traitors and perjurers.

General Wood, in the course of a brief interview, said:

"I never understood that the explanations of Secretary Root would be incorporated in the acceptance. I always considered that the convention regarded these explanations as explanations merely and that they would not form a part of the acceptance."

Dragging Lake For Three Bodies.

GENEVA, N. Y., June 1.—Seneca lake is being dragged for the bodies of Martin McGloon, a Spanish-American war veteran; Michael Neenan, married, and Ellsworth McLaughlin, who, it is supposed were drowned. A rowboat in which was found a hat said to have been worn by one of the missing men was discovered on the shore of the lake, and it is surmised that the men were drowned while attempting to cross the lake.

FIVE MEN LYNCHED.

Petty Thieves Taken From Custody and Hanged.

GUARDS ARE COMPELLED TO ASSIST.

Lookout, In Modoc County, Cal., the Scene of the Tragedy—Stolen Goods Found In the Possession of Accused.

BIEBER, Cal., June 1.—Details have been received here of the lynching of five men at Lookout, Modoc county. The lynched were Calvin Hall, 72 years of age; his three half breed sons, Frank, James and Martin, aged respectively 23, 19 and 16, and B. D. Yantis, aged 27.

As reported here the men lynched had been suspected of petty stealing for some time. Last Saturday they were arrested for stealing barb wire, pieces of harness and some hay forks. A search warrant was issued, and harness and forks were found in the houses of Hall and Yantis, who were taken into custody and brought to Lookout, where they were being held awaiting examination and trial. Sunday and for several days following other searches were instituted, and halters, dishes and table linen which had been taken from clotheslines were found hidden on the premises of the suspected parties.

The charge against the elder Hall was petty larceny for stealing the forks, hence he was allowed to go about on his own recognizance. His trial was to have taken place yesterday morning. The charge against the others was burglary, and their examinations had been set for June 3. They were held in custody, as they were unable to furnish bail in the sum of $300. Pending their examination they were being guarded in the Lookout hotel by Constable Carpenter, assisted by R. Nichols, J. W. Brown and S. Goyette. The two former stood guard till midnight, and the two latter took their places after midnight. Calvin Hall was stopping at the hotel so as to be near his sons.

In the morning about 2 o'clock a mob, variously estimated at from 30 to 50, made their appearance at the hotel and, pointing their guns at the two officers on guard, commanded them to observe silence while they secured the five prisoners, placed ropes around their necks and dragged them toward the bridge which crosses Pitt river. They compelled the two guards to accompany them. Frank Hall, it is reported, made such strong resistance that the mob hanged him before it got to the main bridge under a small bridge crossing a deep slough. The others were taken to the main bridge, and Calvin Hall, the father, was hanged on the north side, and Yantis and the other Hall boys were hanged on the south side of the bridge. As soon as the lynching was discovered word was telegraphed to the district attorney and sheriff at Alturas, and they, together with the coroner, are now on the way to the scene of the tragedy to hold an inquest.

Maryland Census Frauds.

BALTIMORE, June 1.—In the United States district court, in which the census frauds case is being tried, one witness after another mounted the stand in quick succession and testified to the presence on lists sent in by the accused St. Mary county enumerators of names of dead persons, fictitious persons, non-residents and the duplication of names of persons actually residing in the districts. Whole families living outside the county, some members of which had never been in it; a Washington hospital staff and a large negro family, most of them dead and of which the only male member living was a negro boy, were among the cases which came to light in the testimony. One man was counted wrongfully three times, and some women not living in the district were enumerated both by their maiden and their married names.

Cyclone Sweeps Mississippi.

VICKSBURG, Miss., June 1.—A windstorm almost cyclonic in proportions passed through the southwestern section of Claiborne county yesterday, prostrating everything in its path. So far only one fatality is reported, the 5-year-old daughter of Elijah Copeland, colored. Copeland's house was smashed in like an eggshell and three of his children caught under the falling timbers, the little girl being instantly killed. The others escaped with slight bruises. The wind was accompanied by heavy hail, and the damage to crops will be heavy. The rainfall at Vicksburg was nearly four inches.

Morgan Wins Railroad Fight.

NEW YORK, June 1.—It is officially announced that an understanding has been reached between the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific interests. Under this agreement the composition of the Northern Pacific board will be left in the hands of J. Pierpont Morgan. Certain names have already been suggested, not now to be made public, which will especially be recognized as representative of the interests of both properties. It is asserted that complete and permanent harmony will result from the plans adopted between all interests involved.

A Brutal Robbery.

BATH, N. Y., June 1.—About midnight robbers broke into a room occupied by Charles Brown at the house of William Cartwright, which is situated in a lonely spot on the Kanona road and terribly assaulted the old man in an attempt to make him give up his money. Brown says he cut his assailant with a razor during the struggle. He is over 70 years of age and has been an inmate of the Soldiers' home for many years. He is out on a furlough and had $60 in his possession. The robbers took a suit of clothes belonging to Brown.

Filipinos Denied Passports.

LONDON, June 1.—Two men representing themselves to be Filipinos called at the United States embassy yesterday and made application to Mr. Choate for passports. These the ambassador declined to issue, giving as a reason that they furnished him with no evidence that they were American citizens. The applicants persisted, and Mr. Choate then assured them that it was quite impossible for him to comply with their request unless evidence was submitted that they were entitled to the privileges of American citizenship.

Jimmy Michael Won.

BALTIMORE, June 1.—A 20 mile motor paced race was won last night by Jimmy Michael from Watson Coleman and O. V. Babcock by 3¾ laps; time, 33m. 15 1-5s. Coleman and Babcock rode in five mile relays.

A Narrow View.

To the up-to-date Plainfield citizen, who every day enjoys the practical benefits of the city's good roads, it does not seem possible that any reasonable being will do aught but look with favor on any project to advance the cause of "good roads," especially in the agricultural districts. There are some people, however, who are so blind to their own interests that they fail to see facts readily apparent to the rest of the world.

The Clinton Democrat is now assailing the Hunterdon County Board of Freeholders for making its first appropriation for macadam roads and availing itself of the State road act. One of the members of the board, who is opposed to the appropriation, has formulated his objections which The Democrat endorses. One of the arguments is remarkable and clearly demonstrates the lack of progressiveness on the part of the objector. While the building of a good road might advance values in that immediate neighborhood, he declares, it would result in throwing out of market entirely hundreds of other farms which did not get the advantage of the good oads.

If this theory should be generally followed out, no section of the country would ever be able to enjoy any advantages for fear that the adjacent property, not enjoying these advantages, might suffer in consequence But the other farms would not suffer. On the contrary, wouldbe purchasers would realize that the extension of the good roads would ultimately reach these farms in the future and the possibilities would tend to increase rather than decrease values.

As far as the scholastic baseball teams are concerned, their active season is now nearly over. The time for examinations and the commencement season is close at hand, so that baseball will have to take a secondary place. None of the local school teams have scheduled more than a game or two in June, and these will be played during the next week. Aside from the break in the relations between the Plainfield High School and Leal's School, the scholastic baseball season has been a remarkably successful one and greatly pleasing to all concerned.

Persistent and careful search has finally resulted in the finding of the body of Volney F. Green, the young Plainfielder who was drowned near DesMoines, Ia., several months ago. At the time of the fatality, the river was in a flooded condition and it is supposed that the body was washed down stream and covered with the debris of the flood. Volney F. Green was a very popular young man in Plainfield and had a host of friends here who will be glad to know that the body has finally been recovered and is now on its way home for proper burial.

Although all the conferences between the local striking machinists and their employers have been without result, it is a subject for general congratulation that the old good feeling still exists to that extent that employer and employe may meet and talk over the situation in a dispassionate way even if an agreement cannot be reached. It is a cause for much regret that the points in contention cannot be satisfactorily adjusted without more delay.

The remarkable success which met the efforts of the Union County Hunt Club a year ago in the horse show given by that organization, led the club to try again this season. Unfortunately the rain tock a prominent part in the affair, and the success of the year previous was by no means equalled. Lovers of good horses in in Union county hope, however, that the club will not be discouraged by this experience, but will try again in 1902.

If Mayor N. B. Smalley, of the borough, will take a stand in favor of new street signs for the borough, he is not likely to meet with much opposition in the Borough Council. The Mayor has championed good causes before. Let him come out and advocate the street signs now.

Don't forget that your house should be properly numbered. The Common Council, through its street committee, has given warning that the ordinance concerning the numbering of houses is to be strictly enforced.

The season for the strawberry and ice cream festivals is here. They form a regular and popular part of the social life of nearly every local church. Several have already been held and more are to follow.

Company K was roundly complimented by the people of Somerville for the excellent showing which that military organization made during the time of its visit to Company M, of Somerville.

CHEAPER COAL.

Local Retail Coal Dealers Decided to Reduce Price For a Time.

According to a decision reached at a meeting of the retail coal dealers held last evening, the price of coal was reduced 25 cents making the cost per ton $5.50. This will undoubtedly be the lowest price it will reach in this city this season as the wholesale dealers have already announced their summer schedule which makes provision for a gradual raise. The chances are that the price locally will shortly advance,and consumers would do well to take advantage of the present rate.

For the past seven months Mr. Conley has been employed at the Porvenir Sugar Company's works at San Pedro de Marcoris. VAN ARSDALE'S SHOE STORE

Our Special Shoe for Women has room for the joints, making the shoe comfortable, and is at the same time stylish, and holds the shape, thus reducing the appearance of the joints to a minimum. In the ordinary shoe, the joints, in trying to make room for themselves, stretch the shoe out of shape, and it becomes shapeless and ugly. We carry them in Vici Kid, Goodyear Welts, Lace. Price $3.50.

"And the moment of his death?" Stanton asked, hurriedly.

"I don't know—let me see. There was the stroke of apoplexy, and later the heart failure—"

"The storm—" Stanton began.

"Was only an incident, Mr. Stanton. Matters had simply reached a crisis and waited an excuse. Had the heart trouble been taken in time—"

"You are sure that the death was not from the apoplexy?"

"Positively. In spite of thousands of reports to the contrary, it is a law that never has been and never will be violated that a man cannot die of simple apoplexy in less than 48 hours after the shock."

"Then the immediate cause of his death was—"

"Heart failure, Mr. Stanton. Nothing else. It was simply the crash of those falling walls. Up to that moment he was improving. It made even our strong hearts stop for an instant. Have you noticed anything in yourself making you fear inherited tendencies?"

"Nothing whatever. You must excuse me. I am in haste," Stanton replied.

"Your face was very pale when you came in. Now it is painfully flushed. You should keep an eye on the action of your heart, and—"

"I will bear it in mind," Stanton replied as he left the office.

He stopped next at Mr. Borden's, but the clergyman was away, and there was no time to lose. He hurried on to Judge Russell's.

"Hello, Stanton," the forgiving old man exclaimed. "It's years since you've honored us with a social call. Come out in the sitting-room. The wife's there by an open fire."

"Not to-night, judge," Stanton said, with something almost a sigh. "I'm out of hours, but I must consult you professionally. It's about the date of my uncle's death."

"Why, goodness, man, I don't remember exactly, this minute. I have it at the office, and can give it to you the first thing in the morning. Or send over and get the date of the will. He died the same night, you know."

"I have the date of the will. What I want is what you personally remember."

"H'm. Well, I remember the storm and the fire, that night. My Ruth was very sick, and the wife was with her when you came for me, and I went with you without so much as telling her, not thinking I'd be gone a half hour; but it was after 12 before I left your house. I left suddenly when those walls fell in. The fire was near us, and I knew the wife would be frightened. Why, I didn't even know of your uncle's death till the next morning. But, if the date of the will and the storm and the fire are not enough, look up the death certificate. My memory wouldn't help anything."

"The date on the death certificate is the same as the will—December 5, 1882," Stanton replied.

"Well," the judge muttered. "And—Stanton!—For Heaven's sake! That was ten years ago to-night! Oh, Stanton, are you crazy?"

"I think not," said Stanton.

"You are! You are!" cried the judge. "Do you know that some one else will claim the property?"

"The papers were served to-day."

"Do you know who the claimant is?"

"I met him once a year ago," said Stanton. The judge was too excited to see the muscles of his face contract.

"Met him once, did you?" the judge almost shouted, with a sneer. "Met him the time he walked away with your wife, did you? Well, sit down, young man, and keep quiet. I have something to say to you. I'm pledged to your uncle never to speak, but I will. You deserve it. Your uncle and your mother were turned out of their home when your mother was only a child to make room for a daughter born to their stepmother. They never saw their father again, or their half-sister, but years afterwards a fellow named Raymond—the father of the one you met—settled down on John Olmstead, calling himself his brother-in-law, loafing on him, living on him, cheating him, even forging his name time and again. Why, for the last ten years of his life John Olmstead couldn't be forced to repeat the name of Raymond. But this son, by some rascality, got hold of some papers that were frauds from the beginning, only there was no way to prove them so except by bringing into court the life history of your uncle's wife, and he would never hear of that for a moment. He let them bleed him instead.

"Now your uncle loved you and did everything in his power for you. He wanted you to marry, and he had a right to. It was common sense, and it wasn't common sense for you to stick it out this way. When he died he left you everything, on the one condition that you would marry within ten years. No man could have been left freer to take his time and make his choice. He left this Raymond ten thousand if he'd give up those papers and sign off his claim. But he wouldn't take it. He was playing for the whole. No one else thought you'd be such an eternal fool as to stand out for ten years against your uncle's wishes, your friends and common sense.

"He kept his eye on you, and when you did almost blunder into marrying he deliberately walked off with your wife. He didn't want the woman. Oh, no. Lombard thinks he already had another wife, out west. At all events, before she'd been out there long she wrote back that she'd made a terrible discovery and was coming home at once. She never reached home. Young Raymond was not with her when she started, but his father followed her. She died, suddenly, on the way. No one found out what it was that she discovered, but Lombard satisfied himself that she was murdered, and that it was the old Raymond who did it. He disappeared, and nothing could be found of him till it was told that he died, a year or more ago, in California.

"Now the son comes up for his reward, and you have paid it."

With a savage grunt Judge Russell rose, stuffed his hands deep into his pockets, and stood glaring at John Olmstead's nephew.

Slowly Stanton rose, too, and, speaking deliberately, replied:

"You knew that I was ignorant of this, but you expected me to follow a course, because you saw the reason for it. If I had known, before, what you have kindly told me now, I might have done very differently. I am accustomed to weigh important questions for myself and to act upon my own judgment, not on the judgment of others; and if you would find the real cause for this property's going into the wrong hands, look for it in the obnoxious persistency of those who attempted to drive me into marriage when the only rational ground which they could urge or I could see was the securing to myself of John Olmstead's millions. It was not a way that it pleased me to make a fortune. And now, Judge Russell, if we have each of us spoken plainly enough to be understood, I am anxious to revert to my original question: Can you recall any further minute detail concerning my uncle's death?"

"Stanton! By all that's great," Judge Russell cried.

"No, I cannot," replied Judge Russell. "And it would not make a whit of difference if I could. It was on the night of the 5th of December, 1882. There's proof of it which no testimony could shake. The law is against you, and it's your own fault."

"I came on a question of facts, not of law," Stanton remarked, calmly. "How do you know that my uncle was alive when you left the room?"

"I heard him speak while your man Sam was writing his name. I remember looking back to see if he was calling me."

"It may seem strange to you, Judge Russell, but the incidents of that night were painfully impressed upon my mind. I remember that you looked at your watch at about that time. Do you recall it?"

"Certainly. It was just as I was handing Sam the pen. I remember it well for the shock it gave me to find that it was so late. It was precisely 12 o'clock."

"You are sure of it?"

"Of course. I even remember, now, wondering if something was not wrong with my watch, and that the clock began striking while I was looking. With the first stroke Sam jumped. He was taking the pen, and between us it fell on the paper. You'll find the blot it made right over the name of the first witness. Look, and you'll see that I have a good memory."

"You are correct about it, sir; and it stands this way," Stanton said, speaking slowly. "While you were handing Sam the pen you know that the clock and your watch agreed that it was 12. Later, while Sam was writing, you are confident that you heard my uncle speak—"

"Stanton! By all that's great! It was the sixth of December when he died!" Judge Russell cried.

"I thought that your memory could shake the evidence," Stanton replied.

USEFUL CLUBS FOR WOMEN

THE members of the clubs I have in mind never quarrel, so far as they have been heard from, and they are almost the only clubwomen of whom this can be said. The reason is they are working for the helping of their fellow citizens and the beautifying and improving of the localities in which they live and not to get themselves elected presidents.

The clubs I mean are the rural improvement societies among women. The old style rustic village and railway station were blisters on the face of the earth. The horror of them comes over me now as I sit and write this. I see still the piles of ashes, the foul remnants of the tobacco habit, the desolate, weed grown grounds, the vacant lots covered with things unspeakable. It was a credit to the young women and men of such a town that they got away from it as soon as they could. In that old style town children ran riot, and brutal drivers beat horses at will.

These are the things the women's village improvement societies are changing. Let us take one, as an example, in an eastern state. Here are some of the things that club has done:

It has brought about that vacant lots are no longer to be used as dumping grounds for rubbish and disease breeding debris. It has made the railway station in particular as clean and pretty as a private house with a flower and shade tree lawn about it. It has attended to the beautifying of public parks and walks, to the cleaning and paving of the streets and the drainage and general sanitation of the whole place. Wherever in the vicinity there was natural scenery of an attractive character those women had it preserved and cared for. They divided themselves into committees, each one taking a particular work to itself and attending to that. The farms about the village have caught the impetus and are cutting away the weeds from their fence lines and removing the pigsties from their front door vistas. The earth is becoming a thing of beauty for miles around where these blessed women live. They have created a public sentiment for better things.

There is a women's improvement club in the far south, at Lake Charles, near New Orleans. Here the ladies took on themselves the task of redeeming the rural aspects. They planted splendid live oak trees along driveways; they placed flowering shrubs along park walks. Attached to their village, as there is to most country places, was an abandoned cemetery, with its rank weeds, sunken graves and broken tombstones, a dank, nightmare spot, suggestive of suicide and ghost riding. The women had a hard task with that—one which tried all their powers—but they reconstructed the frightful old place, and they see that it is kept in order.

They turned their attention to the schoolhouses. They cleaned up the grounds about them, planted trees and made the grass grow and taught the young ones to take pride in having a beautiful lawn around the building outside and artistic wall and other decorations inside. Besides that they obtained by subscriptions some valuable books for the public school libraries.

It is well usually to have men as members of these village improvement societies, to assist with their experience and money. But the business work of the organizations must in nearly every case be done by women, because men cannot spare the time for it.

Whether farm life and village life shall be made attractive depends on the country women. If they do what is in their power, they can so improve and beautify the landscape as to raise the price of real estate in their neighborhoods. What is more, they can prevent to some extent the deplorable exodus of young people from the country to the cities.

JANE STORY.

"I like women," said a clear headed man of the world, "they are so finished." They finish society, manners, language. Form and ceremony are their realm. They embellish trifles.—Emerson.

THEIR PLAN SPOILED.

Resignation of South Carolina Senators Not Accepted.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 1.—Governor McSweeney has refused to accept the resignations of United States Senators Tillman and McLaurin, who resigned last week and agreed to go before the people with the understanding that only one of them should be re-elected. The governor said the people of the state were already separated over politics and that such a campaign as the senators contemplated would cause much bitterness.

Regarding Governor McSweeney's return of the joint resignation of Senators Tillman and McLaurin Senator McLaurin said:

"The unexpected action of Governor McSweeney leaves me completely at sea. I was reluctantly forced into the fight, but when I saw the insulting remarks of Senator Tillman, 'If McLaurin is afraid to meet me,' I made up my mind if possible to break off every prong of that old pitchfork and wear him out with the handle before I was through. The contemplation of my resignation is no new thing with me. I value my honor and integrity as a man far more than I do a seat in the United States senate. I wished to resign last winter when I was so cruelly assailed, for the taunts and sneers that met my efforts to benefit South Carolina nearly drove me distracted. I will withdraw my resignation if Governor McSweeney has requested it, because I appreciate the patriotic motives that inspire him and am willing to unite with him in shielding the people of the state from strife and bitterness."

NEGOTIATIONS NEAR CLOSE.

China's Unconditional Acceptance Leaves Few Details.

PEKING, June 1.—China's unconditional acceptance of 450,000,000 taels as the indemnity to be paid the powers has caused great satisfaction among the foreign ministers, as it only leaves practically a few minor details to complete the negotiations.

The phrase in the joint note, "to the satisfaction of the powers," may cause some delay in the evacuation of Chinese territory, as the ministers fail to see how China can guarantee payment and as all the ministers believe it would be a mistake to have a large body of foreign officials collecting revenue. Were revenue thus collected over 2,000 officials would be required, and the aggregate salaries of these men would be very large and amount to more than the ordinary Chinese "squeeze."

The majority of the ministers now favor raising the customs to 10 per cent and taking 5,000,000 taels yearly from the likin tax. This method would give, after the payment of interest on foreign debts now existing, about 23,000,000 taels a year. The ministers would agree to this system if China will discontinue the collection of all likin duties on foreign goods.

ILLINOIS DAY FIXED.

Governor Yates and Party Will Visit Exposition June 25.

BUFFALO, June 1.—Director General Buchanan has received a telegram from Governor Yates of Illinois stating that June 25 would be celebrated as Illinois day at the exposition. The Illinois state building will be dedicated on that day in the presence of Governor Yates and his staff, and it is expected that a large number of people from Illinois will be here for the ceremonies.

At the Pan-American intercollegiate track and field games, which take place in the stadium on the exposition grounds on Tuesday, June 4, there is promise of excellent sport. A large majority of both the first and second men of the Berkeley Oval meet have entered, and, with the winners of the western conference which takes place in Chicago yesterday and today as probable opponents, the Pan-American meet is expected to be a most thoroughly national collegiate meet.

Mrs. Babcock Returns.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Mrs. Maltbie D. Babcock, widow of the late pastor of Brick Presbyterian church of this city, who died in Naples on May 18, arrived here yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner Fuerst Bismarck. She was accompanied by the Rev. George A. Paull and the Rev. George L. Curtis and their wives of Bloomfield, N. J. They were members of the party with which Dr. Babcock made a tour through Palestine. Dr. Babcock killed himself while returning. Mrs. Babcock was met at the pier by William D. Barbour, treasurer of Brick church. She was in a feeble condition and was not allowed to see callers.

Cecil Rhodes' Plans.

BULAWAYO, Matabeleland, June 1.—Cecil Rhodes, in a speech before the Chamber of Mines here on the difficulties of obtaining laborers, advocated the adoption of legislation controlling the importation and deportation of Chinamen. He further announced that contracts had been made for the construction of 160 miles of the new railroad to the Wauki coalfields.

Chicago Machinists Strike.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The Chicago machinists' strike has begun. More than 1,000 men have quit work in various shops and factories because the employers refused to sign the agreement sent out for a 12½ per cent increase in wages, a nine hour day and time and a half and double time for all time over nine hours.

Two Oil Wells Opened.

KNOXVILLE, June 1.—A special from Jamestown, Tenn., says two oil wells have been opened on the line of Fentress and Pickett counties.

King to Cut Off Chaplains.

LONDON, June 1.—The Daily Mail says that King Edward has decided to reduce his ecclesiastical establishment from 36 paid chaplains to 12.

CONDENSED DISPATCHES.

The steamer Northtown has sailed from Chicago for Europe.

The police are said to have killed 40 strikers near St. Petersburg.

High officials of Hawaii were ordered to testify in the legislature bribery cases.

Queen Wilhelmina and her consort were entertained in Berlin by the kaiser.

Captain Cyril W. King, U. S. A., was found guilty at Mobile of receiving bribes.

The czar's oldest child, the Grand Duchess Olga, was reported ill with typhoid fever.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY STRIKE.

About 400 Machinists Out—An Official's View of the Situation.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Vice President Gannon says that the machinists' strike on the Southern railway is confined entirely to the machine shops at Memphis, Knoxville, Birmingham, Atlanta, Selma, Spencer and Manchester.

Thus far about 400 machinists and apprentices and their sympathizers have gone out. Reports received are to the effect that a few of the strikers have returned to work. No steps have been taken to fill the vacancies.

Discussing the situation Mr. Gannon said: "The men are evidently misinformed as to what the result of a serious misunderstanding under present conditions is liable to be to the men. We believe that those who have stopped work acted on impulse and without stopping to seriously consider what the outcome of such hasty action might be. I was disappointed in those who acted hastily, but believe they will upon reflection see their error, consider their duty to their families, themselves and their neighbors and be guided by it rather than the mere mouthings of outside strangers, agitators and walking delegates."

He said that while the company regretted the attitude of the strikers the latter might be assured "that any order that may be issued relative to the matter will be irrevocable, and in case of serious trouble there will be absolutely no compromise."

A Big Diamond.

NEW YORK, June 1.—A diamond so big that its like has never been seen by the dealers in this country and so costly that a syndicate had to be formed to purchase it is now lying in the big safe of Stern Bros. & Co., in Nassau street, "a king's ransom in a 5 cent wooden box." It is destined to the Pan-American exposition, where its christening will occur. It is the largest di

SPORTING.

GOLF.

The members of the Hillside golf team as well as all the members of the club were greatly surprised when they were beaten last Saturday by Princeton '04. It was the first game for both teams, but inasmuch as the home team had been playing good golf individually, the members were looked upon as sure winners. Under ordinary circumstances they would have won easily. Frelinghuysen, who scored 12 points, and who was the only man on the visiting team that did score, is a resident of Morristown. He is considered an erratic player and no one expected him to make a score that would beat the combined scores of the home team. He made the eighteen holes in 84, which is close to the best score. His opponent, H. R. Stockton scored 101. Another surprise came in the defeat of J. Whitney Baker by J. H. P. Wharton, which shows that Baker is not yet in his usual good form. All the honors, however, did not go to Princeton, for Glenny defeated A. Poole, Jr., who was college champion at golf last fall.

As stated, this was the first game for the Princeton Freshmen, and they feel elated over the success of the team. The faculty was not very enthusiastic over the team's decision to play golf, and for this reason the team felt mere determined than ever to win. No doubt the success of the team will encourage the members and further honor may come to them. The Hillside team is not to be blamed in any way for its defeat, for the members played good golf and more will be heard from them later on when they get into their best form.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Plainfield High School team plays its closing game of the season this afternoon with the Alis nine on the Plainfield avenue grounds.

The Plainfield Winners defeated the North Plainfield Whistlers by a score of 19 to 14 in a game played on the Washington avenue grounds Memorial Day afternoon. The batteries were: Winners, Vanderhoef and Linke; Whistlers, Clark and Nischwitz.

It took ten innings Thursday afternoon to decide the superiority of the Jockey Club and Underwood A. A. in a ball game played on the old golf grounds. The former eventually proved the victors by a score of 7 to 6. There were a number of interesting plays in the game, among them being a three-base hit by Muldowny. The batteries were Scott and Douglas for the Underwoods, and Firstbrook and Muldowny for the Jockey Club.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

There seems to be some dispute as to the time mentioned in The Daily Press of yesterday, in the five-mile bicycle race at Dewey Park, Thursday, which was won by David Curtis, of this city. The time mentioned was 20 min. 48 sec., which was taken by Conrad Knoth, who was in charge, and who asserts that it is correct. The muddy condition of the road and other conditions he says rendered it impossible for any faster time to be made. The time which David Curtis says was given him by the timers was 11 min. 48 sec.

A crowd of young men connected with the physical class of the local Y. M. C. A., will meet the athletes of the S. O. H. Club, of Westfield, in track and field events in the near future. At least twelve entries have been made already by the Plainfielders. The contest will probably be held in this city Saturday, June 8.

Conrad Knoth, the much-heralded swift-footed runner, has thrown down the gauntlet to all comers. His disappointment, it is said, was keen when no one appeared to enter the lists with him at the Dewey Park arena Decoration Day. Unfortunately Charles Sylvester Cook, the winged Hermes, who sets type in The Daily Press office, was unable to participate in the scheduled event owing to the fact that no arrangements had been made with the keeper of the city ambulance to convey Mr. Cook to the theatre of action. Mr. Knoth has posted notice of an unconditional challenge for a contest for the cup to take place at Dewey Park, Saturday, June 8.

NO CAUSE OF ACTION.

Decision Finally Reached in Case in Justice Mattison's Court

The jury, in the contract case of Jett Brothers against Richard O'Connor tried in Justice Mattison's court yesterday afternoon, brought in a verdict that there was no cause of action.

It was the second attempt of the plaintiff's company to obtain a verdict in that court against O'Connor, the first trial having ended in a disagreement of the jury. W. A. Angleman represented the plaintiff, which is a distillery concern, and John Frech, of Somerville, appeared for O'Connor, who lives at Bound Brook.

Two promissory notes given in part payment of some liquor purchased, but left in bond, formed the basis of the suit. The agreement provided for its recission on condition that the first part of the liquor used did not suit the purchaser, and on this clause the decision hung. O'Connor claimed that he had obtained satisfactory evidence that it would not suit without taking any of it out of bond.

Non Suit Granted.

An interesting point developed in the contract case of William and Peter Slicker, doing business as the Trenton Abbatoir Company, against Blatz & Mundy, of this city, which was tried before Justice Hand yesterday. The name of another member of the complainant firm was not mentioned in the case and for this reason Lawyer Francis J. Blatz, who appeared for the defendants, asked for a non-suit on the grounds of a misjoinder of the parties of the plaintiff. The request was granted. The plaintiffs were represented by Lawyer W. K. McClure.

VOLNEY GREEN BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS

Funeral Services Were Held From Home of Fred S. Green Yesterday Afternoon.

NAVAL RESERVES PRESENT.

DETACHMENT ATTENDED FUNERAL AND FIRED SALUTE AT GRAVE.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards Officiated at Services—Bearers From Reserves—Honorary Bearers Were Old Friends of V. F. Green.

The remains of the late Volney F. Green arrived in Plainfield yesterday morning at 8:42 o'clock from Des Moines, Iowa, and were interred in the afternoon with military honors, in Hillside Cemetery. The funeral services were held from the home of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Green, 947 West Sixth street, where a large number of friends and neighbors gathered to do honor to the memory of one who was not only esteemed, but greatly beloved.

Numbered among those in attendance was a detail of thirty-five members of the New Jersey Naval Reserves, Second Division, Battalion of the East, in charge of Lieut. Thomas Goldingay, of Newark. A majority of the Reserves were attached to the Badger and served during the Spanish-American War with Mr. Green. On the lawn near the house were several stacks of arms which supported a large furled American flag which was draped.

The services, which were held at 3:30 o'clock, were in charge of Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, assisted by Rev. Harry Elmer Gilchrist, rector of St. Luke's P. E. church, Roselle, a cousin of the deceased. There was a selection, "Abide With Me," by a quartette consisting of F. H. Freeman, Wm. N. Runyon, E. E. Runyon and Wm. Tallamy, after which Dr. Richards read appropriate Scripture selections. He based his remarks, which followed, on the text, "God Is a Very Present Help In Time Of Trouble."

He spoke impressively concerning the young life that had gone out so suddenly and without warning. He referred to the particularly happy family that had been called upon to pass through deep sorrow. "That dear boy who had endeared himself to the hearts of so many," continued Dr. Richards, "had a very bright future, and his life was one of much promise. He had promptly answered the call to defend his country and had served with credit. At such a time as this God is a very present help, and to Him we must look for that comfort and consolation which alone heals the broken heart."

Dr. Richards referred to the deceased with words of praise and offered comfort to the bereaved ones in a tender and impressive manner. At the conclusion of his remarks, the quartette sang "Gathered In," after which Rev. Mr. Gilchrist offered a fervent prayer.

The casket, in which reposed the body, was covered with light material. Surrounding it was a profusion of flowers, including large and beautiful wreaths from the Naval Reserves, the Badger Veterans' Association and the Alis Athletic Association. There were also many handsome tributes from individual friends. At the conclusion of the services at the house the remains were conveyed to the hearse by the following bearers from the Reserves: John Hudson, George Gardner, Paul Kuebler, William MacMillan, O. C. Thieleman and Fred M. Sanborn. The honorary bearers were: F. H. Freeman, A. L. Saltzman, George Voorhees, Robert Turrill, Fred G. Smith and George Proctor Smith.

The Reserves, who stood at "present arms" while the remains were being carried from the house, then went to the cemetery by trolley. At the grave a military salute of three volleys, followed by the sound of taps on the bugle, preceded the prayer and benediction offered by Dr. Richards.

MRS. ROGERS STILL LEADS FOR TROPHY.

Holds First Place In Race for Golf Committee Cup at Hillside Club Links.

FINAL FOR CHAPMAN CUP.

WRIGHT DEFEATED GLENNY ONE UP IN NINETEEN HOLES.

Wright's First Win While Glenny Has Two to His Credit Already — Three Gives Permanent Possession of Trophy.

There were two important events that attracted a very large number of golfers to the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course Saturday afternoon. The first was the final play for the Chapman cup between W. L. Glenny and Howard DeP. Wright. Glenny already had two wins to his credit and a third win would give him permanent possession of the trophy. He put up a very strong game, but failed to land the prize. His opponent went him one better and beat him 1 up in 19 holes.

This puts Glenny out of the race until next fall, when he will have another chance to compete for the cup. Howard Wright, the winner of the event, now stands a fair show of getting further honors. Although it was his first win for the cup he will have an opportunity of securing it.

The next event was the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup. The entry list was the largest thus far this season and the play was spirited and exciting throughout. Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, who is devoting much time to the game this year, still holds the lead with 7½ points to her credit. She tied Saturday with Olaf Saugstad for second place, thus securing 1½ points. Saugstad received the same share of points. The winner of the event was C. C. Burke, Jr., who made a net score of 79. He played with a handicap of 27, and it is quite likely that something will happen to that handicap before he plays again. Burke is now tied for second position in the competition. The interest in the contest increases steadily and the winner will have to play nearly par golf.

The standing for the cup at present is as follows:

	Points.
Mrs. N. P. Rogers	7½
Townsend Rushmore	3
Howard C. Tracy	3
C. C. Burke, Jr	3
W. L. Glenny	2½
H. R. Stockton	2
Howard Wright	1½
A. G. Henderson	1½
Howard Huntington	1½
E. A. Stevenson	1½
D. H. Barrows	1½
Olaf Saugstad	1½

The scores for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

C. C. Burke, Jr., 106, 27-79; Mrs. N. P. Rogers, 100, 18-82. Olaf Saugstad, 92, 10 82; D. H. Rowland, 99, 15-84; Townsend Rushmore, 102, 18 84; Howard Huntington, 103, 15-88; Edward J. Patterson, 112, 24-88; Howard Wright, 90, 2 88; F. A. Clark, 106, 18-88; Dudley H. Barrows, 104, 15-89; W. L. Glenny, 89, 0 89; J. P. Murray, 104, 15-89; E. J. Waring, 103, 14-89; Thomas R. Van Boskerck, 100, 10 90; W. F. Murray, 106, 16-90; G. W. Taylor, 110, 20 90; F. C. Ard, 100, 8 92; Walter Peterson, 109, 15-94; C. W. Abbott, 102, 5 97; Evarts Tracy, 117, 18 99; F. W. Goddard, 129, 27-102; J. H. Comas, 121, 18-103.

FIFTY JOINED THE CHURCH.

TIME FOR MUCH REJOICING AT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Thirty-Eight Admitted on Confession of Faith And Twelve By Letter At Morning Service.

The celebration of the Lord's Supper at Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning was the occasion of much rejoicing on the part of the pastor and his congregation. There was a special significance to the service by reason of the fact that fifty persons were admitted to membership preceding the administering of the communion.

The entire service was unusually impressive. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, in the fore part of the service baptised twenty-one persons. When this ceremony was ended he read aloud the names of the applicants for church membership, and as he did so the candidates came forward and grouped themselves about the pulpit platform. There were fifty in all; thirty-eight on confession of faith and twelve by letter. To the right of the altar, facing this group, were the deacons of the church and to the left stood the elders.

The pastor, on behalf of the consistory, formally admitted the applicants to full membership in the church. He extended them a hearty welcome into the fold and incidentally gave them some timely advice based on the sayings of Christ.

Almost without exception everyone in the large congregation received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which was administered by the pastor assisted by the deacons. During the offertory Miss Minnie Williams sang with much expression a pleasing alto solo.

The unusual number that joined the church at this service has been the source of much favorable comment on the energetic Christian efforts exerted by the pastor and the members of the flock, who are endeavoring to increase the fold. A most gratifying feature in connection with the admission of these new members was the fact that many of them are pupils of the Sunday-school and several were also members of the Senior and Junior Endeavor societies of the church. Pastor Schenck and his consistory, as well as the congregation in general, feel very thankful for the way their work has been blessed.

AFTERNOON WEDDING AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH

Marriage of Miss Anna B. Cahoone to Robert H. McCready, of New York.

FINE CHURCH DECORATIONS

CEREMONY PERFORMED BY REV. DR. W. R. RICHARDS.

Those Who Composed the Bridal Party —Pretty Gowns of Bride and Bridemaids—Couple Will Live in Plainfield in Summer.

The marriage of Miss Anna Bowen Cahoone, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, of 1116 Watchung avenue, to Robert H. McCready, of New York, took place Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Crescent Avenue church, in the presence of nearly six hundred guests from this and other cities. It was the first of the June weddings and was carried out to perfection in every detail.

In the church, stately palms, towering over and amid the beautiful Easter lilies, with a profusion of southern smilax, were all arranged artistically and to the best advantage. An impressive altar, directly in front of the decorations, was arranged and here the ceremony was performed.

Preceding the arrival of the bridal party, Ward Stephens, organist, presented a delightful programme of classical selections. The party was prompt in arriving at the church and while the Mendelssohn wedding march was being rendered the march up the aisle took place.

Richard Roberts, Edwin Hills and McCready Sykes, of New York, three of the ushers, led the way, closely followed by the bridemaids, Miss Frances Cahoone, a sister of the bride, and Miss Janet N. Harris, of Syracuse, N. Y., a sister of the groom. Directly behind the bridemaids walked the three remaining ushers, Richards Cahoone, of Brooklyn, G. LeRoy Hallock and Walter Cahoone, the latter a brother of the bride, of this city. Then followed the maid-of-honor, Miss Elizabeth M. Cahoone, sister of the bride, who led the way for the bride. She was accompanied by her uncle, Andrew Cahoone, of Brooklyn. At the altar the party was met by the groom, who was attended by William Bunker, of New York, as best man.

With the bridal party grouped before him, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the church, performed in a very impressive manner, the nuptial ceremony, according to the Episcopal ritual. The bride was given away in marriage by her uncle, owing to the fact that her father was detained at home by illness. Then facing the assembled guests, the bride and groom led the way down the aisle, followed by the others of the bridal party.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where nearly two hundred guests gathered to shower their heartiest congratulations and good wishes upon the popular couple. The house was very prettily decorated with southern smilax, palms and Easter lilies, while in the dining room the table was adorned with white and pink carnations and smilax. The effect of the decorations was pleasing, the predominant colors being white and green.

The handsome gowns of the women in the bridal party attracted much attention. The bride was gowned in white crepe de chene, trimmed with lace and chiffon. She also wore a tulle veil and a beautiful spray of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and swansonia. The maid-of-honor's gown was of pink silk crepe, trimmed with chiffon and black velvet. She wore a large black hat and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas. The bridemaids were gowned in white silk mull, with pink sashes. They both wore large white hats and carried bouquets of sweet peas.

The gifts received by the bride and groom were numerous and very costly, comprising solid silverware, goldware, cut glass, furniture and a large collection of many other tokens of value. They were arraigned attractively in one of the rooms at the home, where they were seen by many admiring guests.

The bride and groom are both popular in a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Mr. McCready is engaged in the publishing business in New York. Both he and his wife are active in Christian work, being teachers in the Sunday-school at Hope chapel. After the reception they left the city to enjoy a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at the home of the bride's parents, 1126 Watchung avenue, during the summer season.

SORE AT HEART.

Young Kirkner Rode Into Wagon And Wrecked His Wheel.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Kirkner, of 929 Madison avenue, met with a collison Saturday afternoon while riding his bicycle on West Ninth street at the corner of Central avenue. He was riding pretty fast. When he reached the corner two young women in a light carriage came along. Young Kirkner was unable to stop quick enough to prevent a collision and he ran head on into the wagon, completely wrecking his wheel.

The boy was not injured, but he was sore at heart over his damaged wheel.

CHILDREN'S DAY EXERCISES.

HELD AT EAST THIRD STREET CHAPEL YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Address By Rev George Bowers, of Warrenville—Lesson Taught By Mrs. A. T. Pettit, of Elizabeth.

The Children's Day exercises, held in the East Third Street chapel yesterday afternoon, were well attended by the friends of that worthy institution, which is accomplishing much good work among the children in that vicinity. In charge of the services was L. W. Randolph, the superintendent.

Clifford A. Braider, the assistant superintendent, read the lesson for the day and Henry E. Needham offered prayer. An appropriate address was delivered by Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, and his remarks were followed by a selection sung by the pupils of the primary department under the capable supervision of Miss Alice Woodland. Preceding an interesting address by Mrs. Alonzo T. Pettit, of Elizabeth, a baritone solo was rendered by Charles L. Lewis.

Mrs. Pettit, who is the superintendent of the primary department of the Elizabeth Central Baptist church Sunday-school, explained to the children the lesson for the day in a manner that was especially attractive to them. It was an object lesson throughout and the little ones gave very intelligent answers to all the questions they were asked.

A violin solo by Clarence Mills, for which the latter's little brother acted as accompanist formed the concluding part of the programme.

A MUSICAL TREAT AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Enjoyable Concert Was Given By The Church Choir Saturday Evening.

OUTSIDE TALENT ASSISTED.

CHIEF SELECTION WAS GAUL'S "ISRAEL IN THE WILDERNESS."

Quartette Of Soloists Assisted By Chorus Of Twenty-Five—Several Short Numbers Made Up The First Part.

Local music lovers enjoyed a rare treat, Saturday evening, when the choir of the First Baptist church rendered its third private concert under the direction of Edward J. Fitzhugh, of Brooklyn. Relatives and friends of the members crowded the edifice and by hearty applause at frequent intervals showed their appreciation of the singers' efforts. The regular choir was assisted by an additional chorus of twenty-five voices, comprising some of Plainfield's ablest vocalists. Their work in the choruses was invaluable and added greatly to the pleasing effect. In addition to the organ and piano, the instrumental part of the programme was contributed by a string quartette composed of Otto K. Schill, first violin, Miss Dorothy Waldo, second violin, Fullerton Waldo, viola, and Dr. Leonard Waldo, violoncello. The accompanists were Howard M. Case, organ, and Miss Jessie M. Utter, piano.

The musicale was composed of two separate divisions, the first of which consisted of part songs and choruses. It opened with an organ selection "Grand Choir" by Cappieci. It was executed by Mr. Case in his customary thorough manner which showed his familiarity with the instrument. The Choral Hymn from Joh. Brhams, Op. 30, and the andante and variations in D. Minor by the string quartette were admirably rendered and long applauded finally bringing an encore.

In her rendition of "Just Judge of Heaven," by G. M. Garret, Mrs. Ferdinand Ward, contralto, sang with much feeling, giving much expression to the selection. It was one of the most pleasing numbers on the programme. Another excellent number was the part songs unaccompanied, "Good Night" and "How Sweet the Moonlight," in which the incidental solo was taken by Wm. H Holmes. The parts were all well balanced.

After two selections by the string quartette, part first concluded with "The Night is Calm and Cloudless," from Sullivan's "Golden Legend," by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano, assisted by the chorus. Miss Harris' sweet voice was never heard to better advantage. The difficult parts of the selection were given in a well modulated tone, which merited the generous applause contributed at the close.

Part second consisted of a cantata, Gaul's "Israel in the Wilderness," in which the solo parts were taken by Mrs. Ward, Miss Harris, Wm. H. Holmes and George H. Smith. Mr. Smith possesses a remarkably sweet tenor voice and the several solos devolving upon him were executed in a commendable manner. In the various parts of the cantata the work of both soloists and chorus harmonized perfectly and the result was most pleasing. The effect produced by the trio, Miss Harris, Mr. Smith and Mrs. Ward, was gratifying in the extreme.

The assisting chorus was composed of the following: Sopranos, Mrs. Robert Giddes, Mrs. Serrell and the Misses Ada Dunham, Etta Raybert, Carman, Runyon and Lowerie; altos, Mrs. J. H. VanWinkle, Miss Nan Randolph, Miss Bertha Needham and Miss Grace Bonney; tenors, Elmer Cutting, Wm. Douglas, Bradley Hall, Charles W. McCutchen, E. Maxwell Honeyman; basses, Oscar Moore, Stacy Raynolds, Wm. Taylor, Henry B. Drake, F. S. Cutter and Harry Weston.

DEMAND OF MACHINISTS GRANTED AT ONE SHOP.

Work Resumed At Aluminum Plate And Press Works On Nine Hour Schedule.

SOME QUESTIONS CONCEDED

ARRANGEMENT IS MADE TEMPORARILY UNTIL OTHER SHOPS SETTLE

Then a Contract Will Be Signed On The Same Terms As At The Others—Nothing New At Other Shops—Mr. Scott Will Not Talk.

After two weeks of idleness, brought about by the great machinists' strike, the one hundred machinists of the Aluminum Plate and Press Company resumed work this morning, their demands for a nine hour day with ten hours' pay having been granted mainly through the efforts of Superintendent Leary. In return for this chief concession the men have waived the points involving the rules for apprentices and pay for overtime. This is the first of the four local shops to grant the request for which thousands of machanics are fighting all over the country.

For the present, however, no contract will be signed by employers and employes, as the permanency of the settlement depends upon the action taken by the other shops. When they concede to the men's demands or make some arrangements for resuming work, Superintendent Leary will enter into a compact with his employes for the same terms made at the other shops, whether they are for fifty-four, fifty-five or fifty six hours a week with sixty hours' pay.

The first intimation that the Aluminum Company was disposed to grant the demands was learned when Superintendent Leary made a proposition Saturday for the men to return to work on a fifty-five hour a week schedule with sixty hours' pay and time and a quarter for overtime. The committee was unable to agree to the terms, but wired Grand Master O'Connell as to what course to pursue. Before an answer was received, Mr. Leary announced the company's accession to the original request on the terms mentioned. The officials of the International Association of Machinists immediately sanctioned the agreement and the men were notified to appear for work this morning. Whether the employes are to work on a schedule which will permit of a Saturday half holiday will be decided upon later.

Another week has rolled around and still there is no chance in the situation at Scott's Press Works. Further than this the owner of the plant states that matters may remain as they are for a month or so. He is as determined as ever apparently to stand by his guns and not concede an inch from his original stand.

When questioned as to his views on the agreement reached by the Aluminum Plate and Press Works and its employes, Mr. Scott declined to discuss the matter. His only knowledge of the new situation there comes from public report and at any rate he will not talk on matters pertaining to the other shops. "There is no concerted action," he said.

The shop committee met Mr. Scott Saturday afternoon, but the interview was without any results.

FRIGHTENED AT BELL.

Hackmen John Kelley's Horse Did Stunts And Kelly Himself Was Seriously Injured.

McCready Sykes, who was one of the ushers at the Cahoone-McCready wedding Saturday afternoon, caused a sensation by riding to the station on his wheel ahead of the bridal party. He carried a large dinner bell which he rang loudly.

When opposite the home of I. C. Pierson, he met John Kelly, a hackman, of New street, driving in the opposite direction. Kelly's horse became frightened and fell down. Kelly was thrown over the dashboard to the ground, and after being kicked by the horse he was run over by the wagon. His injuries comprise bruises, cuts and it is feared he was injured internally. He is now detained at home and it will be some days before he will be able to be out.

Struck on Eyelid by Spark.

While at work in his blacksmith shop on Somerset street last Wednesday a spark from a red hot horse shoe struck Horace J. Martin on his lower right eyelid causing much pain. Mr. Martin has suffered considerably from the injury, but is able to attend to business.

SEA GIRT ENCAMPMENT.

ORDERS TO BE ISSUED FOR SUMMER SERVICE OF FIRST BRIGADE.

Gen. Wanser Arranges Details—Grounds In Fine Condition—Pay The Same As Before

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, June 3 — Orders will shortly be issued for the summer encampment of the National Guard at Sea Girt, which begins July 13. Gen. Wanser was in Trenton recently arranging the details.

This year it will be the turn of the First Brigade, comprising the First and Fourth Regiments, Battery A Field Artillery, of Newark; First Troop of Newark, and the Signal Corps of Jersey City, to camp, the Second Brigade having used the Sea Girt grounds last season. It will be the first camp since the organization of the wigwaggers, or Signal Corps.

The First Regiment, with the First Troop, will enter camp on Saturday, July 13, and remain until Saturday, July 20. As the First Regiment marches out of Sea Girt, the Fourth will take its place and will remain in camp until July 27. The members of the Signal Corps and the battery will probably be detailed off between the two weeks.

The Sea Girt grounds are in better condition this year than even last when they were supposed to be as fine as they could be made. The buildings have all been repainted and the grounds given a general overhauling and cleaning up. The drill grounds have been levelled off and will be in good shape for marching and manoeuvres.

It has been stated that an act passed by the last Legislature changed the rate of pay for the National Guard men during camp service. This, however, is untrue. The pay will be the same as last year, or $1.50 per day for privates and corporals; $1.75 for company sergeants; $2 for non-commissioned staffofficers; $2 50 for lieutenants; $3 for cartains; $4 for field officers, except colonels; $5 for colonels, and $6 for the brigadier-general.

A BRAIN TESTER.

An Iowa Professor Has Invented a Wonderful Instrument.

IOWA CITY, Ia., June 3.—"Are you bright?" and "What are you good for?" are vital questions to every one, says Dr. Carl E. Deashore of the University of Iowa, who has invented a testing machine called the "psychergograph," which will answer the questions in a scientific manner. It consists of two parts, one looking like a typewriter and the other like the graphic recording apparatus of a telegraph instrument. Its operation is simple, the closing of an electric key and pressing of a clock lever being all that is necessary to start the apparatus, which works automatically.

The person to be tested takes a seat in front of the instrument and places a finger on each of the four keys, one after another, as in typewriting. Each key is labeled with a color. The key of the color touched by the person being tested is touched by the operator and by electrical action the color in the slot is immediately changed.

The other part of the psychergograph, by means of five pencils working on a continuous paper tape, records the amount of work done, the time required for each action and the quality of the work. Dr. Deashore says of his invention: "It is not a mind gauge which measures the whole mind, but the power to do certain kinds of mental work may be measured correctly by it, such as attention, discrimination, perception, sensation and voluntary action."

Ex-Army Officer In Trouble.

BUTTE, Mon., June 3.—Lieutenant John M. Neill, an ex-officer of the regular army stationed at the Presidio, near San Francisco, has been arrested here by a deputy United States marshal on instructions from San Francisco, charging him with forgery of vouchers in the army three years ago. He was practically dismissed from the army three years ago on a charge of having been implicated in some alleged peculations at the Presidio, but the shortage was made good, and nothing further was heard of the affair until the arrest. Neill says he is innocent of the charge of forgery. He has a wife and several children residing in Oakland, Cal. His wife is highly connected socially on the coast. For a year Neill has been in the employ of the Anaconda Mining company as an engineer. He will be taken to San Francisco.

Cause of Suicide a Mystery.

RIDGEWOOD, N. J., June 3.—Stephen W. Young, whose suicide is reported from Baltimore, formerly lived here. His brother, George Young, is a resident of this place. Stephen lived here in 1899 and went to Baltimore about a year ago. He had been filling a good position in New York and went to Baltimore to take a better one. While at Ridgewood he was a leader in church work, was of a happy disposition and a leader in social affairs. He was engaged to marry a young lady here. The wedding was to have taken place during the present month, and the arrangements had been made. She is prostrated over the news. Mr. Young was born in Owego, N. Y., and the body will be sent there for interment.

Seventy Persons Perished.

OAXACA, Tex., June 3.—Further details of the great fire which raged on the isthmus of Tehuantepec for several days have been received here. Over 70 persons were burned to death. The fire started on a coffee plantation. Owing to the dryness of the vegetation it was soon beyond control and did great damage to growing crops. Many thousands of acres of coffee trees, bananas, orange trees and other tropical products were destroyed. A number of plantation buildings were burned. Those who met death were all families of plantation laborers, who perished in their huts. The fire burned for ten days and was finally quenched by a heavy tropical rain.

Robbers Fire Texas Town.

BEAUMONT, Tex., June 3.—The town of Jasper, about 100 miles north of this city, on the Gulf, Beaumont and Kansas City Railroad extension, has been destroyed by fire. The damage amounts to over $100,000 and includes the entire business portion of the town. Seventeen houses in all were destroyed, but so far as can be learned here no lives were lost. The fire was the work of robbers, who blew open and rifled the safes in the postoffice and in the county treasurer's office. It cannot be learned exactly how much money the robbers obtained, but it is probable that the amount was large, as the county carries much cash on hand at this time of the year.

Sampson's Face on the Medal.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Friends of Rear Admiral Sampson have been victorious in their efforts to induce the naval board on awards to recommend to Secretary Long that the profile of the rear admiral be placed on the medal to be awarded to officers and men who took part in the Santiago campaign. This disposes of previous reports in circulation in the navy department that the board had yielded to the views put forth by Rear Admiral Schley's partisans and, to prevent further discussion, had definitely determined not to place Rear Admiral Sampson's portrait on the medal.

Son Drowned, Father Saved.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 3.—While Milton Morgan and his 12-year-old son Martin were fishing from a boat on Pamapo creek, near Tuxedo Park, the boat was overturned, and the boy was drowned. The father, overcome with exhaustion, sank to the bottom in attempting to reach the shore, but finally crawled up the bank on his hands and knees.

Machinists Returning to Work.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Some of the striking machinists are already returning to work. The employees of five members of the Chicago Machinery Manufacturers' association who refused to sign the agreement submitted by the union have agreed to accept a slight increase in wages.

Nine Injured by a Collision.

M'KEESPORT, Pa., June 3.—By a collision between a car on the United Traction company's line and a train on the McKeesport and Belle Vernon branch of the Pittsburg and Lake Erie railroad at McKeesport nine people were more or less seriously injured, one perhaps fatally.

Fire In Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, June 3.—Fire in the four story building at 413 Delaware street, occupied by the Western Stores company, caused a loss of $60,000, one third of which was on the building.

TRADE WITH FRANCE

American Tools and Machinery Largely Used.

CONSULS GIVE INTERESTING FACTS.

Locomotives Made In This Country Are Making Record Time, and Our Farming Implements Find Ready Sale.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—In a further series of extracts from the forthcoming volume 2 of commercial relations dealing with United States trade in France Consul Brittain of Nantes notes the development of the trade in American machinery in western France. During the past season, he says, about 800 reapers, mowers and horse hayrakes arrived at that port. American mowers give good satisfaction, and the increased prices asked for farm labor will stimulate the sale of such machinery in the future. The American mower was a common sight in the hayfields last summer. In regard to the advantage gained by exhibiting machines the consul says:

"Last month a representative of a New England factory made an exhibition of meat choppers in one of the Nantes stores, and during the afternoon about 20 of various sizes were sold. The Nantes house has since sold more than 200 of these machines.

"If some company were to make an exhibit of wringers and show their working, I am satisfied it would be found a profitable enterprise. There are no wringers sold or offered for sale here, with the exception of a few heavy English machines."

Consul Covert of Lyons says:

"The houses of this district which some years ago furnished fine French hardware to the United States have almost entirely lost that trade within the last two decades, and they are enabled to hold their own market here only by a protective tariff. American stoves, base burners and smaller heating stoves find a steady market here, the French makers being unable to replace them.

"American saws and other woodcutting instruments are pronounced the best in the world, because Americans are the greatest wood using people. American wrenches are seen in some stores, but the German article is the most common on account of its cheapness. Agricultural implements of American pattern and bearing an American name are met with in every county fair and are highly prized. They are often made in France on account of the high tariff duty. Farmers tell me that they prefer to buy the Ohio or Illinois harvesting and haying machines, notwithstanding the increased cost."

Consul Tourgee of Bordeaux says:

"The fastest time made by any railway, it is said, is on the road between this city and Bayonne, where a run of 123 miles is made every day in 128 minutes. It is quite to the credit of American mechanics that the honor of making this run is accorded to American locomotives."

The consul notes as a curious fact that one of the chief exports from Bordeaux to the United States consists of preserved forms of alimentary products which are grown in the greatest abundance in the United States and are often of much superior quality. Prominent among these are canned or bottled peas and string beans. There is not a particle of difference between them and the products of American gardens, continues Mr. Tourgee, except that the French beans and peas are of the smallest varieties and are put up while they are but half matured and very soft; also they are packed with great attention to artistic effect. The cans are not filled by machinery, and the vegetables are not handled with a scoop shovel. Everything is done by hand and the wages of the girls who do this work depends as much on the appearance of the bottles as on the number filled.

Mr. Frank H. Hitchcock, chief of the foreign markets section of the agricultural department, has prepared a comprehensive article on the growth of the trade between the United States and the Scandinavian countries—Denmark, Sweden and Norway—during the ten years from 1890 to 1900, inclusive. It shows that in the ten years subsequent to 1890 our exports to these three countries rose from $9,000,000 to nearly $29,000,000. Our imports from Scandinavia are very small, being below $4,000,000 in 1890 and only a little more than $5,000,000 in 1900, which was the record year in imports.

An Honest Man Wanted.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Mrs. Nancy B. Irving, a book publisher, has started out to emulate Diogenes in her search for an honest man. She believes it is an impossibility to live a strictly honest business or professional life under the present conditions of society. To prove the point Mrs. Irving offers to deposit $1,000 in a Chicago bank, which will be paid to the first business or professional man who can prove conclusively that he has carried on his work for a month without lying. She is anxious to prove the point because of a book she has in view.

Havana Elections.

HAVANA, June 3.—The predictions of the Havana Nationalists concerning the outcome of Saturday's municipal elections are verified. Senor Miguel Gener, the Nationalist candidate, was elected mayor of Havana, receiving 11,115 votes as against 7,533 cast for Senor Mora, Republican, and 3,211 cast for Senor Carlos Garcia, the candidate of the Democratic party. The Nationalists elected 18 members of the municipal council, the Republicans 4 and the Democrats 2.

Purchase by Mr. Harriman.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 3.—E. H. Harriman has purchased the Josiah K. Mead tract, consisting of hundreds of acres of wild land west of Tuxedo. It is now inhabited by hundreds of squatters. Mr. Harriman has notified the squatters to vacate, and he will improve the land for park purposes.

Boiler Makers Win.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., June 3.—The strike of the boiler makers of the Pennsylvania Engineering works of this city for a nine hour day for ten hours' pay has been declared off, with a victory for the men. The strike has been on nearly a month.

A Reward For Lynchers.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3.—Governor Gage has offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of the persons implicated in the lynching of the five men at Lookout, Modoc county, Friday last.

GRADUAL TRANSFER.

Chinese to Be Given Control at Peking Piecemeal.

THE GERMANS EVACUATING RAPIDLY.

Count Von Waldersee and Staff Leave Today For Taku—An Extraordinary Quantity of Baggage—Prince Chun Expresses Thanks.

PEKING, June 3.—At a meeting of the generals of the allied troops yesterday it was decided to transfer the administration of the city of Peking to the Chinese officials gradually during June.

Count von Waldersee, accompanied by his staff, will leave Peking today. Two special trains will run all the week, taking troops to Taku. The Germans are removing an extraordinary quantity of baggage, including Chinese carts, jinrikishas, tables and chairs.

The Baluchi regiment left amid impressive ceremonies of farewell. All the other British troops, with their bands, and all the American officers in Peking were present, the Americans being particularly anxious to show their appreciation of the manner in which the British bade farewell to the American troops.

In the course of an interview Prince Chun, brother of the emperor, said:

"I wish to thank you in the name of the throne, myself and the Chinese people for the benevolent attitude which the American government and the American people have observed toward China throughout these months of trial and uncertainty.

"We are all animated with the hope of some day reciprocating the generous feelings by which your government has throughout the negotiations been inspired.

"I feel confident that had Chinese statesmen known the western world better and the statesmen of the west been better acquainted with the actual conditions in China much that we both regret might have been avoided.

"With better knowledge and closer intercourse the time may come yet when all nations shall live together as brothers."

To Annex Hainan.

LONDON, June 3.—"I am informed," says the Hongkong correspondent of The Times, wiring Saturday, "that the French intend to annex Hainan in July."

Shot His Daughter's Lover.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 3.—Owen Logan, a young stockman of Arkoenne, Mo., was fatally shot while calling on Miss Jessie Walker near Maryville by the young woman's father. Logan was paying attention to Miss Walker. The father objected and, it is said, had made frequent threats that he would kill Logan if he did not cease his attentions. Logan was standing at the gate of the Walker premises talking to Miss Walker when the father came suddenly upon them and, bringing a shotgun to his shoulder, discharged its contents into the young man's body. Logan is a nephew of Sheriff Collins, and immediately after the shooting he was removed to the home of the latter. Walker gave himself up and is in jail.

Large Sale of Coal Lands.

BERLIN, Pa., June 3.—The W. K. Niver company, the recent purchasers of 15,000 acres of coal under lands adjoining Berlin, have purchased 90 acres of land two miles southeast of Berlin of John and C. W. Landis, upon which to erect houses for employees and sink a 350 foot shaft to the coal. A railroad spur will be built from the Berlin branch to the scene of operations upon a line recently surveyed by Baltimore and Ohio engineers. F. F. Forhr of Pittsburg, manager of the Somerset County Smokeless Coal company, signed an agreement last week to pay his men 55 cents per ton, the district price for digging coal, thus ending a strike of two months' standing.

Baldwin Makes Farewell Visit.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, commander of the expedition for the discovery of the north pole, left last night over the Pennsylvania railroad for Chicago, St. Louis and other points in the west. "I shall return to New York in about ten days," said Mr. Baldwin. "The object of my present trip west is to pay a farewell visit to my parents and friends. I expect to leave New York for Dundee on either the 12th or 13th of the month to assume command of the expedition scheduled to leave Tromso, Norway, on the 25th. I am not at liberty to announce the personnel of my party at this time, but will do so before I leave New York for my polar trip."

First Agnostic Marriage.

CINCINNATI, June 3.—The first agnostic marriage in this country occurred here yesterday and formed the closing feature of the agnostic Sunday school that has been established here. The contracting parties were Frederick Federle and Miss Martha Seaman. Justice Alexander Roebling performed the legal part of the ceremony, after which both parties made their pledges, including one not to resist divorce proceedings. The bride also repeated the words, "Should I discover that we are uncongenial or mismated, I hereby pledge that I will not bear children that are not born of affection."

Three Men Killed by a Train.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., June 3.—Three young men were struck by an east bound fast mail train on the Lake Shore at Northeast, Pa. One of them was instantly killed, and the other two were so badly injured that they died a short time after the accident. The three men were unmarried and had been employed as farm hands near Northeast.

Shot His Little Brother.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 3.—Walter Greer, aged 9 years, in play pointed a double barreled shotgun at his 7-year-old brother Harold at his home near Pleasant Valley, and when he pulled the trigger the contents of the shell were emptied into the breast of the little fellow. He lived ten minutes.

Anarchists Released.

MADRID, June 3.—The two anarchists, a Spaniard and an Italian, arrested here as the result of advices from the Marseilles police that they had projects against the Spanish ministers have been liberated owing to lack of proof that the police suspicions were justified.

Weather Probabilities.

Showers, brisk south to west winds.

THE GOVERNOR SCORED.

Senator Tillman Refuses to Withdraw His Resignation.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 3.—Senator Tillman has declined to withdraw his resignation and charges that Governor McSweeney exceeded his authority in returning the resignations to the senators.

Senator Tillman has written an open letter to the governor, in which he says in part:

"Your excellency of course has the right and it is entirely proper to return my resignation and advise more serious consideration.

"In declining to accept I am sure you have transcended your authority. It will take very little investigation and reflection to convince you of this. You cannot compel a member of the United States senate to hold his commission and exercise the functions of that office if he chooses to surrender it.

"Personally I had nothing to gain and everything to lose, and I do not feel the need of further instructions or vindication, because I had just been re-elected by the people with practical unanimity. I offered to resign in order to bring about the resignation of my colleague and thus put us on a level, with equal rights, to go before the people and ask an indorsement of our respective courses."

Commission's Final Trial.

MANILA, June 3.—The United States Philippine commission tomorrow will begin its final provincial tours. It will first organize Manila and Morong into one province, and next Cavite will be organized. Laguna will be temporarily omitted on account of the continuance of rebellions there. The commission will then go overland to Nueva Ecija and, returning to Manila, will proceed by steamer to Zambales, Union, Ilocos and Cayagan and thence down the Grand river on to Isabella and Nueva Viscayas. The only coast provinces to be omitted are Infanta and Principe. In the meanwhile Commissioners Worcester and Moses will proceed over the new government road to Benguet, Bontoc and Lepanto, cross the country and join the others. On their way they will prepare distinct governments in Bontoc and Lepanto. The commission will reach Manila June 20.

Sunday at the Exposition.

BUFFALO, June 3.—The exhibit buildings at the Pan-American exposition had their first open Sunday yesterday. While the gates have been open every Sunday from 1 p. m. until 10 p. m., the exhibit structures have been closed to the public. The Midway shows and the government buildings were closed. The weather was changeable. Dawn came in a drizzle. The later morning saw feeble sunshine. Noon brought a hailstorm, with thunder and lightning. When the gates opened at 1 p. m., there was sunshine. At 2:30 there was a heavy fall of rain. At 4 o'clock the sky cleared again, and the weather, though cool, was pleasant for the rest of the day. The Seventy-fourth regiment band gave a sacred concert during the afternoon at the plaza. Last evening in the Temple of Music Organist W. P. Stanley of Brooklyn gave a recital, which was well attended.

Heavy Storm Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, June 3.—One of the heaviest spring storms known to the government weather bureau here passed over this section yesterday. Much damage was done, and four people were badly hurt during the storm. The storm lasted only 15 minutes, but during that time three-tenths of an inch of rain fell, heavy hail ruined many trees, and the wind blew down several small houses. At Whittaker, near Homestead, a partly finished store and dwelling was wrecked, burying in the ruins three boys and a man, all of whom were badly hurt. The man, Daniel Martin, may die from the effects of the injuries to his head and spine. The boys—George Marley, aged 15 years; Frank Sturgiss, 13, and Daniel Ashton, 16—when dug out of the ruins were in bad shape, but all will recover.

Fifteen Fishermen Drowned.

CHARLESTON, June 3.—Fifteen fishermen have been drowned in a squall which blew up while the mosquito fleet of fishing boats was anchored off the "Eastern Patches." There were eight boats fishing at the time. The storm scattered them to the four winds, and all save three have been accounted for. The missing boats are the Anna Julia, Messenger Boy and Knife. There were 15 men on the three boats. When the disaster was reported, the revenue cutter Forward went to sea and skirted for 30 miles around the lightship, but came back with the report that not a sign of life or a disabled boat could be seen.

A Shipbuilding Scheme.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—It is reported that a company with a capital of at least $3,000,000 is being organized to build another shipbuilding plant on the Delaware river. The promoters of the company say that $2,600,000 has already been subscribed, and they have optioned a plot of ground at Chester, Pa., where it is proposed to build the plant. One of the leading factors in the new concern, according to the report, is State Senator W. C. Sproul of Delaware county, a son-in-law of the late John Roach, who represents the largest investors.

Unveiling Postponed.

BERLIN, June 3.—It is now announced that the ceremony of unveiling the Bismarck monument, which was originally fixed for today, but postponed owing to the death of Count Wilhelm von Bismarck, will take place June 16.

NAME FOR THE PRINCESS.

The Latest Italian Royal Personage to Be Called Yolando Margherita.

ROME, June 3.—Both Queen Helena and the little baby princess born Saturday morning are doing well.

The princess will be named Yolanda Margherita.

Amid general congratulations there is considerable disappointment at the infant's sex, though the king is understood to have expressed contentment. Salutes are being fired throughout Italy. The infant's nurse, besides receiving liberal pay and a pension, will get $2,000 with the baby's first tooth, another $2,000 when the child is able to speak and a similar sum when the little princess is able to walk unsupported.

Flags are floating from the palace and all the public buildings, and the church bells throughout the country are pealing.

Yesterday was the national fete day, and large crowds witnessed a review of the troops by King Victor Emmanuel, who was enthusiastically received.

Suspected Husband Arrested.

KANSAS CITY, June 3.—W. H. Klensmire, whose wife was found murdered near their home at Holton, Kan., buried in a shallow trench, has been arrested in Kansas City, Kan. Marks on the body, which is believed to have been buried since May 19, indicated that her skull had been crushed with a club, and suspicion was directed against the husband, who disappeared on that date. When arrested, Klensmire was at the station waiting to take a train, as he said, for Holton. When told that he was wanted on suspicion of murdering his wife, he refused for a time to talk. Then he declared that his wife had committed suicide on May 12. On the following morning, he said, when he found the body hanging from the rafters in their house he took it to the trench and buried it. Klensmire denied that he had murdered his wife, and after making this brief admission he refused to talk further. He was taken to Topeka.

King Edward's Reception.

LONDON, June 3.—The Daily Telegraph, in the course of an editorial upon King Edward's reception of the visiting delegation from the New York Chamber of Commerce Saturday, says: "It stamped the royal seal upon a national welcome. There could have been no more fortunate suggestion at the outset of this remarkable visit of the true spirit in which American business rivalry is regarded in Great Britain." The paper advocates as one of the best means of meeting this friendly rivalry that British employers and workmen alike should visit the United States and observe for themselves American business methods, and it declares that "the fact of the two countries being so indispensable to each other makes all plans of a European industrial coalition against the United States an idle dream so far as any British participation is concerned."

Subway Strike Almost Over.

NEW YORK, June 3.—With the unanimous vote of the delegates who attended the meeting of the Central Federated union to "reconsider the action taken by the meeting on the previous Sunday and to give the committee on rapid transit full power to effect a settlement," the strike on the rapid transit tunnel virtually is brought to an end. The committee last week reported that it had reached an agreement with the subcontractors for which approval was asked, but the meeting wished to add two riders to this agreement. It was finally decided to remove these added clauses and to instruct the committee to come to terms on the basis of the original and unamended agreement.

A Babcock Memorial Service.

BALTIMORE, June 3.—Impressive services were held in Music hall yesterday afternoon in memory of the late Rev. Dr. M. D. Babcock, pastor of Brick Presbyterian church, New York, and former pastor of Brown Memorial Presbyterian church in this city. Many persons were turned away, unable to gain admission to the big hall. Rev. J. T. Stone, who succeeded Dr. Babcock as pastor of Brown Memorial church, presided over the exercises.

Methodist Divine Dead.

CINCINNATI, June 3.—Rev. Thomas H. Pearne, aged 81 years and for 61 years a minister in the Methodist church, is dead at his home here. He held many prominent positions in the church and was United States consul in the British West Indies during part of his missionary service. He was the author of several standard books published by the Methodist Book Concern and had just completed his autobiography.

Drowned In Lake Ontario.

OSWEGO, N. Y., June 3.—Rowland Guiles, aged 17, and another boy, supposed to be George Andelfinger, were drowned in Lake Ontario by the capsizing of a canvas canoe. The lookout of the saving station saw the boat go over in a squall. The boys clung to the overturned canoe for ten minutes and then sank. The accident occurred off this city and two and a half miles from shore.

A Fat Railway Job.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3.—The Call says that J. C. Stubbs, traffic manager of the Southern Pacific, who is now in New York, has been offered the position of commissioner of the transcontinental roads by eastern railway magnates. The commissioner will represent the Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific. The salary will be $50,000 a year.

Ship and Crew Lost.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3.—From a letter from Captain Lewis of the ship Elwell, at Newcastle, N. S. W., it is learned that the missing American ship John McDonald was sighted a few hundred miles southwest of San Francisco Jan. 18 and that she signaled that the ship was on fire. It is believed that she blew up and all hands were lost.

Wages Voluntarily Advanced.

STRENGTH IS FAILING

Mrs. McKinley's Continued Weakness Causes Alarm.

PHYSICIANS HOLD OUT LITTLE HOPE.

The President a Close Watcher at the Bedside of His Sick Companion—Many Callers Make Anxious Inquiries.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Mrs. McKinley continues very weak. Her condition is not greatly changed from that of Sunday, but each day that elapses without a gain in strength lessens her powers of recuperation. The complaint which came near ending her life in San Francisco is still present. It is in a slightly less aggravated form, but gives the physicians and the president much concern. Mrs. McKinley has shown remarkable vitality, but her illness has so reduced her strength as to leave her very feeble indeed. It is feared that unless a change for the better soon manifests itself her strength may become so near exhausted as to leave her without rallying power. The news given out by the physicians in attendance is not reassuring, though hope of better things still continues.

Dr. Rixey called last evening and spent some time with the patient. In response to inquiries from time to time the statement was made that there had been no change in the condition of the distinguished sufferer.

President McKinley spent most of the day at the bedside of his wife, though late in the afternoon he went out for an hour's drive. He departed alone, but met Judge Watson of Ohio, an old friend, on the way, and the latter accompanied him to the White House.

There were many callers at the White House during the day and evening, making anxious inquiries regarding Mrs. McKinley. With few exceptions they simply left their cards after being assured by the doorkeepers that there was no change in Mrs. McKinley's condition.

Many Shipwrecks In May.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The month of May, like other months of the present year, had an unusual record of marine casualties. In all there were more than 150 disasters of various kinds, ranging from total losses by fire, stranding and gale to lost spars, small boats and sails. As on land, May was not a mild month on the Atlantic by any means, and the insurance underwriters, who thought that the late spring at least would bring them immunity from any further extensive losses, were disappointed. In the past months there were no great storms like the one of November, 1899, but there was a steady record of losses which have proved a great drain upon the underwriters. In the last ten days of May alone over 65 casualties were reported, and in many cases vessels and their cargoes carried heavy insurance.

Big Strike Begun.

HOLYOKE, Mass., June 3.—Today inaugurated the first complete day of the big strike. There are nearly 3,000 operatives out from the various mills which have not agreed to the strikers' demands. Meetings of the firemen were held, and it was voted to call a meeting of the women operatives for tomorrow evening, at which time a union will be instituted. Pickets have been posted at all of the mills, but no serious trouble is anticipated. The state board of arbitration is expected in the city to make an attempt to adjust the difficulties. A member of the American Writing Paper company said that that company would do nothing for some time regarding the strike, as the firemen give them until July 8 to answer their demands.

Chilean Congress Opens.

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 3.—Owing to the illness of President Errazuriz the Chilean congress was opened by Vice President Zanartu. The opening was attended by the members of the diplomatic corps. The message of the executive authorities was optimistic and elaborate. Chile's foreign relations were therein described as cordial and satisfactory, while the country was declared to be at peace with her neighboring republics. The general conditions of Chile were also said to be good.

Fire In Quincy, Ills.

QUINCY, Ills., June 3.—Fire destroyed the wholesale house of the Tenk Hardware company and damaged Crooks & Cox, wholesale milliners; Yeast Clothing company and Giles Bros., music dealers. The fire started from an electric wire in the second story of the Tenk building, and George Schlag, chief of the fire department, was shocked and badly burned by the current. The loss on the Tenk building is $15,000, on the stock of the Tenk company $55,000.

Annexation to Greece Favored.

KHANIA, Island of Crete, June 3.—Prince George of Greece, the high commissioner, opened the session of the assembly in the presence of the consular corps. A great demonstration was made throughout the city. The deputies passed a resolution in favor of annexation of the island to Greece.

Ice Threatens Shipping.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 3.—The Allan line steamer Sicilian, from Glasgow, which arrived here, reports immense ice floes 200 miles off the coast drifting south into the track of transatlantic shipping. The floes are studded with great icebergs, which are particularly dangerous to ocean steamers.

Saxon Won French Derby.

PARIS, June 3.—The Prix du Jockey club (French Derby), of $27,540, for 3-year-olds, distance one and a half miles, was run yesterday at Chantilly and was won by Saxon, Jean Part II being second and Tibere third. Thirteen horses ran. The victory of the favorite was very popular.

Spanish Liberals Are Ahead.

MADRID, June 3.—The elections for the renewal of the elective half of the senate were held yesterday, with the result that the Liberals elected 117 of their candidates and the Conservatives 56. The various other parties will be represented by 24 members.

Military Attaches Withdrawn.

Mayor Smalley's Stand.

Mayor N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, has come out emphatically in favor of street signs for the borough. Furthermore, His Honor has announced that he wants to see them put up at once. While all the members of the Borough Council have not been interviewed on the subject, there is no doubt but that a large majority, if not all of them, are heartily in favor of the signs.

Owing to the expense which the borough is under for the Somerset street improvement, it was believed by some that Mayor Smalley would hesitate about incurring any more bills against North Plainfield, even for such necessary things as street signs. Mayor Smalley has no hesitancy in saying, however, that he is greatly in favor of the street signs and will use his influence to see the borough properly equipped with them without delay.

It is not the first time that His Honor has had the subject under consideration. When first elected he visited Summit and saw the street signs there which are similar to those used in this city. He was greatly pleased with them and wanted to see North Plainfield possess signs just as good. Now that the subject has been generally agitated, the Mayor is ready and willing to join forces with the other advocates of the street signs. He has also stated that the subject will be brought to the attention of the Borough Council at the next meeting Friday evening.

Every thinking citizen of North Plainfield will commend the action of the Mayor and Borough Council if provision is made at once for the purchase of street signs for the borough similar to those now to be seen on this side of the brook. A single visit to Plainfield will convince anyone of the efficiency of Plainfield's signs and show, by comparison, the need of having them in the borough.

It is not until residents of New Jersey get beyond the bounds of this State that they begin to realize what an excellent reputation the public schools of New Jersey possess. There is no doubt but that they rank very high among the various States. Visitors to the Pan American Exposition will have an opportunity of seeing something of New Jersey's work along educational lines in the particularly fine exhibit which has been prepared from the schools all over this State. There is no doubt but that the showing made by New Jersey in that direction will not be excelled by any other State in the union.

Not the least among those who have suffered from the remarkably cool and wet weather of the spring has been the trolley company. When the days are warm and dry the crowds throng the open cars at night in an effort to find relief from the general oppressiveness. There has been but comparatively little business for the open cars, however, during the last month, and the income of the trolley company must have been considerably reduced in consequence.

The successor to the late H. P. Baldwin, as general passenger agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, has been selected. Charles Morrison Burt, who has been the assistant passenger and ticket agent of the Boston and Main Railroad, is the man chosen. Plainfielders will be particularly interested to see whether the new official will make any radical changes in the local service and arrangements.

A radical change is to be made in the musial part of the services at the Congregational church. Heretofore there has been only congregational singing led by a precentor. Now a regular choir master has been engaged and a double quartette choir will be a regular feature of the services.

So much rain must break the heart of the driver of the sprinkling cart for he has not had an opportunity for some time to flood the streets. Street Commissioner Gavett has promised, however, that the ordinance regarding careful street sprinkling will be carefully enforced hereafter.

The regular June meeting of the Common Council will take place this evening. While there are several subjects of general interest to come up before the City Fathers, nothing of a sensational nature will probably be introduced.

Mayor N. B. Smalley of the borough and the Plainfield Water Supply Company are not on the best of terms at present. This may bring the municipal ownership agitation in the borough to a head sooner than was expected.

The June weddings have begun. Several more will take place this week.

MR. HOLMES IN CHARGE.

Alfred E. Holmes Sang Solo at Congregational Church Yesterday.

Alfred E. Holmes, of New York, who has been selected by the trustees of the Congregational church to take charge of the music, made his first appearance in that capacity at the services yesterday morning. Mr. Holmes sang, as a solo, a selection from the oratorio of "Elijah," in a manner that gave evidence of his ability as a vocalist. It is his intention to organize and train a choir of eight voices which will hereafter sing at all the church services.

Fine Platform Orator.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church has succeeded in securing Rev. L. R. Scudder, M. D., of India, to speak to the Band Friday evening. Dr. Scudder is a very able, entertaining speaker and those who listen to his address Friday evening will be thoroughly entertained and instructed. Everybody welcome.

Outing for Sewing School.

The children of the sewing school of Warren chapel, of North Plainfield, had a most delightful outing Saturday when forty of them were taken for the day to Recreation Park, near Westfield. Miss Phebe Lovell, of Crescent avenue, is at the head of the school, and assisted by the teachers, gave the children this rare treat.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, June 3—In a very quiet manner, Miss Pauline Kratzel, of the borough, and Harry Zimmerman, of Elizabeth, were united in marriage at the parsonage of the Methodist church Wednesday evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. K. Doolittle in the presence of several intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman have taken up their residence for the present with the bride's parents.

Saturday being the first clear day of any consequence in several weeks the bowling green at Scheplin's was crowded all the afternoon. A large number of members of the Middlesex Bowling Association from the borough and New Brunswick were in attendance and a number of games were rolled.

Rev. A. F. Todd, of the borough, was in charge of the preparatory service Saturday and assisted in the communion service yesterday at the Reformed church, of Millstone.

The shoot of the Dunellen Gun Club held Saturday was well attended, but no exceptional scores were made. It is the intention of the members to hold another shoot in a short time.

The regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council will be held this evening. It is expected several matters of importance will be considered.

A meeting of the trustees of Holy Innocents church will be held at the residence of W. G. Vance this evening. A full attendance is requested.

Hudson Wilcox, son of Councilman Fred Wilcox, left this morning for Batavia, N. Y. It is his intention to remain until next December.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence.)

Scotch Plains, June 3—The Board of Education has arranged to close the public schools Wednesday, June 12. In a few days it will be decided whether the exercises will be held on that date or the following day. There will be two graduates, Miss Mary Westcott and Miss Muriel Robinson. Miss Westcott will enter Peddie Institute at Hightstown in the fall, and Miss Robinson will also enter a higher institution of learning, yet to be decided upon. There has been some little misunderstanding regarding the teaching force at the school. John Morey, the principal, does not expect to return next year, and Miss Seber, one of the teachers, who resigned a few weeks ago to accept a position as teacher in New York, will not return. Her place is now filled by Miss Palmborg, of Plainfield. The other teachers are expected to teach next year.

The services at the Baptist church yesterday morning and evening were well attended and Pastor Shott delivered two interesting discourses. At the evening services there was special music, when Mrs. Maguire sang a pleasing solo.

Good order prevailed yesterday and there was practically nothing for the special policemen to do but walk about. No disorder of any kind was discovered, which is probably due to the vigilance of the force in the past.

Miss Shott and Miss Johnston, who attend Peddie Institute at Hightstown, are expected to return home next week to spend the summer vacation.

Pastor Beacom occupied his pulpit yesterday, morning and evening, at the M. E. church, and the attendance at both services was excellent.

Miss Cole, who has been detained at her home for some time with a severe attack of tonsilitis, is greatly improved.

Miss Tillie Schroeder, of Jersey City, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hand, has returned home.

The Misses Hazel Meyer and Viola N. Stelle are visiting their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. William Faulks.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Manning have returned home after a visit with relatives in New Brunswick.

Miss Nellie Manning is confined to the house by a sudden attack of illness.

The Piscataway Township Committee will meet tomorrow.

AT THE THEATRES.

Something About the Attractions Which Plainfield Theatre-Goers May Care to Witness.

Although the theatrical season in New York is nearing its end and most of the theatres have closed their doors, there is no announcement yet of this kind from the cosy little Madison Square Theatre, New York City, where William Collier is still delighting crowds with his extremely bright and funny performance of Augustus Thomas' best comedy, "On the Quiet." The last souvenir performance of the New York season will be given at this house Thursday, June 6, when the one hundred and fiftieth performance will be celebrated.

The musical contingent of the F. F. Proctor Big Stock Company made its Broadway debut today at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York City, when it presented the musical comedy, "Lost, Strayed or Stolen," which ran for several months some seasons ago at one of the Broadway theatres. A company numbering nearly fifty people has been engaged and the production is staged with special scenery and lighting effects. A charming curtain raiser, "The Violin Maker," precedes the musical comedy. The variety specialists which are engaged to make the performance continuous are: Chas. T. Ellis & Co., Lizzie and Vinie Daly, Irene and Zaza, the kalatechnoscope, etc. The prices are always 25c. and 50c. for the best seats.

TWO GOLFERS TIED FOR PRESIDENT'S CUP.

Charles W. McCutchen and Morgan T. Townsend Head List For Trophy at Park Club.

TOWNSEND IN FINE FORM.

MADE LOWEST GROSS SCORE OF SEASON ON A SLOW COURSE.

First Honors For Saturday Divided Between Senator Reed and A. H. Serrell—Senator Reed Now a Factor in Competition.

A score of golfers entered the weekly competition for the President's cup at the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon and the results made several changes in the standing of the competitors for that trophy. The course was in fair condition. The lowest gross score in any club competition this season was made by Morgan T. Townsend. The other players found the course a trifle slow.

First honors for the day went to Senator Charles A. Reed and Arthur H. Serrell, who made net scores of 84 each. Morgan T. Townsend was in great form and made a 94, which landed him a close third in the afternoon's play. The other players were well bunched behind. Fred P. Taylor was somewhat off his game and failed to do better than 107, which will probably mean a little increase in his handicap. There were a number of changes made in the handicaps, some of the older players getting back into the "duffer" class.

Charles W. McCutchen and Morgan T. Townsend are now tied for first place in the race for the trophy, Townsend's third place Saturday landing him alongside the giver of the trophy. Had Senator Reed won first place alone, he would have also tied for first with five points but as it is he is now an extremely close third, only half a point behind the leaders. Serrell scored points for the first time. The standing for the cup is now as follows:

Charles W. McCuthen	5
Morgan T. Townsend	5
Charles A. Reed	4½
H. D. Hibbard	3
Allan B. Laing	3
Arthur H. Serrell	2½
William J. Buttfield	2
Fred P. Taylor	1
W. de la R Anderson	½
Herbert S. Rogers	½

The scores below 100 turned in for the President's cup were as follows:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net.
Charles A. Reed	118	34	84
Arthur H. Serrell	124	40	84
Morgan T. Townsend	94	9	85
George T. Rogers	127	40	87

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

Comments have been made recently in several newspapers of the country upon the recognition by physicians of a distinct distemper that frequently follows moving time, relates the New York Evening Post. The affection is usually a sore throat, but it is a mistake to attribute it solely to the process of changing from one residence to another. It can be got quite as readily by the permanent resident and is in fact merely a classified recognition of what village wives used to call "housecleaning sickness." They did not know, as we do now, that dust is germ laden and full of risks if breathed in through the throat. A good suggestion given in some of the present discussion of the matter is to keep the mouth closed while in a dust-laden atmosphere. A further caution is to keep the hands away from any abrasion of the skin—this caution at any time, but particularly when they are dipping into all sorts of dusty work. One has only to watch a surgeon undertaking so simple a bit of surgery as the lancing of a boil to get an idea of the difference between ordinary and surgical cleanliness. The practitioner will wash his hands, rinse them, dry them on a perfectly clean towel, use a nail cleaner, and then as a final precaution re-wash them in an antiseptic solution before he touches the instruments that have been previously immersed in boiling water, and afterward chemically sterilized. So great is the care taken in hospitals that not only lint and gauze, but even any cloths that may be needed, are kept in large glass jars under cover. Apparently clean hands may carry the deadliest of germs. Within ten days a young woman undertook with the daintiest of fingers to press open a slight pimple on the face of her sister; blood poisoning set in promptly, and the girl narrowly escaped with her life, the physician ascribing the trouble to some invisible germ probably held under the nail of the amateur operator.

The Automatic Cabinet Oil Stove.

The Automatic has no valve of any kind and no small thread or needle openings. The oil is supplied at the burning point as fast as consumed and no faster. There is no waste. There are no intricate pipes and valves.

The burner of the Automatic gives an intensely hot blue flame. The burner consists of a chimney and bowl with a lever attachment for raising and lowering to control the flame or extinguish the flame.

Handsome swell front with fancy trimmings, nickle corners and well japanned.

2 Burner—Price 6.48 3 Burner—Price 8.48

The Auto Sypho Moto Cabinet Grand.

The oil reservoir is perfectly and securely balanced and held in position by two tested absolute springs, which as the oil is used, adjusts automatically the oil level, keeping it always on a level with that in the burners and pipe line. Thus there can be no flooding of burners as the bulk of the oil is always below the oil level. The oil flows from the oil reservoir into a cup at the end of the stove, which allows the reservoir to move and keeps the pipe line charged, the oil being supplied to the point of consumption by means of

SWINGING SYPHON BURNERS.

"Oh, Stanton, make the most of it. You've a chance yet," said the judge, grasping his hand.

"The time is short," said Stanton. "I'm going by myself to think it over. Only one thing I can say to you, Judge Russell; I would rather not live to hear the clock strike 12 to-morrow night than fail to foil the plans of Richard Raymond."

CHAPTER IV.

Tuesday, December 6, 1892, the morning edition of the New York Herald contained 16 pages, which is 15 more than the average mind can benefit by attempting to absorb, of any daily newspaper.

In an obscure column, under the head line "Personal," there appeared, among others, this advertisement: "A young man wants a wife. Must marry Tuesday. Answer before noon. Malcolm. Herald. Uptown."

A messenger boy waited to receive the replies, find the applicants, and direct them to call in person at the office of Robert Stanton, legal representative of this indefinite Malcolm.

It seemed well arranged and promising, and as Stanton entered his office that morning, after an unsatisfactory night at a hotel, a smile of sad satisfaction lifted his upper lip from the tips of his excellent teeth.

He touched the bell, and his office boy not over-bright, appeared at the inner door connecting the private room with the main office. There was another door, marked "Private," leading from the inner office directly into the hall.

"Some women may call to see a Mr. Malcolm," he said. "I represent his interests. You are to show them in one at a time, in the order of their coming. When I have done with one I will ring. Don't let another come in till you hear the bell. See?"

Not a muscle seemed to move in the blank, stupid face, as the boy muttered: "Yesser" and closed the door. Then, however, a great grin instantly divided his face and his eyes opened almost too wide for his head to hold them. He dropped into his chair, and, clutching the office copy of the morning Herald, he quickly hunted up and read again a little two-line advertisement: "A young man wants a wife. Must marry Tuesday. Answer before noon."

"Gee whiz!" he muttered. "A wed-din' in de family. An' ter-day's Tuesday, or I'm a sinner. Hi! but here's No. 1. Cracky, she's a corker. He struck it rich, sure 'nough."

Instantly he pulled every atom of expression out of his face. Approaching a woman hesitating in the open door, he said:

"Good mornin', 'um. Lookin' fur de Mr. Malcolm as adetised in de mornin' Herald, um? Right dis way, um. He's a-waitin' right in here."

He opened the door of the private office. The lady timidly entered. He closed the door again, and with a broad grin retreated to his chair to wait for the next and listen for the bell.

Inside, the two faced each other for a moment in bewildered silence.

Each naturally looked for something of a wolf at the opposite end of such an advertisement, and each was naturally perplexed at the excellently adjusted sheep's clothing.

Stanton was the poorest possible judge of a woman if she was out of the witness stand, and he was too thoroughly bewildered to be half so good a judge as usual. He saw a face the like of which it seemed to him that he had never seen before, with keen, quick eyes, lips curving scornfully, yet almost ready to laugh, and something about it which frightened him.

He was so thoroughly bewildered that when the woman recovered sufficiently to remark: "This is Mr. Malcolm, I believe?" Stanton hesitated, hung his head, and, looking at the floor, replied:

"Why, yes—or, rather, no, not exactly."

It was an excellent reply.

"Oh, indeed! I didn't suppose that you were exactly Mr. Malcolm," she exclaimed, with a pointed twist to "exactly." "But you are the one who wrote the advertisement, exactly, aren't you?"

"Why—yes, madam, I did write it," he replied, with marked accent on the "write."

Her eyes sparkled. Her head was thrown back. Her lips were surely laughing, but the curve of scorn was better defined, too, and made him detest himself without in the least realizing why.

With an excellent imitation of his "write" she said:

"It doesn't matter, after all, sir, who did the writing. You are the man who thinks that he wants a wife, I'm sure."

The tips of Stanton's teeth appeared under his mustache as he replied:

"I am."

It was not even a professional smile, but very like the smile of a schoolboy who is about to be flogged and is trying to keep back the tears as long as possible.

"You seem to me to be asnamed of it," she said.

"A little. Yes."

"Do you wish that you hadn't advertised?"

"On some accounts I begin to."

"Do you want to take it back?"

"Not exactly."

"You do really want a wife, then?"

"Yes."

"Is it a question with you of home or of money?"

"Money."

"Are you looking for a rich wife?"

"No. The poorer she is the better."

This was the first redeeming feature that Stanton had been able to bring out, and he did it so vigorously that the lady hesitated an instant. He took advantage of the pause to reverse the order of exercises, relieving himself of the disagreeable task of answering questions by asking them himself.

"I presume, madam, that you called in response to the advertisement?"

"I called to see you concerning it, yes."

"You are looking for a husband?"

"I was more looking for the man who thought he wanted a wife."

"Are you prepared to marry at once?"

"Oh, dear! that depends."

"Upon what, madam?"

"Why, the man, of course."

"Do you want money?"

"Oh, no, indeed. I could easily support a husband."

"A protector?"

"Not a bit."

"An adviser?"

"If I did, surely I know better than to marry a lawyer."

"Ever married before?"

"No, sir."

"Been deserted, betrayed, anything of that—"

"Never."

Stanton changed the subject.

"Want to be sure of having 'Mrs.' on your tombstone?"

"Not unless I've given it a good trial first on my visiting cards."

"I don't believe that you really want a husband at all."

This was a mistake. Stanton saw it in an instant; but it was too late, for the lady had seen it, too, and taken advantage of it.

"Isn't it because you don't really want a wife at all, yourself—a real wife?"

"Practically, perhaps."

"And yet you must marry?"

"Before midnight, to-night."

"You are a lawyer?"

"I am."

"You look like an honest man."

"I try to be, so far as it is compatible with my profession."

"You surely wouldn't intentionally wrong a woman?"

"No, madam."

"You are in some legal tangle that can be settled only by your having a wife at once?"

"Precisely."

"You want her for a specific purpose, and then you have no further use for her?"

"Yes."

"What do you propose to do with her then?"

"I supposed that such an advertisement would call out individuals to whom a large sum of money would be ample compensation for the services required."

"You propose to pay her to act as your legal wife, to meet some law, and then to sink into oblivion?"

"I imagine that such an arrangement would be pleasanter than the possession of a husband without money, to some women."

"Pleasanter than the possession of some husbands and their weight in diamonds to any woman."

"Than myself, for example. Yes, madam."

"But it's not a high grade of courtship, is it?"

"No, madam."

"And you don't expect to secure a woman worthy to be a wife."

"No, madam."

"You know that you are casting pearls before swine, yet you seem to ignore the possibility that they will trample them under their feet and turn again and rend you."

"Possibly I had not thought far enough into the future."

"Surely you'd not respect the woman who sold her life to the bondage of a wife without a husband, in exchange for your gold?"

"I should hardly need to respect her."

"Would you respect yourself, moving about as a man in the world, with a woman of whom you were ashamed living somewhere as your legal wife?"

Stanton had reached a point of desperation. He rose from his chair as he replied:

"Madam, your line of argument is correct. I appreciate it and agree with it; but don't carry it on any further for a moment, or you will shake me from my position, when, perhaps, I had better not be shaken. Allow me briefly to lay before you the incidents and arguments which brought me to act as I did. Possibly you may agree with me. At least I am convinced that I shall value your opinion."

TRUE GHOST STORY.

Strange Noises Frightened the People of Waukegan, Ill.

Harmless Inventor, Who Was Suspected by His Fellow-Citizens of Being a Wizard, Finally Unraveled the Mystery.

The town of Waukegan, Ill., is a veritable bower of foliage, tall trees, and many of them, spreading their boughs as thick as in a forest over the yards of the residents. This fact will explain the presence of the ghost.

Some time ago an inventor who has a laboratory in the rear of his premises was cautiously approached by a neighbor who lives across the street. Under his breath he asked the inventor whether he had heard any strange noises of late. But the inventor had not.

Now, the inventor himself had been the subject of much gossip in the town. His was a queer-looking place, hidden away where no one could see it. It was provided with a tall tower in which were odd-looking portholes, and in this inclosure, it was said, all kinds of strange devices were suspended. Many persons stepped lightly as they passed, for fear a jar would dislodge the hanging things, which, being precipitated to the floor, would set off an explosion that would blow the capital of Lake county to kingdom come. It had been hinted that the man responsible for all these contrivances was a sort of wizard, and that there were uncanny doings over in the backyard.

As the stories of the queer noises grew the wizard was the object of many suspicious glances.

The wizard, however, says the Chicago Daily News, bent over his work with renewed zeal. He was not at all disturbed until he himself became a victim of the ghost's doings, and heard the noises which to the neighborhood had seemed decidedy unearthly. One feature of the house in which the wizard lived was that all the windows and doors were wired. A fly alighting on an exposed wire would ring an alarm that would startle the town. In the little reception hall was a wicket through which one is required to pass in order to gain access to the stairway. This was provided with a buzzer that set up a terrific noise on the closing of a circuit.

One night the inventor was preparing to retire early, when he was made aware of the presence of odd noises.

THE GHOST HAS BEEN SKINNED.

They sounded like a man slipping across the roof and dragging a heavy rope after him. First the noise was heard overhead, then under the floor, and then in the wall at the head of the bed. The inventor became interested, and incidentally his hair began to rise. The ghost stories that he had heard lately from the neighbors came to him in a flood. He moved about the house in his nightshirt, grasping a horse pistol in each hand. Suddenly the buzzer on the wicket at the foot of the stairs began to do its turn, and the sound of it gave the wizard the shivers.

"Come right on up; don't stop to knock!" he shouted to an imaginary intruder below. But nobody came, although the noises continued through the night and for several nights. The wizard became communicative and now wanted to talk to the neighbor across the way, who acted as if he desired to dodge the inventor.

Matters rapidly approached a crisis. But at last the ghost was found out. One of the wizard's aids in scurrying across the yard one moonlit night saw the ghost run up a tree. It jumped over on the porch, and, reaching over to the eaves, caught in its grasp a double line of wires. Immediately the buzzer set up a noise inside the house. Then the ghost let go and disappeared in a hole in the cornice of the house. The assistant got inside at once and summoned the household. In less time than it takes to tell it terrifying noises were heard in different parts of the house.

The "ghost" was one of the largest raccoons ever seen in Lake county. He made nocturnal visits to every house in which he could gain access, dragged himself between the floors and ceilings and clambered up and down the walls. He gnawed the insulation off the wizard's wires, and, gripping them together, closed a circuit, which explained the working of the wicket alarm.

The ghost has been skinned, and peace hovers over Waukegan.

Peacemaker Gets in Trouble.

A couple of chicken hawks were engaged in a fierce fight at East View, D., when W. H. Robinson tried to act as peacemaker, with the aid of a club. The hawks at once turned on him and tried to pick out his eyes. Just as he was almost exhausted a farmer rushed to his rescue and drove off the birds.

BILIOUSNESS

A few facts from the experience of a Philadelphia, Pa., lady with Ripans Tabules. "I have been in miserable health for a long time, subject to frequent bilious attacks and suffering almost constantly with most distressing headaches. I was much constipated and very frequently had acute pains in the stomach. While of a naturally cheerful temperament I had become irritable and cross and my household duties had become a burden to me as I was always languid and dull. I was advised by my aunt, who had tried Ripans Tabules, to give them a trial and I did so. After using them for about a week I was entirely relieved of the constipation and since using them for about five weeks my health has improved wonderfully. I feel better than I have for a long time; the languid, dull feeling is gone and I no longer suffer with those terrible headaches and am able to go through my work without thinking it a burden. I owe my returning good health to Ripans Tabules."

SUMMER FURNITURE.

Hints For the Woman Who Is Opening Her Country House.

Dame Fashion not only says what we shall wear and how we shall wear it, but she wishes to dictate what kind of furniture we shall have in our city and country homes. What will do for one will not do for the other. In the first place, country houses—not the millionaires' palaces, but just the houses of the ordinary well to do people—must be papered with burlap, chintz or cretonne. Burlap makes a rich covering, and the designs are so artistic that no one can be blamed for liking it. Soft greens in old style designs and reds in several shades are among the handsomest. These are for the hall and dining rooms, but the parlors must have chintz in some old colonial pattern. The bedrooms are hung with chintz or cretonne in light and cheerful colors. The ceilings are decorated with a little stenciled pattern in the corners, matching as closely as possible with the chintz. A strip of gilt molding around the walls for pictures gives them brightness, and in some cases there are panels made with strips of the gilt molding. This makes it almost obligatory that the bed coverings, cushions and also the drapery of chimney and bureau all should be in some color to match. Where there are several rooms each is made to have a special scheme of color, and the room is then known as the red, blue, pink or yellow one, as the case may be. All ribbons match, and much lace is used to edge all the different pieces, like counterpanes, pillowcases, etc.

For the dining room of the country house oak cane seat chairs are better liked than any, and, in fact, all the dining room furniture is of the same kind. It is cool and looks so. The parlor sets have the usual number of chairs, but this season they are upholstered in grass cloth and are finished in green and soft woody browns. There are tete-a-tete sets, two rockers, two side chairs, a couch and a pretty table, all made in the same way and upholstered in the cool and pleasing grass cloth. Matting is laid on the floor when any carpet at all is used.

But, after all, it is on the porch that the greatest care and style are found. Nearly all porches now are closed in by wire netting so fine that no mosquito can wriggle through it, and the vines are trained up outside of this. The porches are wide and roomy, and here is what fashion says must be put on them for the daily use of the family and visitors:

First, a porch set, consisting of table, two big rockers, one side and one arm chair and tete-a-tete. Hammocks are hung wherever there is room. Swinging couches and steamer chairs are also useful, as they can be folded like the Arab's tents. All these are upholstered in grass cloth and are made of weathered birch and finished in Flemish style. The woven wire swing couches, covered as they are with the cool grass cloth, are ideally perfect. They sustain and rest one all over. There are bamboo tea tables, bamboo hanging racks and no end of other easy chairs, all made with a view to comfort and coolness. Besides all these things calculated to fill the summer days with coolness and pleasure, there are numerous devices for keeping the masculine element in the fold, chiefest among them being tables holding all sorts of things for the benefit of the smokers.

TRAVELING CLOAK.

As everybody is on the wing now or soon to be I will end this letter by telling of a most excellent and sensible traveling cloak. This can be made of black taffeta silk, of poplinette or of serviceable mohair. No lining is necessary. The one in the illustration is of black taffeta and has a trimming made of ribbed mohair braid, with a couple of fancy steel and jet buttons at the bust. In the back the garment hangs loosely and has two rows of the braid down the center. This braid is the lightest made and the only kind suitable for taffeta. It is also suitable for mohair, which resembles silk so closely. The sleeves are loose, as they should be for a dust and traveling cloak. They are lined with plaid silk.

FANCIES OF FASHION.

They Are of the Daintiest and Most Delightful Nature.

New Skirt Is Graceful in Its Lines and Universally Becoming — Blouses Trimmed in Laces and Embroidery.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

AS FAR as it is possible to judge at the present moment, there seems to be every reason to believe that the fashions of the immediate future will be of the daintiest and most delightful description. The weather this spring has been so cold and generally disagreeable that really smart clothes have been in very little demand, in consequence whereof modistes have had a much longer period of rest than is usually the case, and they seem to have employed their leisure to the greatest possible advantage in the designing of charming gowns suitable for both early and midsummer wear, which are far prettier and more generally becoming than anything which has been seen for many seasons. To be sure, some of the main features that marked the spring styles are carried out in the summer modes, but all are changed and improved upon to such a degree as to be hardly recognizable.

The new skirt continues to fit with glove-like snugness about the hips, and with the same wonderful amount of flare at the bottom as heretofore. The jaunty little bolero is to be seen on every other gown as of yore, while the old, yet ever new, blouse-bodice still reigns supreme; but, somehow, by a bold contrast of color, an extra sash to the rever of the bolero or a deft twist to the pouched bodice, the clever modiste has managed to give an air of extreme novelty to these summer gowns that is both pleasing and fascinating.

Every device and trick known to the trade is employed to produce the graceful fullness at the bottom of the approved skirt, and according to the decree of Dame Fashion it must show either tucks, plaitings or one or more graceful flounces as its most distinctive feature. A taffeta foundation, matching in color the goods, adds much elegance to this new skirt, especially when the material chosen happens to be crepe de chine or the all-conquering nun's veiling. Satin-faced foulard promises to be among the favorite materials for smart afternoon frocks. The fancy of the moment is to trim these silken gowns with one or more accordion-plaited ruffles, made of black point de esprit net over one of white taffeta silk. Another fad, and a very pretty one, too, is to have a little cloth bolero matching the prevailing color in the silk. For instance, a lavender and white foulard was finished with a smart-looking bolero fashioned of lavender cloth and trimmed with narrow silver and white braid and tiny silver buttons. Another gown in which this idea was very prettily carried out was in a lovely shade of rose pink lightly patterned in black and white. The chic bodice was rendered doubly so by means of a jaunty white cloth bolero, cut very short in the back to show a folded girdle of turquoise blue panne velvet. I know the intermingling of rose pink and turquoise blue sounds rather daring, but in this particular instance the combination was introduced by the artistic fingers of a master hand, with results that were simply stunning.

CREPE DE CHINE GOWN.

DAINTY BLOUSES FOR SUMMER WEAR.

The extreme daintiness of the new cotton fabrics cannot but appeal in the strongest manner to the love of the beautiful innate in womankind. Cool-looking dimities and French lawns are to be reckoned among the most attractive materials now on exhibition, while the silk ginghams and embroidered cotton batistes are lovely enough to tempt the unwary into rank extravagance. They come in white, pale blue, light green and all the pretty new shades of pink. Some of the silk ginghams have a double border of silk woven on the edge, which is meant to be used as a trimming in connection with much lace and yards upon yards of the ever-popular Persian ribbon. Many of the new mercerized ducks and cheviots, cotton though they be, are exceedingly beautiful, and so closely resemble the most lustrous silk as to make them quite admirably suited for any but the most dressy wear. Within the week I have seen some very swell-looking tailor-gowns fashioned of both these materials, those of cheviot being particularly fetching. All were as carefully tailored, even down to the smallest detail, as though made of the finest broadcloth. Some showed to particular advantage with their short Eton coats tucked both back and front, while the skirt was treated in a similar manner, then finished with a deep yoke of yellow lace. Others again have their seams finely strapped, and to be strictly up-to-date these strappings should be either of silk or cloth.

The blouse and the shirt waist again show a tendency toward much fine handwork and incrustations of lace and embroidery. The very prettiest are of finely-tucked lawn or batiste, and their beauty is further enhanced by the wise introduction of fine lace insertions. The sleeves are tight at the top but become fuller toward the wrist, and like the remainder of the waist seem to be an intricate mass of tiny tucks and fine lace.

Some of the prettiest plain glace and crepe de chine blouses have deep collars of embroidered lawn. These collars are worn low on the shoulder and give rather a sloping effect, with an inner vest of tucked lawn and lace to correspond. The popularity of the lace blouse seems rather to wax than wane, and just now it is the proper caper to have it made of handsome Maltese lace. I am bound to tell you, however, that this lace used in the making of the approved blouse, in which much fine handwork must appear, would run the price of the garment up to a figure that would place it quite beyond the reach of the average purse.

The newest and very smartest shade in millinery is a lovely nut brown, and is dividing the honors with an equally exquisite shade known as "flame pink." Soft straws in this latter shade are particularly popular with milliners just now, who veil them with tulle and generally trim them with flowers in dead tones, sometimes mixed with old lace.

One of the most lovely new models in headgear I have seen was a nut-brown straw toque, trimmed with soft pink roses, with some old patterned coffee lace placed to droop low over the brim. Shapes are very flat and wide just now, and very often they are curved at the side. Flowers will be immensely popular later in the season. Many of the new hats are worn tilted off the face, and cut up the back to show the new low coiffure, the brims being lined with some controlling color. Some are quite square in front, the entire crowns being garlanded in flowers. The wide boat shape is kept flat and simply trimmed with foliage. I rather doubt whether this new flat style of headgear will prove becoming to many, but it is a change; and so we welcome it for its air of novelty if not for its beauty and general becomingness. KATE GARDNER.

The Mystery of "Two Ten."

Baroness Burdette Coutts was once shopping in Paris, and whenever she went from one department to another she was escorted by a clerk, who handed her over to another attendant, saying: "Two ten." Struck by the peculiarity of the oft-repeated cabalistic words, the baroness asked the proprietor as she left the establishment:

"Pray, what does 'two ten' mean? I noticed that each clerk repeated it to the next as I went from one counter to the other."

"Oh, it is nothing," replied the man. "It is just a password they are in the habit of exchanging." But the baroness was not satisfied. When the porter, a mere lad, brought home her purchase, she said to him:

"My boy, would you like to earn five francs?" Of course he would be charmed.

"Then tell me what 'two ten' means, and I will give you five francs." The youth looked at her in astonishment.

"Don't you know, madam? Why, it means: 'Keep your eyes on her ten fingers!'"

That solved the mystery. The richest and most generous woman in England had been taken for a shoplifter. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR VISITORS IN BUFFALO.

Hundreds of Hotels, Boarding and Rooming Houses, Besides Many Private Homes, on the List.

So much has been said and written about the ability of the city of Buffalo to care for the crowds which will attend the Pan-American Exposition this summer that a few facts and figures will be appreciated by the general public.

In the first place, there are listed more than 200 hotels, which will give accommodation to 30,000 people; there are 650 boarding and rooming houses, affording accommodation for 18,500, while 7,000 owners of houses, most of whom never before hung out their latchstring for a consideration, have signified their intention of opening their houses for the accommodation of visitors to Buffalo this summer. These 7,000 homes will accommodate at least 100,000 visitors.

The Exposition Company has arranged to furnish tent accommodation on the Exposition grounds for 250 uniformed men. There are also two companies arranging tent systems which will afford additional accommodation outside of the grounds for 1,500 or so.

In addition to all this, there are a large number of buildings throughout the city now being remodeled and converted into hotels, the plans of which are not far enough along to afford an accurate description or to estimate accommodation at the present time. It is safe to estimate the present capacity of the city of Buffalo to accommodate 150,000 strangers. To this may be added accommodations for at least 50,000 in the surrounding towns, such as Tonawanda, La Salle, Niagara Falls, Lockport, Williamsville, Gardenville, Depew and Lancaster, all within a short trolley ride of the city.

Rates in hotels range from $1 per day upward. As ridiculous stories have been circulated in regard to exorbitant hotel rates, it is well to note the rates that have been established at the Iroquois, the most expensive hotel in the city. These are, for one in a room without bath, $3 and upward; for two in a room without bath, $5 and upward, thus making the minimum rate $2.50 per individual. The rate for a room with bath for one person is $5 or for two in a room $7.50. This is on the European plan. Of course there are rooms and suites of rooms in this hotel for much higher rates for those who wish to pay them, but the prices here given are the highest in the city for hotel accommodations as the term is ordinarily understood.

A number of local reliable agencies are engaged in locating visitors in homes in the city. These can be relied upon as being honest, straightforward and efficient. They are composed of business men of integrity, who will carefully protect strangers in the city, and visitors may feel assured of courteous treatment and safe conduct to accommodations which have received careful inspection.

The National Grange and New York State Committee of the Grangers have arranged to entertain 300,000 Grangers during the Exposition. Tickets entitling Grangers to the use of the Grange building and securing accommodations in the city are being supplied to all Granges in the United States and Canada.

MILITARY CAMPS.

Accommodations For the Soldier Boys at the Pan-American Exposition.

Many military organizations intend to visit the Pan-American Exposition during the summer. Arrangements have been made to provide first class accommodations for them.

The Exposition will maintain a permanent camp within the grounds for the accommodation of about 200 men at one time.

This camp will be supplied with tents floored, cots, buckets, basins, pint cups, light, water and sinks, for the use of which no charge will be made. It will be necessary for visiting organizations to furnish their own blankets and subsistence.

There will be no accommodation for cooking in this camp, but the visitors will no doubt be able to make satisfactory arrangements with restaurants on the grounds at reasonable rates.

It is expected that organizations taking advantage of these camp privileges will, at such time as may be agreed upon beforehand, give military exhibitions without charge in the Stadium.

Bands in uniform will be admitted to the grounds free. Organizations using this camp will pay one general admission per man when they enter the grounds and must be governed by the rules and regulations laid down by the Exposition Company.

On account of the large number of organizations now applying for camp facilities at the Exposition the use of this camp will be limited to a period not exceeding six days for any one organization.

Large bodies of troops visiting the Exposition must be quartered outside the grounds, where a large camp for this purpose has been established.

Major Charles J. Wolf is in charge of the Military Bureau, and he is kept very busy these days furnishing information to organizations intending to visit the Exposition.

The little bee is very busy at the Pan-American Exposition, gathering and storing honey in glass hives in full view of visitors.

A searchlight on the Electric Tower of the Pan-American Exposition casts rays for a distance of 50 miles.

THE MIDWAY.

Principal Amusement Features of the Pan-American Exposition.

The Midway of the Pan-American Exposition far surpasses all amusement features at former expositions, both in quality and novelty of attractions. The following are the principal concessions:

Esquimaux Village, Glass Factory, Trip to the Moon, Aerio-Cycle, Old Plantation, Beautiful Orient, Miniature World's Fair, Around the World, Cleopatra, Colorado Gold Mine, Living Pictures, Dreamland, Moving Pictures, War Cyclorama, Philippine Village, Alt Nuremberg, Panopticon, Streets of Mexico, Darkness and Dawn, Burning Mountain, Darkest Africa, House Upside Down, Water Sports Carnival, Gypsy Camp, Golden Chariots, Johnstown Flood, Infant Incubators, Fair Japan, Bostock's Wild Animal Arena, Ideal Palace, Jerusalem on the Morning of the Crucifixion, Indian Congress, Bazaar Building, Scenic Railway, Venice in America, Dawson City and Miniature Railway.

The Mechanics' Institute at Rochester has obtained space in the Educational division of the Pan-American Exposition for an exhibit. The pictures to be placed on view are three sizes—28 by 22 inches, 22 by 14 inches and 7 by 5 inches. Room for 32 of the largest size has been given to the Institute.

One of the novelties promised by John Philip Sousa, "The March King," for the Pan-American Exposition Band Concerts, is the new Sousa March, "Hail to the Spirit of Liberty," which he composed for the dedication of the Lafayette Monument in Paris last Fourth of July.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Somerville A. A. nine defeated the Watchung baseball team at Somerville on Memorial Day by a score of 16 to 14.

The final game of the North Plainfield High School nine will be played with the Pingry School team at Elizabeth Wednesday.

The North Plainfield Juniors defeated the Middlesex baseball team on the latter's grounds Saturday morning by a score of 21 to 16.

Inability to get the members together resulted in the New York Sugar Refinery team postponing its game with the Plainfield Athletic Association Saturday. The date on which it will be played has not yet been set.

In a well played game on the old golf grounds Saturday afternoon the Woodsides defeated the Pond Seconds by a score of 20 to 10. The game was witnessed by a large number of spectators. The battery for the Woodsides was O'Keefe and Scott and for the Pond Seconds, Norstrom and Scott.

An exciting ball game took place on the cricket grounds Saturday before a large number of spectators between the Watchung Ball Club and the Park Field Club. Both sides played well, but the Watchungs finally proved victors by a score of 13 to 9. This is the second game which the teams have played, the first one ending in a tie. The batteries were Sherwin and Wills for the Watchung's and Conover and Bird for the Park's.

The Plainfield High School nine played a picked team made up of players on the Leal's and Borough High School teams Saturday afternoon on the Plainfield avenue grounds. The City High School boys won by a score of 17 to 10. Ralph Schoonmaker and Howard George constituted the battery for the defeated team, while the Plainfield High had their regular battery Van-Auken and Moynihan.

Disappointment was in store for a large crowd of enthusiasts which had gathered on the Fourth street grounds Saturday afternoon in anticipation of witnessing the scheduled contest between the St. Mary ball team and the Mystic A. C., of Brooklyn. For some reason the latter team failed to make its appearance, although a telegram was received by Manager Monahan, Friday, to the effect that it would be on hand at the appointed time. A member of the St. Mary team will go to Brooklyn today looking for an explanation.

GOLF.

The Westfield Golf Club formally opened its new nine-hole course Decoration Day, and all day the links were crowded with players, most of whom were novices. Wednesday evening the clubhouse was opened to the members at which time a concert and many social features were enjoyed. Later in the season a schedule of events will be arranged.

—Two representatives from the Pan-American Art Studio, 92 Fifth avenue, New York, are calling on the residents of this city introducing the latest style of work called sculptographs raised on aluminum. They are stopping at Hotel Kensington.

STRIKE AT THE SILK MILL.

WEAVERS DEMANDED A HIGHER SCALE OF WAGES.

Demand Was Refused and Fifteen Weavers Quit—Their Places Will Be Filled.

The strike contagion has spread to the Watchung Silk Company's factory on West Front street. This morning the weavers employed by that concern dropped their work at the looms and marched out in a body. The concerted action on their part was the result of a refusal to grant an increase in the scale of wages.

A grievance committee, composed of the Misses Arthur and Duvier and Messrs. Uhler, Dixon and Paul, waited on General Superintendent W. R. Stanbery at 9:30 o'clock and made a demand for higher wages. They asked for an increase of one cent per yard on one grade of goods and one cent and a half on another, declaring at the same time that the local concern is paying a less rate than other mills.

After listening to the committee's complaint Mr. Stanbery preemptorily refused the demands. Consequently the weavers, fifteen in number, struck and the Superintendent closed down the place. The winders, quilters, pickers, loomfixers, twisters and walkers took no part in the matter.

When seen by a Press reporter at noon today, Mr. Stanbery declared that the action of the strikers would not affect the business at the factory. He declares that he has lately been in communication with the silk mill owners at Paterson and elsewhere and finds that the scale of wages here is higher than elsewhere.

"The weavers, who are on hand tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock, can have their choice of the looms," said he, and continuing, he declared that should the strikers fail to appear for work their places will be filled by other weavers.

Charged With Fighting.

After listening to a lot of contradictory testimony City Judge Runyon this morning reserved his decision until Saturday in the case against Michael Mottley, Harry Molleson, Peter Fleming and William Drake charged with causing a disturbance at the corner of Second street and Park avenue Saturday evening. The four men were engaged in a fistic encounter when arrested by a patrolman.

Will Pay His Way Hereafter.

Out of funds and with a desire to get to New York, Victor Zimmerman, of Washington, D. C. attempted to beat his way on the express which reached this city at 2:14 yesterday morning. He was ejected from the train at the North avenue station and taken in hand by a patrolman. He was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, but after promising to pay for his railroad rides in the future, he was released.

Amendment Didn't Pass.

At a meeting of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association held this morning an amendment to the constitution was proposed, to the effect that the managers of the various athletic teams be allowed the privilege of wearing the school insignia. The amendment was not carried.

HOPE CHAPEL BOYS WERE EASY VICTIMS.

Scotch Plains Team Defeated Them Saturday by a Score of 10 to 3.

PLAINFIELDERS OUTPLAYED.

"BILLIE" LEE, OF THE OLD CRESCENTS, PLAYED WITH PLAINS.

Game Played at Scotch Plains—Home Team Did Some Great Batting—Hope Team Was Off Its Usual Game.

The second defeat for the season was registered against the Hope chapel team as a result of its game with the Scotch Plains' nine Saturday afternoon. It seemed to be an off day for Judge Runyon's proteges for try as they would only three runs were made by them, while the uniformly even playing of their opponents netted ten runs. The contest took place on the Scotch Plains team's grounds and a good-sized crowd was present to witness the victory batted out by the home team.

Hope chapel's defeat reflected no discredit upon the team. Individually they were neither as old, nor as strong, nor as experienced as the men of Scotch Plains. Garrison, the latter nine's pitcher, hailed from New Providence, and he was put in the box in place of Joe Alberts, the regular man. Wm. Lee, who held down third base with ability, is a vetern of the never-to-be-forgotten Crescent team of this city. Hand, the short stop, as well as the majority of the remainder of the nine, are old time ball tossers.

The strain from the two games played Thursday by the Hope boys was clearly evident throughout the contest. Smith was put in as pitcher, but was taken out at the end of the first inning and Montross, who regularly fills the position, was substituted. Both were "fagged out" and the Scotch Plains' batters, an unusually strong lot in that department of the game, had no difficulty in getting on to their curves.

Mague, in left field, did clever work for the Plainfielders as did also Auten at the bat. For all around good playing on the Scotch Plains' nine Lee and Hand excelled. The features of the game were a one-handed catch of a foul by Gordon, of the Hope team, and two double plays, both made towards the close of the game. Ben Evans sent a grounder to third and Lee put it to second, throwing out Hartfelder, and S. McAuley sent it to H. H. Flannery at first before Evans had reached that bag. The other double was made by the Hope boys. Roseberry at centre caught a fly off Garrison and put the ball to Hand on second, who returned it to Hartfelder nailing McAuley in an attempt to slide home.

The batting order follows:

Hope Chapel.	Scotch Plains.
Hand, 2b.	Lee, 3b.
Roseberry, cf.	Day, cf.
Smith, p., ss.	Allen, c.
Gordon H. Montross, 3b.	Albert, lf.
J. Montross, ss., p.	S. McAuley, 2b.
Hartfelder, c.	Flannery, 1b.
Evans, 1b.	A. McAuley, rf.
Auten, rf.	Hand, ss.
Mague, lf.	Garrison, p.

Score by innings:

H. C.	0	2	1	0	0	0	0	9	— 3
S. P.	3	0	0	0	4	0	0	3	x—10

Summary:

Base hits—H. C. 6; S. P. 9. Two-base hits—H. C. 0; S. P. 1. Double plays—H. C. 1; S. P. 1. Errors—H. C. 3; S. P. 4. Struck out—Montross 6; Garrison 3. Base on balls—Montross 2; Garrison 5. Umpires—William N. Runyon and George Johnson. Scorers—Walter Foster and H. G. Hand.

WORK OF CHILDREN.

Annual Exhibition of Kindergarten at Randolph-Cooley School.

The annual exhibition of children's work in the kindergarten was given Friday at the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School. The work included paper folding, clay modeling, sewing and weavtng, painting, drawing and papier mache. The accommodations at this school have now reached the limit and it will be necessary to build an addition before the school opens next fall. This is due entirely to the earnest efforts of Miss Randolph and Cooley, together with their able corps of teachers.

Calf Bitten By Dog.

George Becker, who lives beyond the city line on Park avenue, had a tale of woe to tell this morning which he illustrated by exhibiting an injured calf. The calf was bitten yesterday afternoon by a dog alleged to be owned by Edwin S. Hooley, of Rockview avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mehlenbeck, of West Front street, are happy over the arrival of a twelve-pound baby boy, born Friday last.

Miss Marie DeComp and Miss May Jepson, of Brooklyn, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Leggett, of Central avenue.

NO BALL PLAYING.

Thirty-five Lads Arrested For Trespassing On Lot On Westervelt Avenue.

Chief Marshal Campbell says there will be no more baseball playing on Johnson's lot at the corner of Westervelt and Fairview avenue. On a complaint lodged with him, the Chief Marshal gathered in thirty-five lads who were enjoying the sport on that lot Saturday afternoon. In the evening the boys appeared before Mayor N. B. Smalley in the police court. After receiving a reprimand and warning they were discharged.

Blood as a Germ-Killer.

It has long been known that healthy blood acts as a germ-killer in a remarkable degree, and that to this property may be ascribed our freedom and safety from the attack of many of the microbes of disease which gain admittance to our frames. To what this disinfectant property of the blood is due is an open question. It may be due in part to the action of our white blood corpuscles in eating up and devouring the microbes that may gain admittance to the circulation, while other authorities hold that the fluid (or lymph) of the blood is the real seat of the germ-killing powers. Recent investigations have shown that on plague germs the blood apparently exercises no power, but as regards typhoid germs and those of cholera it does possess germ-killing properties. This research is not concluded, of course, but it may serve to show us the reasons why we escape so frequently from the cloud of microbes by which, in civilized existence, we are perpetually beset.—The Scotsman.

Progress of Southern Industry.

Southern phosphate deposits are practically the only American deposits of the kind of commercial value. Even they, though, have felt the impulse of the new era, whether they be in the older fields of Florida or in the newer ones of Tennessee. With the destruction of the forests of the middle west and west, southern lumber is becoming dominant in its field, and will be the leader whenever the effort shall be made to combine the lumber interests of the country. In West Virginia and Kentucky there are tendencies to-day toward placing the coal mining industries in closer touch with the bituminous interests elsewhere, while some of the fuel in the Alabama region has already been brought within the influence of the powers centered at Pittsburgh.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

How We Are Like the Chinese.

After all, in considering the subject of superstition, we must remember that it prevails to some extent in all nations. In our own country people generally prefer to see the new moon over their right shoulder, and to have at the same time silver in their pockets. If the salt is upset some of it is thrown over the left shoulder to do away with the bad omen. It is bad luck to pass a funeral, and ill fate also threatens if a black cat crosses your path. The theater proprietor implicitly believes that if a cross-eyed man enters the house early in the evening there will be no audience that night.—Hon. Charles Denby, in Forum.

Ancient Egyptian News.

Among seven Egyptian papyri for Columbia university is a tax collector's return showing items and how the collectors made returns in A. D. 196. There were poll taxes in A. D. 122. The rise of the Nile was the greatest annual event, and upon it taxes were calculated. Hence one of the six papyri sent to Johns Hopkins, treating of the unwatered land tilled by Ptollarous, A. D. 163, is peculiarly interesting. She declares that her field at Euhemeria did not get the water. Her plea, in a word, is: "No crops, no taxes."—N. Y. Sun.

Where the Difference Lies.

"You speculate occasionally, I believe?"

"No; I regret to say that I gamble in stocks."

"What's the difference?"

"Why, it's speculation when I win and it's gambling when some other fellow gets the best of it. I thought everybody knew that."—Chicago Post.

TROLLEY COMPANY HAS NOT KEPT AGREEMENT.

So Councilman Lee Declared And Council Called Attention Of Company To The Facts.

LOTS OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

ORDINANCE INTRODUCED PROVIDING FOR CITY WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Would Regulate All Local Weights And Measures—Lots Of Business Done At June Meeting Of Common Council Last Night.

The regular June meeting of the Common Council held last evening was devoted chiefly to the transaction of matters of a routine nature. There was the usual large batch of communications and petitions and a few matters of importance were taken up for consideration. All the members except Messrs. Clifton, Mellick and Tolles were present. It was some time after 8 o'clock before President Dumont called the meeting.

John Hensy and others living in the vicinity of North and Leland avenues, complained about stagnant water that has been a source of nuisance to them. The petitioners asked to have the same abated. George J. Tobin asked the Council to remit a tax on a West Sixth street property, owned by him, as the tax had been paid twice. This matter had been attended to and the petition was filed. Residents in the vicinity of Stelle and Union avenues asked for an electric light. Howard Cooper, who received a tax bill for dog, complained that he never owned a dog and asked to have the tax erased. F. W. Coleman applied for a license for the Hotel Netherwood and the application took the usual course.

Elston M. French, who purchased a property on Elizabeth street at a Martin Act sale, and who recently discovered that the property was owned by Mrs. Susan Dunham, offered to release the same provided the Council would re-imburse him to the extent of $69.85, the amount paid by him. The property was assessed in error originally. Mr. French's offer was accepted and the amount asked for will be returned to him.

The members of the Reform Club, through W. C. Smith, chairman of the executive board, asked to have taxes for 1898 and 1899 remitted on their property. They claimed that the hall was used solely for religious purposes and had never been taxed during the past nine years, except in the two years mentioned. The matter was referred.

W. R. Codington, who holds a chattel mortagage on property owned by Chapot & Sons, concerning which there is a question as to priority of lein as against the claim of the city for taxes, previously offered to meet the Council for a settlement of the claim. Mr. van Herwerden offered a resolution that the claim be settled providing Mr. Codington would pay one-half of the amount due for taxes. He has already paid $100 of the $193 due, and if he pays half of the balance, $93, the Council will settle.

Collector F. H. Smith reported that one tax warrant was issued in May in accordance with a resolution adotped by the Council in February, and that there had been returns from twenty-four warrants issued during the previous months. He reported the collection of $112.94 from these warrants.

Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of eleven permits during the past month. There was no report from Street Commissioner Gavett regarding sewer permits, as none were granted.

Mayor Jenkins appointed Ephraim Compton and Theodore J. Larew as call men in the fire department and the appointments were confirmed by the Council.

Mr. van Herwerden offered a resolution that in anticipation of the collection of taxes the sum of $9,000 be borrowed for the general fund and $3,000 for the fire fund. The resolution originally provided for $9,000 for the fire fund, but President Dumont questioned the legality of borrowing to the limit. Mr. van Herwerden stated that $6,000 of the amount for the general fund was to renew notes left from last year and $2,500 from the fire fund would be returned to the general fund. This would leave $500 to be borrowed for this month's bills. When the matter was fully explained it was unanimously voted to change the amount from $9,000 to $3,000. City Treasurer W. F. Arnold was present and explained the situation. Under the provisions of the resolution the old notes

WANT UNIFORMS.

Exempt Firemen Appointed Committee to Decide Means to Secure Necessary Funds.

It has been the desire of the Exempt Firemen's Association for some time past to have uniforms, but as yet it has not seen its way clear. The matter was acted upon in a formal way at the regular monthly meeting held last evening.

A committee, consisting of Samuel Robinson, Charles McGinley, George Clark, F. C. Putnam and Edward Mosher, was appointed to devise means of securing the necessary money and to report at the next meeting. As the association will undoubtedly be invited to participate in the North Plainfield fire department's parade next fall the members wish to make as imposing appearance as possible and will take immediate action upon the committee's resolution.

COMPLETED EIGHTH YEAR.

ENDEAVORERS OF EAST THIRD ISTREET CHAPEL CELEBRATED.

Pleasing Programme Given In Honor of The Occasion At The Chapel Last Evening.

The eighth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of the East Third Street chapel was suitably commemorated last evening by special exercises, at which were present delegations from many of the societies composing the Local Union.

Uzal B. Crane, the chairman of the committee on arrangements, presided at the meeting and in a happy vein introduced those who provided the entertainment. The exercises were appropriately opened by the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and a prayer by L. W. Randolph, the superintendent.

Miss Florence Dodge, the president of the society, made an address of welcome and incidently recalled a few facts concerning the history of the praiseworthy organization. From a little band of fifteen, who gathered together in May, 1893, the society has increased until now it has fifty-one members.

Later in the evening Miss Florence Hawkins, the president of the Local Union, extended greeting to the society and wished it a bright and prosperous future.

Vocal solos sung by Miss Florence Perrine, accompanied by Arthur Mosher were much enjoyed. Her second selection received a hearty encore. Miss Evelina Benton cleverly recited a few well chosen pieces and her work was likewise encored, as was also a recitation by Miss Hazel Grant.

Other numbers well received were a piano duet by Clifford Braider and Robert Schreiner; violin solo, Arthur Mosher; cornet solo, Whitney Frazee, accompanist, Clifford Braider; and a violin and cornet duet, Arthur Mosher and Whitney Frazee, accompanied by Clifford Braider.

Among the visiting delegates were representatives from the societies of the First Presbyterian, Crescent Avenue, Trinity Reformed, First Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist and Seventh-Day Baptist churches and Warren chapel.

Improving Second Street.

The street commissioner is making a great improvement at the corner of West Second and New streets by connecting the west corner with the New street sewer in order to do away with the dip across Second street and to prevent the washing out of New street, near the railroad bridge. The improvement is in connection with the surfacing of Second street and will be greatly appreciated by residents in that section.

Pictures in The World.

Among the Plainfielders attending the police festivities in New York last week were Roundsman John J. Flynn and Mr. Hibbard, of the Hotel Imperial. They witnessed the big parade of blue-coats Friday, occuping front seats in one of the big grand-stands. Saturday's New York World contained excellent pictures of both Mr. Flynn and Mr. Hibbard.

Children's Day at Trinity.

Children's Day will be observed at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. A service entitled "Summer's Message," will be rendered by the Sunday-school. There will also be infant baptism at the morning service. Parents are requested to notify Pastor Schenck before Sunday if they have children to be baptized.

Horse Caused Trouble.

A horse, belonging to Charles Debele, slipped and fell on Second street opposite Exchange alley, Saturday evening. It began struggling and but for the timely arrival of Assistant Chief Andrew Jennings, would have caused serious damage. As it was the harness was badly broken.

QUIETLY WEDDED IN BOWER OF DAISIES.

Miss Helen A. Hazen and Albert R. Sampson Married at High Noon Today.

WAS A PRETTY CEREMONY.

ONLY THE RELATIVES AND IMMEDIATE FRIENDS WERE PRESENT.

Wedding Took Place at Home of the Bride on Watchung Avenue—The Bride's Gown—Couple Will Reside in Jersey City.

In the home of the bride on Watchung avenue, Miss Helen Augusta Hazen, youngest daughter of Mrs. Hannah E. Hazen and the late Charles P. Hazen, and Albert Rhoades Sampson, of East Fifth street, were quietly married at high noon today in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and intimate friends.

It was a "daisy wedding." In every part of the house daisies predominated in the profusion of floral decorations of green and white. Palms, ferns and other plants were grouped about the spacious rooms in a manner that was exceedingly tasteful. The beauty of the scene was much enhanced by the lavish arrangement of daisies tied with white satin ribbons, gracing every conceivable part of the home.

Banked with pretty effect at the farther end of the parlors was an abundance of flowers, and it was here that the nuptial ceremony was performed according to the ritual of the Episcopal church. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Prrsbyterian church, officiated and conducted the wedding service with much impressiveness.

The bride was attended by Miss S. Pearl Taber, of Holyoke, Massachusetts, an old college chum, and her sister, Miss Grace Elizabeth Hazen. There was neither a maid-of-honor nor a best man, it being the desire of both the bride and the groom to have the happy event consummated with as little pomp as possible. Acting as ushers were Raymond S. Barlow, of Brooklyn; Frederick Peters, of Fishkill, N. Y., a cousin of the bride; Walter Mather Sampson, a brother of the groom, and E. Irving Oakley, both of this city. Miss Letitia Remsen played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as the bridal party entered the parlor and during the wedding she played "Oh, Promise Me."

The bride was charmingly gowned in white silk trimmed with passementrie. Her veil of tulle was caught up by a large bunch of orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was composed of lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony a reception was held which was followed by a luncheon. The bride and groom left on an afternoon train for an extended wedding trip. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Sampson will reside in Jersey City.

Mr. Sampson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Sampson, of East Fifth street. He is the secretary and treasurer of the Foote Manufacturing Company, of Jersey City, where he enjoys a large acquaintance in business and social circles.

Witnessing the marriage ceremony were a number of close friends of the happy couple who came from Virginia, Philadelphia, New York and elsewhere. The guest of honor was Mrs. Letitia Remsen, a great aunt of the bride, who is now in her ninety-eighth year. The bride received a large number of handsome presents including checks for a substantial amounts, cut glass, Dresden china, silverware and household furniture and ornaments.

Heroic Action Acknowledged.

The heroic action of Fred Breen, of the fire department, in stopping the runaway horse of Charles Cook, of Crescent avenue, on Decoration Day, has been gracefully acknowledged by the owner of the horse and buggy. Mr. Cook personally thanked the plucky young fire laddie and amply repaid him for the loss he had sustained by tearing his clothes in the successful attempt to stop the frightened animal.

THE PLAINFIELDERS DEFEATED

REGULAR TICKET AT NEW YORK PRODUCE EXCHANGE WAS BEATEN.

E. T. Barrows Defeated for President by Forty, F. H. Andrews for Vice-President by Ten.

Elliott T. Barrows and F. H. Andrews, of this city, were defeated for re-election as president and vice-president, respectively, of the Produce Exchange, New York. The annual election of officers was held yesterday, and the regular ticket was beaten completely by an independent ticket. None of the offices elected were Plainfield men. John V. Barnes was elected president by forty votes and E. C. Burgess, vice-president, by ten votes.

Concerning the contest the New York Tribune this morning says:

"For the first time in several years an opposition ticket was put in the field, causing one of the liveliest elections ever held. A precedent was established in that former President Barrows was nominated for a third term. The custom has always been for a two-term management, at the expiration of which the vice president received the presidential nomination.

"The independent faction of the exchange, composed maiply of the younger element, has been opposed to the amendments to the gratuity fund that have been adopted, many of which are in litigation now. They urged that the gratuity system, which has been championed by Mr. Barrows, bore too heavily upon them. The alleged extravagant expenses incurred by the Barrows management was not the only ground for opposition.

"The opposition ticket had for one of their planks the promise that the causes of the admitted decline in the commerce of this port would be investigated, and that a study would be made looking to a betterment of existing conditions. The independents declared that President Barrows had not shown sufficient interest in that important subject."

COMPETITIVE DRILL.

Will be Given by Boys of Plainfield High School Battalion Friday.

A competitive drill will be held by the Plainfield High School battalion in Washington Hall Friday. To the winner in a drilling contest participated in by the several companies forming the battalion will be awarded a handsome flag, and to the cadet adjudged to be the most proficient in the manual of arms will be given a silver metal.

This will be the first competitive drill held by the battalion since its organization three years ago. Under the competent instruction of Albert B. Meredith, of the High School teaching corps, who acts as commandant, the cadets have obtained a knowledge in military tactics, which greatly redounds to the credit of the school. Owing to the limited space on the drilling floor of the hall, the public will be necessarily excluded from witnessing the contest.

Helpless by Drunk.

Sentence was suspended on Abram Wild in the city court this morning who had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness. He was found helplessly intoxicated on East Front street yesterday afternoon by Patrolman Gamo.

K. of P. Anniversary.

Perseverance Lodge No. 74, K. of P., will celebrate its anniversary Friday evening, June 14.

CONCESSIONS OFFERED TO POND EMPLOYES.

But Strikers Decided Not to Accept Offer of 57 Hours' Work and 60 Hours' Pay.

MEETING THIS AFTERNOON.

COMPANY SAYS MEN MUST RETURN BY JUNE 10.

Strikers Declare They Will Hold Out For Fifty-four Hours' Work as Situation at Aluminum Works Depends on Them.

Closely following the temporary granting of the machinists' demands at the Aluminum Plate and Press Company, word was received by the strikers yesterday that the officials of the Pond Tool Works were willing to make a concession. Immediate action was taken in the matter and a meeting was called for this morning when it was learned that the company's terms were fifty-seven hours per week with sixty hours' pay. An invitation was also extended to the Pond men alone to meet the gang bosses in Knights of Pythias Hall this afternoon and discuss the proposition and, if possible, agree upon some plan of procedure.

The strikers, however, decided not to accept the proffered terms nor to meet the bosses. Instead a committee was appointed which will confer with the bosses this afternoon at the time mentioned. It is hardly likely that the conference will result in anything definite as the men are determined not to return to work under any conditions but those originally named. They argue that it is not a matter which concerns the Pond men alone, but every machinist in the city must be taken into consideration. The Aluminum employes are now at work on a fifty four hour schedule with sixty hours' pay, but whether they continue to do so or not, depends upon the action taken by the men still on strike. The men at work have agreed to sanction any terms their colleagues make with the employers. For this reason the latter have resolved upon a determined effort to secure the schedule asked for in the national movement.

A notice was posted in the Pond shop this morning to the effect that all machinists not returning to work Monday, June 10, would no longer be considered employes and would be requested to remove their belongings from the building. The Union will act upon the notice at the meeting to be held this afternoon.

CELEBRATE VICTORY.

West End Hose Company Will Give Reception in Honor of Baseball Game Victors.

The West End Hose Company, at its meeting last evening, decided to suitably celebrate the second consecutive victory won by its baseball team in the annual game with its rival, the Warren Engine Company. With this in view a committee of two, composed of Peter Stram and John Bremmer, was appointed to arrange for a reception to be given the ballplayers at the Manhattan Hotel on Somerset street, Monday evening. An invitation has been sent to the Warren Company's baseball nine to be the guests of the West End team on this occasion. The committee is engaged in arranging a programme for the evening's entertainment.

Another committee was also appointed to make arrangements for the annual picnic. On this committee are Charles Keller, Dennis Baglin, Henry Graceley, Charles Graeder and Gustave Feiring.

Mr. Rogers, who has been in the bicycle business eleven years, will devote his time entirely to his other business, that of the manufacture of silverware, under the firm name of William H. Rogers' Corporation. Headquarters will probably be established in the Babcock building.

The Plainfield Photo Supply Company will undoubtedly close up its present place of business when possession of the new place is taken.

GETTING READY FOR CITY COMMENCEMENT

School Board Decided to Admit to Graduation Exercises by Ticket Only.

APPOINTED COMMITTEES.

SUPERINTENDENT MAXSON REAPPOINTED WITH $3,500 SALARY.

C. E. Brooks and Alex. Gilbert Offered Prizes For Personal Competitive Drill in High School Cadet Battalion—All is Ready for Commencement.

Important details concerning the annual commencement of the Plainfield public schools, which is to be held Thursday, June 20, occupied the greater part of the time at the regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education which was held last evening. Everything is now in readiness for the exercises which for the most part will not vary from those of previous years.

As the commencement this year will be held in the First Baptist church, the necessity of making some arrangement for the reception of the audience other than that used at Music Hall, became evident, and the board adopted a new system whereby admission to the edifice will be by ticket entirely.

The admission to Music Hall was free to all, only the orchestra and part of the circle being reserved. Persons with no other purpose in view but to hear the music or to secure a seat to be sold later, would crowd in the hall early and deprive someone else of a place. The constant shuffle of feet about the gallery also caused much annoyance.

At the suggestion of Superintendent Maxson, it was decided to allow no one to enter the church not provided with a ticket which may be had for the asking of Principal Travell, of the High School. It is thought this method will eliminate the undesirable element.

The following committees were nominated to serve as judges in the prize competitions: English composition, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, chairman, Miss Mabelle Phillips and Mrs. E. W. Conklin; penmanship, Jan vanHerwerden, chairman, Noble C. King and D. E. Titsworth; spelling, H. M. Maxson. Superintendent Maxson reported that he had secured Dr. Louis Bevier, of Rutgers College, to deliver the address at the grammar class graduation. He also stated that Charles E. Brooks and Alex. Gilbert had each offered a prize of $5 for a personal competition drill of the High School Cadets. Clerk F. A. Clark reported all minor details of the commencement to be in readiness.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to business of a routine nature. It included the acceptance of Dr. W. H. Murray's resignation as one of the medical inspectors. The appointment of his successor was deferred. The medical inspectors' report for the month stated that 427 pupils had been examined. Tax Collector Smith reported the receiving of $1,230.26 which had been deposited, as was also $129 received for tuition fees. The custodian of school moneys reported the disbursements for the month to have been $6,474.51 and the receipts $1,659 26, leaving a balance on hand of $399.78.

In order to conform with the new school law, the committee on supplies was empowered to advertise and purchase all supplies without conferring with the board. The committee on fuel was also ordered to advertise for bids for the furnishing of coal for the coming year. A request from several janitors for a two weeks' vacation during the coming summer, was referred to proper committee with the understanding that, provided they were granted, other janitors be placed in charge during their absence. The appointment of Henry M. Maxson, as superintendent of schools for the coming year at a salary of $3,500, was confirmed.

Before adjourning the members of the board discussed the recent misunderstanding of the G. A. R. officials in regard to the Memorial Day exercises at the schools. They knew nothing of the matter until some time after it had happened and regretted that there had been any ill feeling in the matter.

Summer Uniforms for Police.

The members of the local police force donned their summer uniforms Saturday evening. The most noticeable change was the substitution of light helmets for those used during the winter which are blue in color.

LITERARY.

The Cosmopolitan for June is even more than usually strong in fiction. Ian MacLaren tells more adventures of that incorrigible youth, Sparrow Richard LeGatlienne revives with charming freshness and simplicity the love-story of "Aucassin and Nicolete." H. G. Wells concludes "The First Men in the Moon" with Cavor's sudden death at the hands of the Grand Lunar. Tudor Jenks contributes a clever little satire on justice. Egerton Castle's powerful novel, "The Secret Orchard," continues, and O'Neill Lathom writes a half-humorous, half-sad fairy-story, "Prince Weary-Heart."

The articles on "Russia of Today," by Henry Norman, which have been a feature of Scribner's Magazine (but have been interrupted for several numbers), are resumed in the June number with a paper on "Finland," which is just now the centre of interest on account of the efforts of the Russian Government to suppress the Finnish language in official business. Walter A. Wyckoff in this number deals with a happy episode in his career as a working man. He tells of the life of a section hand on the Union Pacific Railroad, and gives a vivid account of the manly qualities of the men he labored with. A new writer of sea stories, James B. Connolly, who first appeared in Scribner's several months ago, has in this number another of his stirring tales entitled "On the Echo o' the Mern."

The delightful humor of Mrs. Wiggin's fiction is shown at its best in the short serial called "The Dairy of a Goose Girl." The setting is in a quaint old English town and the story is fortunately illustrated by Sheppersson, the English artist. Ernest Seton-Thompson begins in this number one of his tales of animal life, the hero in this one being "Krag, the Kootenay Ram." The great "Raffles" in this number is shown in his most daring exploit—undertaken to baffle the London police. There is an amusing story, "Clara's Vocation," by a new writer; poems by J. R. Taylor, and others; and a discussion of some of the artistic features of the Buffalo Exposition by two well-known architects, Walter Cook and John M. Carrere.

Ants, Cockroaches, Bed Bugs.

Mix, say, a 25c. box of "Rough on Rats" carefully with a pound or so of mashed boiled potatoes, or with a loaf of finely crumbled dampened bread, or two tin cups of fine powdered sugar, and place about their haunts, out of reach of children or pet animals. Even the hardier Black Cockroaches, Beetles, Wood or Water Bugs, in one or two applications will be completely annihilated. "Rough on Rats" is the only thing that will effectually and permanently annihilate Bed Bugs, and it stands unrivalled the world over for the prompt and effective extermination of Rats and Mice. 15 and 25 boxes at druggists.

M'LAURIN RETRACTS

Withdraws His Resignation as United States Senator.

LETTER TO GOVERNOR M'SWEENEY

Junior Senator Will Hold to His Commission at the Demand of the Governor, but Will Not Be Bossed.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 4.—Senator McLaurin, under date of Bennettsville, S. C., has written Governor McSweeney the following letter acceding to the governor's request that he withdraw his resignation:

"Your letter of the 31st of May, in which you decline to accept my resignation as United States senator, is received.

"The grounds upon which your declination is predicated are that the people are entitled to one year of peace and freedom from political battles and bitterness and that a campaign this year would be a 'calamity to the state, to be torn asunder by a heated canvass in the off year in politics, without any possible good to come of it.'

"As an additional reason you suggest that any disturbance of the harmony of the people in their work for the achievement of the material prosperity of the state might result in retarding this progress. I appreciate fully the force of the reasons given by you and the effects upon the people of the state of a heated and strife producing contest for United States senator this year. For the sake of the 'peace, prosperity and happiness of the people of this state' I am willing to hold on to my commission of United States senator and to continue to serve the state as I have done in the past to the 'best of my ability.'

"But in retaining my seat in the senate I will not consent to be handicapped or bossed by any one claiming a right to judge my motives and actions. I propose to exercise my judgment on all national questions under the influence of a high sense of responsibility to the people and to work for the upbuilding of the political and material interest of my state. I recognize fully my accountability to the sovereign people and am always ready to give a strict account of my official acts to them. Your suggestion that it is not your purpose by your official action 'to prevent the fullest and freest discussion of all public questions and the education of the people along all political lines' is in accord with your patriotic course in reference to the resignations. In consenting to hold on to my commission I wish it understood that it is in response to your patriotic appeal that it is for the good of the state and not because I feared to go before the people and discuss with the senior senator or others the national issues of the day. I am a public servant of the people, and it is my duty and pleasure always to promote their interest in every way I can."

Massachusetts Churches Threatened.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., June 4.—The sexton of the Third Universalist church in West Somerville found a note on the front door of the church making a threat that by next Sunday all of the West Somerville churches will be destroyed by dynamite unless next Saturday is observed as a holy day. The notice, written on note paper with a pencil, read as follows: "I, the Lord, live to reign. This church perhaps opened for the last time yesterday. All the churches in West Somerville will be destroyed by dynamite before next Sunday morning unless the pastors hold services and observe next Saturday as a holy day." The note is similar to one which was posted on the doors of the North Cambridge churches Sunday morning.

Mrs. McKinley Holding Out Well.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Dr. Rixey, after remaining in the White House for nearly three hours, reports there has been no change in the condition of Mrs. McKinley. She rested comfortably last night. The complaint which manifested itself while Mrs. McKinley was away from Washington and which has so seriously sapped her strength has been checked, but its effect has been to leave her in a weak condition. At the White House there is a very slight increase in cheerfulness, and the hope is expressed that Mrs. McKinley may again give evidence of the remarkable vitality she has displayed heretofore.

Lumber Yards Burned.

CUMBERLAND, Md., June 4.—Thomas Burger & Sons' sash and door factory, together with their immense lumber yards, have been destroyed by fire. The loss is about $50,000, partly covered by insurance. The fire started in the boiler room. Two dwellings adjoining owned by Alex King were partially destroyed, one of the occupants, Mrs. Jacob Gogley, an aged woman, being overcome by smoke and carried out for dead. She will hardly recover. Jack Hodel, a volunteer fireman, was blown from the building by exploding oil and badly scalded.

New York Summer Institutes.

ALBANY, June 4.—Superintendent Charles R. Skinner of the state department of public instruction announces that the state summer institutes for teachers will be held at Chautauqua and at Thousand Island park, on the St. Lawrence from July 8 to 26 inclusive. The former will be in charge of Philip M. Hull and the latter of Charles A. Shaver, state institute instructors.

Missing Son Heard From.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 4.—Mr. and Mrs. George Alden, the parents of Louis Alden, the boy who disappeared from his home in this city five years ago, have received a letter from their missing son dated in Australia. The boy states that he has been sick and would like to come home. His parents had long mourned him as dead.

To Begin Tunnel Engineering.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The engineers of the rapid transit commission will begin at once a series of borings in the bed of the East river, and this will mark the beginning of work on the tunnel to Brooklyn. It is said that several months will be spent in surveys and the preparation of working plans before the contracts can be let.

Foliage Attacked by Beetles.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 4.—The foliage of the white ash trees in this section is being ruined by a strange blight. Elms are rendered bare by the attack of myriads of beetles which appear to be proof against the usual remedies.

CHINA'S NEW CABINET

Two Progressives and Two Conservatives Appointed.

WALDERSEE'S DEPARTURE SUDDEN.

A New Section of the City Transferred to Chinese—Native Officer Requests Temporary Military Aid.

PEKING, June 4.—Former Viceroy Hsu Ying Kuei has been appointed a member of the new cabinet. He is regarded as friendly to foreigners, and he and Wang Wen Shao represented the progressive element in the cabinet. On the contrary, the other two ministers, Yung Lu and Lu Chuan Lin, are regarded as conservatives. It is expected that further appointments will be made and that the number of ministers will be six or seven, as formerly. No prince has as yet been designated as a member, although Prince Li, the previous head of the cabinet, is living in retirement in Peking.

Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein gave a farewell reception in honor of Field Marshal Count von Waldersee, who left Peking yesterday. All the generals and diplomats were represented. The sudden departure of the commander in chief of the allied forces is a great surprise to every body.

The Germans have transferred another section of Peking that has been under their charge to the Chinese. The Japanese section has also practically been transferred to the Chinese, the Japanese merely giving assistance when it is needed.

Yesterday one of the governors of Peking conferred with the officer in charge of the British section. The governor stated that assistance of the British was desired until the Chinese troops arrive. Although the main transfer has already been accomplished and the governors have expressed a determination to prevent a renewal of disturbances, a strong military force, either Chinese or foreign, is needed in addition to more police. The latter will be derided by the people unless they are thus supported by the military. The bands of robbers which infest the country are the only people under arms in this vicinity at the present time with the exception of the foreign troops.

FIGHT AT TIEN-TSIN.

Welsh Fusileers Fire on French and Germans.

LONDON, June 4.—A news agency dispatch from Tien-tsin says there was a serious fracas between soldiers on the Taku road Sunday night. Some Welsh fusileers who tried to prevent French soldiers from breaking into a house were attacked with bayonets and bricks.

A number of Germans came to the assistance of the French, and the fusileers fired, killing one French soldier and wounding three others. Five Germans were also wounded. The fusileers had four wounded.

The affray was ended on the arrival of a German officer with a strong guard.

To Inspect Rivers and Harbors.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Chairman T. E. Burton and a number of members of the house committee on rivers and harbors, several of whom were accompanied by their wives, left Washington in a special car over the Southern railway for an extended trip. Mobile will be visited first and then New Orleans, where other members of the committee will join the party. From the latter city the itinerary will embrace points in Texas and California and up the Pacific coast as far as Washington. The purpose of the journey is to acquaint the committeemen personally with the rivers and harbors of the remote territory traversed in order to enable them to consider prospective legislation that may affect them. The party will be gone several weeks.

Connecticut Legislation.

HARTFORD, June 4.—In the state senate yesterday it was voted not to attempt the establishment of a state pulmonary disease hospital this session, but to appropriate $25,000 to try the experiment in connection with the Hartford hospital. The senate voted to adjourn finally on June 12. The house passed without debate a bill in favor of a constitutional amendment providing that judges of courts of common pleas be appointed by the governor instead of elected by the general assembly, as at present.

A Long Journey to Prison.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 4.—D. V. Rieger, convicted of wrecking the Missouri National bank, of which he was president, arrived at the penitentiary unattended and began serving his six years' sentence. Rieger came from New York, where he had been living incognito for the last two years, while his case was under appeal. An effort is being made to have him pardoned by President McKinley.

Mr. Reid Ready to Settle.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 4.—Mr. Reid, the Newfoundland railway contractor, has arrived here with his Canadian solicitor to negotiate with the colonial ministry for a settlement of the railway difficulty. An adjustment of the dispute will enable him to convert his properties into a limited liability company with large capital, in return for which extensive developments are promised.

Soldiers' Home Opened.

ATLANTA, June 4.—The Confederate Soldiers' home, movement for which was inaugurated 12 years ago by Henry W. Grady, was opened here. About 40 veterans were admitted. Through the efforts of Grady the home was ready for occupancy eight years ago, but the parsimony of the Georgia legislature prevented the opening until now.

Santo Domingo Quiet.

SANTO DOMINGO, June 4.—The government has issued a decree enforcing the constitutional guarantees, which were suspended on account of the last revolution. The political prisoners have been released, the country is quiet and confidence has been restored.

Fatal Railway Collision.

WHEELING, June 4.—Two men were killed and about 20 injured, two fatally, in a rear end collision between two sections of a work train on the Pittsburg, Ohio Valley and Cincinnati railroad near Powhatan.

The Forty-fifth Mustered Out.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—The Forty-fifth infantry, United States volunteers, was mustered out of the service at the Presidio yesterday.

A BOLD ROBBERY.

Aged Man Held Up—Exciting Chase After Thieves.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., June 4.—One of the most daring hold ups ever perpetrated in this part of the state took place in Ellwood City yesterday afternoon. Three unmasked men met Costen Burns, an aged and wealthy resident of that place who started to his quarries with $2,100 to pay his hands. Just in the rear of the Ellwood Seamless Tube works, almost in the heart of the town, he met three strangers in a rig. They accosted him, and he entered into conversation with them. Suddenly one of the trio, a large man wearing black goggles, stepped into Burns buggy and seized him by the throat. One of the others seized the satchel containing the cash intended for the quarrymen and jumped into his own rig. The man with the goggles followed, and the three lashed their horse to a run and disappeared before Burns could recover from the attack.

A posse was hastily organized and came upon the highwaymen about two miles from the scene of the robbery. A heavy exchange of shots took place between pursuers and pursued. One of the robbers was crippled by a shot and was an easy victim, while the leader, the man with the goggles, was captured after his ammunition was exhausted. Over $400 was found on the second robber's person, but the third man escaped and is yet at large with $1,700 of the stolen money. The prisoners are strangers here and absolutely refuse to talk. The man who escaped went in the direction of the Ohio line.

Lackawanna Road and Strikers.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The notice posted in the Lackawanna depot at Hoboken on Saturday stating that laborers and mechanics were wanted has been removed. Special Agent Beatty states that the company has all the men it wants and that every position in the yard is filled. About 20 men gathered at the depot yesterday and applied for employment, but were turned away. It is said that a large force of car workers were laid off at Secaucus Saturday night because the company had no work for them. There are about 275 men employed in the Dover car shops, so Special Agent Beatty stated, and no more men were wanted there. He also said that at Kingsland the shops were working with their full quota of men. The striking car workers say they are sticking to their demands and are determined to continue the fight until the company gives up. They claim that work in all the car shops along the road has been seriously crippled.

Squatters to Be Ejected.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—At the request of the interior department the secretary of war has instructed General Merriam, commanding the department of the Colorado, to employ as many of his troops as may be necessary to maintain order on the Kiowa Indian reservation in Oklahoma. This action is based on a dispatch from Colonel Randlett, in charge of the Kiowa and Comanche agency, reporting that at least 1,000 intruders had settled in the Wichita mountains, which are within the Kiowa lands, soon to be opened to settlement, and that they claimed the right to do so under the United States mineral laws. Secretary Hitchcock said that they had no rights whatever and that they would be promptly ejected.

Mrs. Kennedy on Trial.

KANSAS CITY, June 4.—Mrs. Lulu Prince-Kennedy, the 20-year-old bride of a month who last January shot and killed her husband, Philip H. Kennedy, has been placed on trial in the criminal court here. For the first time since her preliminary hearing five months ago the prisoner gave way to tears. Kennedy was killed two days after he had filed a suit to have his marriage set aside, alleging duress. Mrs. Kennedy's father, W. C. Prince, proprietor of a billiard hall, and her brothers, Bert, a traveling musician, and Will, a young business man, will be tried later on a charge of conspiring with Mrs. Kennedy to kill her husband.

To Investigate New York Officials.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Judge Rufus B. Cowing, in general sessions, swore in the June grand jury, which will be asked by District Attorney Philbin to make an investigation of the disbursements for supplies of the various city departments. The judge in charging the grand jurors as to their duties laid particular stress upon the inquisitorial body's power to make investigations of city officials who might be found derelict in their official duties.

Ill From Eating Ice Cream.

BEECHDALE, Conn., June 4.—Twenty-six picnickers are ill as a result of eating ice cream. Soon after eating the first plate Miss Collins of North Stonington was taken violently ill, and before medical aid could be called seven others were rolling on the ground in terrible agony, suffering with cramps and vomiting violently. Before an hour had passed 26 were sick.

The Independence Afloat.

BOSTON, June 4.—Another intended cup defender, the pride and hope of Yankee land, the Independence, was given an airing, nothing more than a jogging to stretch sails and rigging, in Massachusetts bay yesterday, and from what little actual sailing was done the Crowninshield yacht certainly showed herself to be very speedy, particularly with started sheets.

New York Markets.

WOMEN SUFFRAGISTS.

Five Thousand Dollars Pledged to Carry on Reform.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 4.—The fourth day of the convention of the National Suffrage association was a busy one. Five thousand dollars was pledged by the delegates and visitors during the afternoon session for the suffrage work next year.

Another important action was that relating to the regulation of social vice. The action of the physicians and surgeons in their convention at St. Paul last week stirred up the delegates, and a strong speech was made by Rev. Anna Shaw of Philadelphia as to the attitude of the convention toward laws for the segregation of vice in the cities of the United States. Miss Shaw said:

"No worse law under the sun than that for the segregation of vice in cities could be passed, and all the women of the convention are opposed to any propositions on this subject. I want to be known as standing forever and forever against such a crime."

Miss Susan B. Anthony moved the appointment of a committee, consisting of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Rev. Anna Shaw, Rachael Foster Avery and Alice Stone Blackwell, to appear before the medical convention and show the surgeons what attitude the convention has taken in regard to the regulation of social vice. Miss Anthony was added to the committee. It was further decided that the memorial bearing on this matter shall be read before the medical convention if the committee shall get a hearing.

The afternoon session was a long one owing to the fact that each of the state presidents made five minute addresses.

NEWS ALL TOLD.

War Department Hears Nothing More From Kitchener.

LONDON, June 4.—The war office makes the following announcement:

"All the information received from Lord Kitchener respecting recent engagements in South Africa has been communicated to the public."

A dispatch from Willowmore, Cape Colony, says:

"Commandant Sheeper, with 700 men, attacked Willowmore Saturday, but was beaten off after nine hours' fighting."

Boers Harass British.

PRETORIA, June 4.—A number of Boers who were captured by intelligence office men near Pietersburg, Transvaal, were found to have a thousand rounds of ammunition each. They state that Boers in the northern part of the Transvaal are suffering considerably from fever. They have no physicians, and many are dying. Boer marauders continue to make trouble for the British. They generally avoid a battle, but wait for favorable opportunities to attack small parties by ambush, and inasmuch as they are badly off for clothing and boots they use all their skill to kill in order to strip the dead. Commandant Ben Viljoen, with a considerable number of men, is dodging about to escape the British troops between the railway at Carolina and Ermelo. He avoids fighting, but some of his men are surrendering.

Standard Oil Takes Them In.

CLEVELAND, June 4.—The works of Schofield, Shurmer & Tagle have passed into the control of the Standard Oil company. With the property there was also turned over the interests of the Cleveland Refining company, owned principally by Teagle and Shurmer. The Scio Refining company was turned over to the Standard a few days ago. The amount involved in the deal is about $1,000,000. Employees of the sold out companies have incorporated the Great Western Oil company and will take up the business of Schofield, Shurmer & Teagle and the two other former independent companies on the same lines that Schofield, Shurmer & Teagle followed. The sale to the Standard ends what has long been a keen fight between it and the independent companies.

Shipyard Machinists Strike.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., June 4.—The machinists in the employ of the Newport News and Drydock company to the number of 500, which virtually includes all the skilled mechanics in the machine department, are out on strike, their demands for a shorter working day having been refused by Superintendent Post. The men are conducting themselves in an orderly manner, making no demonstrations and going their respective ways as soon as the last of the machinists who had gone in came out to join them, after securing their tools.

End of Remarkable Case.

GENESEO, N. Y., June 4.—The indictment against Charles Flaherty, an ex-priest of Mount Morris, alleging assault, has been dismissed. This is one of the most remarkable cases of the kind in the history of the state. The indictment was found nine years ago. He was twice tried and convicted, and appeals were taken to the appellate court in each instance. Each time the case was returned for a new trial. The dismissal was asked for by the district attorney on the ground that he thought it impossible to again convict Flaherty.

President Havemeyer to Resign?

NEW YORK, June 4.—It is reported that President Havemeyer will resign from the presidency of the American Sugar Refining company and be succeeded by W. B. Thomas of Boston. President Havemeyer has sent out word that he has nothing to say about the report. It is not generally believed in Wall street that Mr. Havemeyer will resign.

Manufacturers Meet.

DETROIT, June 4.—Prominent manufacturers and their representatives from all parts of the country are in Detroit to attend the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers which began this morning in the convention hall of the Hotel Cadillac. It is expected that there will be over 300 members present.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Comptroller Coler announces that he will have advertisements inserted in The City Record within a few days for a bond sale of $3,000,000 of 3½ per cent gold certificates maturing in 1941. The bonds will be for the rapid transit, street openings and new parks.

THE PENSION BUREAU

Commissioner Announces the Figures For Eleven Months.

SURVIVORS OF MANY WARS ON LISTS.

New Names Added Since July 1 Number 43,397—Nearly One Hundred Thousand New Certificates Issued.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The commissioner of pensions states results of the efforts of the bureau for the 11 months of the fiscal year ending May 31 as follows:

Original pensions have been granted to 2 widows for account of war of 1812, 115 widows and 7 survivors for account of Indian wars, 325 widows and 14 survivors for account of Mexican war and 6 for account of service prior to 1861, making a total of 466 pensioned for account of service prior to the civil war.

For account of the civil war there have been pensioned for disabilities incurred in service 1,051 invalids; for disabilities as provided by act of 1890, 16,852 invalids; for widows under old law, 2,901; for widows under act of 1890 and amendments, 14,479; for nurses, 25, making a total original issue for account of the civil war of 35,308.

In addition to this number there have been restored to the rolls 4,100 names that were previously dropped or suspended for various causes.

There are now about 160,000 of those drawing under the act of 1890 and amendments that receive the maximum rate of $12 per month.

There have been 619 pensioned that carried a total of $927,314, an average of $1,514 each, as first payment. A large per cent of these cases are known as "old minors" and only appear on the rolls for one payment.

For account of service in the war with Spain there have been granted 2,369 pensions to invalids and 1,156 pensions to widows and dependents.

The total number of claims filed for account of this war to date has been 43,874.

Under the act of March 3, 1901, providing for the repensioning of widows who remarried and again became widows there have been 1,950 claims filed.

There will be an increase in the number of pensioners on the rolls at the close of the present fiscal year, June 30, 1901, over the previous year.

In addition to the number of original pensions granted as set forth for the 11 months there have been issued for increases, rerating and accrued pensions 50,680 certificates, or the bureau has written for all classes 94,077 certificates.

There have been 43,397 names added to the rolls since July 1, 1900.

Rothschilds' Financing to End.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Comptroller Coler has arranged with the Savings Bank association to take up nearly $9,000,000 of New York county bonds issued in Tweed days and upon which the city has paid 6 per cent interest. These bonds expire on July 1, and the savings banks of the city have agreed to carry them on extension for 3 3-10 per cent interest, which will be a large saving to the city. There were $15,000,000 worth of these old Tweed bonds, and the interest paid on some of them was as high as 7 per cent. The Rothschilds floated them for the city, and the comptroller said that the new arrangements for handling the bonds virtually would put an end to the Rothschilds acting in the capacity of financial agents for the municipality.

At the Exposition.

BUFFALO, June 4.—The distinctive feature at the exposition yesterday was the general beginning of active operations in practically all the exhibits where power is used. The shoemakers, the government engravers and printers, the looms, lathes, engines and motors and other machinery and manufacturers got going. The weather was a decided improvement over that of any day for a week, but it still remains cool. Three hundred nobles of the Mystic Shrine, members of Moslem temple of Detroit, arrived in the city. Today's feature will be the real opening of the stadium. The splendid carnival of athletics will begin at 2:30 o'clock in the great arena. Athletes from all the colleges but Yale will compete.

A Brutal Murder.

KANSAS CITY, June 4.—While rocking a baby in her home at Second street and Woodland avenue Mrs. Mary Schuler, 70 years old, was struck down with a hatchet by a negro who appeared suddenly before her. Mrs. Schuler's skull was fractured, and she cannot live. The negro escaped and is being searched for by a large number of neighbors and policemen. The motive was robbery. Neighbors were attracted to the Schuler house by the woman's screams.

Naval Movements.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The navy department has been informed of the departure of Rear Admiral Kempff on the Kentucky from Amoy for Woosung, China. It also has been advised of the arrival of Admiral Remey aboard the Brooklyn at Wellington, New Zealand. The Newark left Colombo for Aden Saturday. The Kearsarge arrived at Newport.

The Strike.

There is no doubt but that the employes of the Aluminum Plate and Press Works have Superintendent Leary to thank for the final granting of the fifty-four hour a week schedule which has been temporarily adopted at that establishment. Had the matter rested alone with Mr. Leary, a settlement might have been reached before. As it is, the Aluminum men are greatly pleased and Mr. Leary is a very popular man today.

Just what effect the return of the Aluminum men to work will have on the other shops, it is impossible to say. This fifty-four hour schedule was adopted with the express provision that it should be subsequently adjusted to conform with any arrangements which may be made between the local strikers and their employes. There was such a rush of work for the Aluminum Company that the officials decided it was best to start work even with the nine hour schedule than allow the plant to lay idle any longer.

While the strikers conceded certain points regarding the rules for apprentices and over time, the men consider that they have won a substantial victory as the chief point under contension has been granted. The effect on the local strikers will undoubtedly be to encourage the men from the other local shops to hold out with the hope that they will follow the example set by the Aluminum works. At present, however, there are no signs of a speedy settlement.

There is no time in the year when the street signs are more needed than now. The summer brings many strangers, many of whom come by carriage, bicycle or automobile. They are not acquainted with the location of the borough streets and find it hard work to find any thoroughfare there. So Mayor Smalley and the Borough Council should lose no time in providing these much needed signs. There is a regular meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening. Mayor Smalley says that he expects that action will be taken at that time. The Mayor and all the members of the Council should make sure that action is taken at once. The street signs cannot come too soon to please the people of North Plainfield.

The Plainfield High School Athletic Association has failed to pass an amendment to its constitution which would give the managers of its athletic teams the honor that they are justly entitled to. It is the custom of all colleges and most preparatory and High Schools to award the insignia of the institution to the young men who have the management of the various teams. Their work is not easy and it is generally conceded that they are entitled to that honor at least.

A campaign is being waged against the boys who have been accustomed to play ball on the field on Westervelt avenue. One of the neighbors has complained against the baseball players, and the borough police say that hereafter there must be no playing there. A bunch of thirty-five lads was arrested Saturday afternoon and dismissed after a reprimand by Mayor Smalley.

In all the cities of the country, the chiefs of the police departments of which were present at the National convention of chiefs held in New York last week, the question is being asked as to whether the respective chiefs did or did not not support Former Chief Devery, of Tammany Hall, for the presidency of the organization.

Sunday was a time for much rejoicing at Trinity Reformed church. Chiefly as a result of the Twentieth Century Gospel campaign in this city, fifty new names were added to the membership of the church. It is seldom, indeed, that such a body of applicants unite with any church at one time.

The members of the choir of the choir of the First Baptist church have several times treated the people of Plainfield to very enjoyable programmes of musical selections. Their last effort was as successful as the preceding ones and was fully enjoyed by a large audience.

The Johnson brothers, the famous trolley syndicate men, must have an excellent press agent. Hardly a day passes but that the New York, Philadelphia or Trenton papers have a lengthy article about some new move or act of the Johnsons.

There are some great baseball players in Scotch Plains. The Hope chapel team proved an easy mark, and now the 'Plains nine is going to try its luck against bigger game.

TROLLEY COMPANY HAS NOT KEPT AGREEMENT.

will be carried along.

Mr. vanHerwerden offered a resolution transferring $700 from the general fund to the poor fund, and another resolution by the same member for the borrowing of $7,000 for sewer improvements, the same to be secured by a note.

Mr. Craig presented the contract papers between the Kiely Gleason Contracting Company and the city in relation to sewer improvements, and the same were ordered filed in the office of the county clerk at Elizabeth. In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Lee, the alms committee was authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $80 for the purpose of ploughing and planting the farm at the City Industrial Home. Mr. Lee stated that the work, which was necessary, had been done, and the committee asked the Council to grant the amount asked for to pay for the work.

Mr. Coriell offered a resolution that a sum not exceeding $50 be appropriated to paint the city flag-pole and purchase a new flag for the same. He originally asked for $25, but Mr. Buckle questioned the amount as being sufficient, and the sum was changed.

Mr. Lee offered a resolution to the effect that the Mayor be requested to inform the officials of the Plainfield Street Railway Company concerning certain infractions of the city ordinance, and that if they are not remedied the corporation counsel be authorized to take steps to bring the company to terms. The cause of complaint included flat wheel cars on the Fourth street line, the use of Fourth street as a place to store cars, the sprinkling of streets and the general operation of the road. In all of these particulars, Mr. Lee claimed the company had been derelict.

Mr. Lee introduced an ordinance which was placed on its first reading. It provides for the office of a city sealer of weights and measures and is intended to correct many abuses. The ordinance is a lengthy one and covers every point in question, providing for the appointment of a person whose duty it shall be to see that all weights and measures are absolutely correct. The fees accruing to the official are to be paid by the owners of weights and measures. The ordinance provides fines for infractions of rules and regulations and it will cause to be established a city scale.

After the ordinance was read, Mr. Lee moved that it be placed on its second reading. Preslent Dumont interposed and offered a suggestion that copies of the ordinance be made and sent to each member. He said that the ordinance was a long one and had been too hastily read for one to grasp the meaning of the same in detail. He was not prepared to vote on the ordinance until after further consideration.

Mr. Lee replied that a majority of the members were acquainted with the ordinance, but in deference to Mr. Dumont's wishes he would move that copies be sent to every member. This motion prevailed.

Mr. Gloak moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet Thursday evening, June 20, after which Council adjourned.

Take enlightened Boston, "The Hub," for instance, there are more people wearing Specs there than in any other city of its size. Blueflame Oil Stoves.-.-.-.-

They burn ordinary coal oil, have no wick as an asbestos kindler is used for starting, give a powerful blue gas flame and are the safest, quickest and best summer and quick meal stove on the market.

The Automatic Cabinet Grand Oil Stove

The front and back of the cabinet are made in such form that while the burners are completely enclosed by it, the tray for catching any greasy drippings, etc., from the cooking, is entirely exposed for easy cleaning.

Combination Grate Top—Similar to gas range or hot plate—rests on two rails of heavy tubed sheet steel. No sagging of top. The handsome appearance and easy handling by anyone makes the Automatic the ideal of oil stoves.

The Automatic Cabinet Oil Stove.

The Automatic has no valve of any kind and no small thread or needle openings. The oil is supplied at the burning point as fast as consumed and no faster. There is no waste. There are no intricate pipes and valves.

The burner of the Automatic gives an intensely hot blue flame. The burner consists of a chimney and bowl with a lever attachment for raising and lowering to control the flame or extinguish the flame.

Handsome swell front with fancy trimmings, nickle corners and well japanned.

The Auto Sypho Moto Cabinet Grand.

The oil reservoir is perfectly and securely balanced and held in position by two tested absolute springs, which as the oil is used, adjusts automatically the oil level, keeping it always on a level with that in the burners and pipe line. Thus there can be no flooding of burners as the bulk of the oil is always below the oil level. The oil flows from the oil reservoir into a cup at the end of the stove, which allows the reservoir to move and keeps the pipe line charged, the oil being supplied to the point of consumption by means of

SWINGING SYPHON BURNERS.

These burners may be swung apart as far as 18 inches, or together for concentration of heat at any indicated point in the center. They are also easily removed for cleaning. This stove has an open grate top.

The Auto Valvo

is a happy combination of some of the principles of the famous "Automatic" and several features new and original. The result is the best oil stove of its kind on the market. It combines extreme simplicity with effectiveness in operation and is a most satisfactory stove at a reasonable cost.

2 Burner—Price 5.48 3 Burner—Price 6.98

Sterling-Puritan.

The Sterling-Puritan have four inch burners. It is made so that even though by mistake you open the valve very much too wide the flame will come to the right height. On one of these stoves you can do the cooking for a whole family much cheaper than with gasoline or gas.

No. 312, 2 Burner—Price 5.48.

No. 313, 3 Burner—Price 6.98

"Brooklyn" Blue Flame.

These stoves are good cook stoves, burn ordinary coal oil and have a flame that cannot be made too large. They are operated by valves in front of stove and are enclosed on the sides and back.

2 Burner—Price 5.48 3 Burner—Price 6.98

All of the above stoves can be seen in operation at our store in the Housefurnishing Department. Each stove is guaranteed not to smoke or smell. Can be moved anywhere.

The story was told, and came to an end with a sigh and the remark:

"I vowed last night that, if I could prevent it, Richard Raymond should not have the property. The possibility of reaching some one through such an advertisement presented itself. I simply realized that, with no desire to marry, I was sacrificing nothing, and hoped to find a woman similarly situated, to whom an abundance of money would be a blessing sufficiently appreciated."

The lady's eyes had lost their sparkle, but not their fire. Her lips had lost their color and their smile and curves of scorn. They were firmly pressed together, and there were strength and character in them.

"Sir," she said, hardly above a whisper, "you really have no right to place such a condition before a woman and ask her judgment. By nature she is turned too easily to sympathy or prejudice to be held responsible for her opinion in such a case."

"At least you mean that you appreciate my position?"

"Yes."

"And you desire to accomplish the end in view?"

"Yes."

"Surely you would not advise the risk of life-long misery to the woman, regardless of myself, in an attempt to secure what you call a real wife on such short notice?"

"No."

"Very well. That is where I stood, with the only means to accomplishing the end the condition that I be married before midnight."

"Then, sir—" She hesitated. Her eyes were fastened on a spot in the rug. He waited, feeling his heart beating, and wondering why. A moment, and she added: "It shall be done."

"Madam—"

"Don't speak to me, please," she said, lifting her hand without raising her eyes. "I am only a woman, and there are reasons why this touches me deeper than I wish. I know of one who will serve your purpose perfectly. You can trust her. She will neither fail nor deceive you; but I know that there is a condition she will require. Give me your promise that you will accept it, and I will send her to you."

"What is it?" Stanton asked.

"I cannot rightly put it for her. She will have to tell you for herself after she has performed her part."

"But suppose it were something that—"

"I will be responsible that you can easily perform it, without embarrassment, and that it shall in no way touch your pride, your name, your home, or your fortune."

"That is more than I ask, madam. However, I agree to accept the condition, and will see to it, also, that my obligations are properly met."

"Never mind; just write down what you will need to know. Her name is Esther Thorndike. She was never married. She was born of honest American parents in Albecco, Col., December 1, 1867. Her good name is without a blemish. She will meet you at the main entrance to this building at nine o'clock to-night. You can trust her."

How much later Stanton never knew, he started like one waking from a dream.

He knew that she was gone. He had seen her go. She left the room by the private door opening on the corridor; yet he read again the paper lying on his desk to convince himself that it was not all a dream.

"Esther Thorndike," he repeated. "Squint-eyed, one-legged, hunchbacked—something of the sort, I suppose; but what does it matter? It's a rather good idea. She was a remarkable woman. The most remarkable woman I ever met. She must have come for this Esther Thorndike at the start. If I hadn't been a fool I should have known that she never came on such an errand for herself."

He looked at his watch with an exclamation of surprise, caught up his hat and coat and hurried toward the door, bethought him of a word to his office-boy, turned quickly and opened the other door, then started back with a veritable gasp, and stood shaking.

The boy had tilted his chair against the door, the better to protect the entrance to his master's sanctum while waiting for the sound of the bell. The sudden opening of the door sent him headlong into the private office.

Stanton did not notice it, but in speechless, nerveless consternation stood looking across the room, where, against the wall, in the order of their coming, the boy had arranged a dozen applicants.

They were young and old, white and—there was one black one among them.

At the head of the line stood a bedizened duchess from back of Green street. She was a scarred and brazen veteran. At the other end stood a young girl, her eyes on the floor and her cheeks flushed with shame as she crouched away from the rest.

"Good morn'in', Mr. Maicolm," said the duchess, stepping forward. "You've got a good show to pick from, and you'd best be about it, for her that's to be married the day [illegible] her togs on P.D.Q."

"Ladies—" Stanton gasped, and then he stopped to shudder.

He would have begun in almost any other way, but he remembered that they were all there upon his invitation; there as his guests; there to consult with him about becoming his wife. He was too recently under the philosophy of his first caller not to appreciate the situation.

"Ladies," he said again, "you must excuse me. I have already made my selection." And in the simple instinct of self-preservation he pushed the door to and locked it, for the duchess, with clinched fists and purple face, was approaching him. Having locked the door, he turned and fled.

Going down in the elevator, he overheard a whispered conversation between the operator and a neighbor's office boy.

"Dat's him. Dat's de Malcolm. Catch on? I show'd yer de ad."

"Come off. His'n name's Stanton. He's some. Whatcher givin' us?"

"S'pose he a jay, ter hook his own name to a gag like dat? He's him all de same, an' don'tcher forgit. Oh, but de gang o' doves I've took up!"

Stanton left the elevator almost on a run, and pushed into the crowd, but the boy seemed still following him. He was sure his eyes were fixed on him. He knew his feet were close behind him. He almost thought that he could hear him saying to everyone he met: "Dat's him. Dat's de Malcolm. Catch on?"

Till now Raymond had not entered into his calculations. Suddenly, while pushing his way through the crowd, it occurred to him as a most reasonable thing that he might have discovered his error and be on the alert.

"If he should 'catch on,' he could easily stop the best plans I could lay, till after 12 o'clock, at least," he muttered; and, with that thought connecting the two, the phantom boy behind him suddenly became a spy of Raymond's, following him to the registrar's. He changed his plans, hurried to Jersey City, and even took the precaution to engage the services of an obscure clergyman whose name he chanced to know.

"Fool," he muttered, on the way back. "He'd think of Jersey City as quickly as I did. I'll throw him off the track."

He pushed the door to.

To do this he made the record in New York, and, the idea still progressing, continued the plan by securing a permit from the Brooklyn office, and then began the arduous task of waiting till eight o'clock.

CHAPTER V.

For a man who has never had the leisure to appreciate the uses of a social club, absolute inaction, on the very verge of intense action, is intolerable torment. Thinking of anything was utterly out of the question. He did not dare to return to his office. He was afraid of the elevator boy. The sun was never so procrastinating. He dined slowly and mechanically at the city club, and still it was not time. He ordered a carriage and drove to the main entrance of the office building. Still there was time; but there might not be later, and, to avoid unnecessary delay or conversation at the last moment, he carefully instructed the driver that when he returned and entered the carriage he was to start at once, without a word, and drive as rapidly as possible to the ferry.

"When we reach the other side I will tell you further where to go," he said, and turned away; and still there was time to kill.

The driver laid the instructions away in the vacant corner of his brain where he stored such things, and forthwith went to sleep.

Stanton shrank into the darkest corner of the gloomy entrance and went on waiting.

The shrinking was only a matter of instinct. His course and his chances had appeared more and more doubtful with each half hour. There's nothing like immoderate waiting to make a coward of a man, and [illegible] began to appear quite possible that if John Olmstead could speak he would say: "Let the other one have it, Robert, rather than try to save it in such a way as this."

For the hundredth time he tried to fashion Esther Thorndike—the poor deformed creature who was to throw herself away just to serve his purposes.

"Confound it, it's a shame," he muttered. "I've been a blind, selfish brute. I'll tell her so, when she comes, and send her away again. It must be eight o'clock. Ha! there's the clock striking, at last. She's late. Women are not to be trusted, anyway. I—"

A messenger boy touched his arm, repeating the name "Malcolm?" in a questioning way, and holding out an envelope.

With a shrug of his shoulders the young lawyer took it and turned it slowly over in his hands. There was no doubt about whom it came from or that she was not coming herself. He forgot that a moment before he had been earnestly planning to set her free at once, and, muttering a fragment of the lines containing "Women and the fools who have faith in them," he actually put the envelope in his pocket, unopened, and was turning away, when the boy asked him for the answer.

"Answer?" he remarked, looking down in surprise. Then he slowly drew the letter from his pocket again, and, retreating farther into the shadow, opened it, lighted a match, and read:

"Mr. Raymond is in a carriage round the first corner. He was following yours when you came. His driver sits where he can see it. If I shall come at once, send me word by the bearer. If not, I will wait where I am till he is away. E. T."

Positive Proof From Plainfield Can't Be Brushed Lightly Aside.

The reader is forced to acknowledge that convincing proof in his own city is pre-eminently ahead of endorsements from everywhere else in our Republic. Read this:

Mr. Jos. VanArsdale, carpenter and contractor, living at 213 Spooner avenue, says: "For several years I suffered from severe pains in my back, hips and loins so bad at times that it was almost impossible for me to get around and attend to my work. Any stooping or heavy lifting aggravated it and if I contracted a cold it always settled in my back and at such times my suffering was something intense. When Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice I was in pretty bad shape and procuring them from L. W. Randolph's drug store, I took a few doses when I found they were helping me, and on completing the treatment I was quite free from pain. I always keep Doan's Kidney Pills on hand so as to have a sure remedy close by if the trouble should ever return."

ANTIQUE FIENDS.

Women Who Spend Their Time and Money Unearthing Old Relics.

The antique craze is like a malignant fever—when it seizes a woman, she rarely gets over it. There are three stages—the first when she simply admires the collections of her friends, the second when she begins to haunt auctions and "read up," the third when she spares neither time nor money to obtain some broken down treasure and when if fair means fail she will not hesitate even at foul ones. This sounds dreadful, I know, but I have in mind a perfectly respectable woman of my acquaintance who was so fascinated by a brass knocker on the door of an unoccupied farmhouse that she crept there in the dead of night and—well, there is no other word for it—stole it.

Women in the second stage fall easy victims to the so called antique dealers. The profits of these people must be enormous, for certainly the expenses of the trade are not great. It does not cost much to bury modern colonial furniture until the worms and the mold have done their artistic work; neither are ovens or acids particularly expensive when you can sell a plate which cost you a quarter for $7 or $8. Nowadays I hear the path of the antique dealer is made even more easy. There are factories which turn out real fourteenth century Nuremberg chests (with the wormholes in them) and real colonial spinning wheels (with histories attached to them, if desired). But, of course, the woman relic hunter knows nothing of these things.

She goes on paying her good money for musty and rickety furniture, broken plates and hangings falling to pieces. She bids against herself at auctions and makes up by cheating unsuspecting country people. When she visits at some old house, she goes about slyly nicking the paint off the furniture in search of possible inlaying or rummaging in the attic for forgotten treasures. She is a pest and a bore, and people are afraid to let her into their houses, but what would you? It's her way of enjoying life, and just now it's a way very much in style.

CHILDISH GOSSIPS.

The Dreaded Scandal Monger Begins Her Career In the Nursery.

The child is the father of the man, so the proverb runs, but altered to "the girl is the mother of the woman" it would be even more true. The other day I came home from an afternoon tea thoroughly disgusted. The entire conversation had been gossip and fault finding—servants, neighbors, husbands, it was all the same thing. I could not bring away one single improving thought, one wise or witty saying.

Just as I was about to enter the nursery I heard my small daughter's voice raised in an eager whisper, "It's a secret, Margie, and you must pwomise you won't tell." I could hear Margery gasp with excitement. "Hope I'll die if I do!" she muttered in the same stage whisper. "Well, then," cried the small informer "what d'you fink? Judy cheated dis morning! I sawed her!"

At this moment I entered the room. The whole episode reminded me unpleasantly of Mrs. Binks' confidences at the house I had just left. These confidences involved the reputation of a neighbor. "But of course this is strictly confidential, my dear," she whispered, and of course she had told the same thing to 20 others, and before nightfall every one in town would know.

I took one of the small sinners on each knee and spoke long and earnestly on the subject of talking about people behind their backs. "It is like stabbing them in the dark!" I explained, and I think they both understood.

"DON'T TELL!"

Oh, these secrets, these confidences, these "don't tells!" What misery they make in the world—from the small tot whose dearest chum "goes back on her" to the grown woman whose trust is betrayed and whose life is ruined by one careless word. Isn't it better never to say anything about our friends that we wouldn't repeat to their faces? Isn't it better not to have that sort of secret at all?

Gossip of the Racing Yachts on the Lakes and Ocean

AUGUST is to be the banner yachting month this year. Followers of fresh water sailing will have all they can attend to in that month learning about the tactics used by the sailors on the two yachts that competed for the Canada's cup in Lake Michigan water. Those who think that all yachting that amounts to much is that which is had on the salt water will pay strict heed to the costly racing toys of rich men, built expressly to contest for the America's cup. Old Glory now waves over the boats that won these trophies and the silver cups that are the direct cause of so much stir in the yachting world repose in club houses over which fly the stars and stripes. Canadian yachtmen are certain that the cup will once more go to the Dominion boat while Sir Thomas Lipton and his friends are quite positive that his visit to United States waters this time will be productive of better results than when Shamrock I. tried to "lift" the America's cup from Columbia. There is a deep set feeling among many thousands in the United States that any 90-footer built on this side of the Atlantic and labelled "cup defender" will be quite able to successfully sail against the British challenger and keep that old tarnished silver trophy on this side.

It is a matter of regret to many that the New York Yacht club has elected to abide by such a strict interpretation of the deed of gift of the America's cup, that the Boston defender yacht Independence will not be given an opportunity to contest in trial races with Constitution. Thomas W. Lawson believed that the "blue ribband" of the sea would be open to all yachts. He spent $250,000 on the Independence and despairing of pitting his Crowinshield pet against Shamrock II. in an America's cup event will content himself with respectfully asking Sir Thomas Lipton for a contest between either of the Shamrocks and the Independence.

Would it be disloyal to suggest that there may be a decided opinion, held by a great many good citizens of this country, that the Shamrock II. should capture that cup and take it whence it came, so that in the next international cup contest, the United States might furnish a challenger? It is so many years since the America won the trophy, and so many hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended by challenging and defending syndicates, with the monotonous result—"Defender wins"—that the edge is wearing off the big event.

Manager Butler, of the Constitution, declared when his wife, at the night launching, broke a bottle of champagne over the bow of the Bristol boat and christened the latest Herreschoff creation with the name that a famous old frigate has made famous wherever English is spoken, that it was not possible to build a racing machine that could outsail this grand yacht. By common consent it seems that it is the province of the New York Yacht club to be the medium through which details for all America's cup contests shall be arranged. This organization will not permit the boat which flies its pennant to compete in trial races with a yacht that is not formally entered by some member of the big Gotham club. Thomas Lawson before the launching of his boat said that he would sink his beautiful yacht Independence at the time of the trial races, if he were not permitted to sail his own craft under his own name and colors. He may think better of this if the Independence should get an open and fair trial for the honor of being selected to defend the cup against Shamrock II.

CAPTAIN HANK HAFF.
He Will Sail the Lawson Cup Defender If She Is Permitted to Enter.

Constitution's trial horse before the real trial races are begun will be Columbia, the last successful defender. Former Commodore Morgan will have charge of Columbia and Capt. Charles Barr, who was skipper when his craft defeated the green boat number I., is to once more sail the Columbia. "Lem" Miller, the first mate, has already engaged a formidable crew of nearly 40 men and it is dollars to old oakum that Columbia will be scientifically pitted against Constitution when critical eyes are watching to detect points of superiority in the latest product of the Herreschoffs.

Sir Thomas is fully satisfied that his saucy green pet that recently disported so well in the waters of the Solent with her sister Shamrock I., and was also beaten off Weymouth in one trial by the old challenger, only to win off the Isle of Wight, will win from whatever American boat that is selected to meet Shamrock II., because, in sober truth, his yacht has beaten Columbia, Shamrock, Valkyries, Meteors, Sybaritas and crafts designed as near like the Constitution and Independence as the skill of Designer G. L. Watson could make them without absolute details.

"How was this made possible?" is quite a natural query. It seems that Mr. Watson has a pond nearly 200 feet long, 22 feet wide and nine feet deep at Denny's yard, where Shamrock II. was built, and in this trial basin he has made enough experiments with the models of his challenger, those of other challengers and all of the America's cup defenders, to prove to his own satisfaction and to that of Sir Thomas Lipton, that the British boat will be invincible. Of course, the sea tests are theoretical.

CAPT. G. W. ELDRIDGE.
He Will Be at the Helm of the Cup Defender During the International Races.

They are based absolutely upon mathematical propositions, and may all "gang aglee" when the actual cup races begin. By means of an elaborate contrivance and a running railroad motor suspended above the tank, Mr. Watson is able to measure to a minute degree, the actual energy used in pulling each model through the water at every conceivable angle of keeling. If the lines of the models make a marked feature of the trials, the machine immediately indicates the amount. Because Shamrock II.'s model has invariably stood the test with a better showing of speed and a smaller amount of friction, Mr. Watson is certain that he has made the most perfect model. Arguing that with this in her favor, the green yacht needs but an accomplished skipper and a daring and eager crew to beat the Yankee craft.

Unique in the annals of sailing is Capt. Hank Haff, of Islip, L. I., skipper for Mr. Lawson's Independence. Remarkable as a sailor, he is a shrewd old farmer and lover of animals when on land. This veteran had the honor of defending the cup in 1895, when the Defender defeated Valkyrie III., and it is largely from his suggestions that the most successful designers have taken their cues in more than one matter of detail. Down along the New England coast where Hank Haff's name is heard in every household, the people say that he can beat any skipper in the world. They only hope that his yacht will be chosen to defend the cup.

It would not surprise yachtsmen if there were at least nine yachts put into commission this summer by men who seek the honor of sailing their boat against the Canadian challenger from Hamilton or Toronto.

Of these crafts the Illinois, a replica it might be said of the Independence, and designed and built by Crowinshield, seems to be the most favored. In salt water and in Lake Michigan this pretty craft has shown great speed. George Pynchon, her chief owner, thinks that the Illinois will prove to be invincible. William Hale Thompson has expended several thousands of dollars in building the Yankee, just launched, to try for the Canada's cup race, while yachtsmen in Milwaukee have praised their defender Orion; followers of queer designing in Oshkosh have pinned their faith to their boat; Detroit men are certain that the Cadillac will take first honors in the trials, and Commodore Atkin, of the Chicago Yacht club, has chartered the Canadian-built Minota to send into the lists. It is regarded as significant that Designer McLeod, who drew the lines of Minota recently declared in favor of the Illinois, because he thinks that Crowinshield's work is better than his own.

The Fearnside boat, at Hamilton, called Canadian, is commonly called a freak, etc., but this is unjust, for she is a fin keel, with just a trace of a concave on the bottom, and has a considerable overhang, both at bow and stern. She is 47 feet long over all, and has a ten-foot beam. In many respects, although there is less of the majestic about a yacht eligible for the Canadian cup events than there is to one of the magnificent "white birds" in the 90-foot class, there is every probability that the freshwater contest this year will divide honors with the salt water battle for the America's cup.

From the Great Lakes to the Ocean by Water

A Study of the Canal System of Canada That Makes Ocean Ports of Lake Cities.

VESSELS sailing from Duluth to the Atlantic ocean must descend 600 feet, which represents the difference between the water level in Lake Superior and the Atlantic ocean. Lake steamship magnates in the United States are beginning anew to agitate the subject of the construction of canals to make this descent between the lakes and ocean possible wholly within United States territory, and the New York state canal commission are backing their agitation with figures representing the possibility of enlarging the Erie Canal to such an extent that the passage of the largest lake vessels through it will be possible.

Vessels now plying between Duluth and other great lake ports must of necessity use Canadian canals if they are to reach salt water, with the single exception of the fall between Lake Superior and Lake Huron, where a choice of either the American or Canadian canals at Sault Ste. Marie is offered, with the American canal offering by far the greatest advantages and accommodations for large vessels.

The passage between Duluth and the Atlantic is now effected by Canadian canals which provide a means for dropping vessels in locks 551 feet, the remaining 49 feet being represented by the gradual fall of the downward stream.

In providing this means of water transportation between the lakes and ocean Canada has been assisted by the River St. Lawrence, which, for a distance of 986 miles, provides a channel wide enough and deep enough to permit of the passage of ocean-going vessels. But there are many places in the St. Lawrence which would retard navigation but for the presence of government canals. Coming up the river between Montreal and Kingston, the canals, with their length, lock dimensions, height of lift, are as follows:

Canals.	Length. Miles.	Length of Locks. Feet.	Lift of Locks. Feet.
Lachine	8½	270	45
Soulanges	14	280	84
Cornwall	11	270	48
Farran's Point	1	800	3½
Rapide Plat	3½	270 (800)	11½
Galops	7½	(270)	15½
Murray	5 1-6	No locks

The width of the locks is 45 feet, and depth of water on the sills 14 feet. On their course down from Kingston to Montreal, several of the canals are not used, as the rapids are run with safety. From Kingston, the course west is through Lake Ontario until Port Dalhousie is reached, where the Welland canal is entered. This splendid construction extends 26¾ miles; the total lift is 326¾ feet, which is effected by 27 locks, each 270 feet by 45 feet, with a depth of 14 feet. From the end of the Welland canal—Port Colborne—there is deep water to Sault canal, 394 miles. The Sault Ste. Marie canal extends 5,967 feet; it has only one lock, which is 900 feet by 60 feet, and lowest depth 20 feet 3 inches, the total rise being 18 feet.

The Welland canal is the real connecting link between the lakes and the ocean. Its 14 feet of water over the sills of the locks prevent the largest of the lake vessels using it, but a glance at the following figures show that it is used more by American vessels, an argument which is being used by American vessel owners for the construction of an all American canal to tide water. The freight carried up and down the Welland canal in 1899 was as follows:

Vessels.	Eastward. Tons.	Westward. Tons.
In Canadian vessels	297,084	12,462
In United States vessels	325,020	135,052
Total	622,104	147,514

For several years the Canadian canal system providing a navagable waterway from the lakes to the ocean continued to grow in value from a commercial standpoint, but since 1897, when the maximum tonnage was reached, their value from a commercial standpoint has declined for the reason, it is said, that the increased size of lake vessels have made it impossible to use the canals.

The total quantity of through freights passed eastward and westward through the Welland and St. Lawrence canals from Lake Erie to Montreal in the last ten years was as follows:

Year.	Eastward. Tons.	Westward. Tons.	Percent. West to East.
1899	254,933	5,991	1.7
1898	238,108	4,436	0.83
1897	184,246	4,566	0.77
1896	180,077	10,650	2.06
1895	266,059	10,555	4
1894	292,191	9,439	3.23
1893	498,016	16,545	3.25
1892	263,144	9,452	3.6
1891	309,593	14,060	4.5
1890	231,746	13,851	6

The disparity between the volume of freight carried eastward from Lake Erie to Montreal and that taken on the westward trip is very striking, the average ratio of the westward freight to the eastward for the ten years 1890-1899 having been only 2.58 per cent.

Canada has steadily increased the capacity of her system of canals between the lakes and the ocean, but while the increase has been steady it has not kept pace with the increase in size of lake vessels. After many years of labor and expense a 14-foot waterway has been provided and is opened at a time when a 20-foot waterway is being demanded, especially by American vessels, and expensive as the improvements so recently completed have been, Canada is already agitating the subject of further improvements and enlargements that will further simplify water transportation between the lakes and ocean.

Whether the national government or the state of New York would find the enlargement of the Erie canal a profitable venture or not is a question that probably nothing but actual experience with the enlarged canal could determine, but comparisons point to its financial success.

THE LAKE ERIE ENTRANCE TO THE WELLAND CANAL.

The following table shows the tonnage and value of freight passing through the Sault Ste. Marie canal in each year from 1887 to 1900. When it is remembered that the traffic passing through this canal is double in amount that carried through the famous Suez canal the importance of the American waterway will become apparent; while the fact that the Suez canal has proved a paying investment to those investing in its stock readily suggests that a great waterway connecting the lake system with the Atlantic ocean would be of great benefit to American commerce and rich in its rewards to American enterprise:

TONNAGE AND VALUATION OF FREIGHT PASSING THROUGH THE SAULT STE. MARIE CANAL FROM 1887 TO 1900.

Year.	Total Freight, Net tons.	Value. Dollars.
1887	5,494,649	79,021,757
1888	6,411,423	82,156,019
1889	7,516,022	83,732,627
1890	9,041,213	102,214,948
1891	8,888,759	128,178,208
1892	11,214,333	136,117,287
1894	13,195,860	143,114,502
1895	15,052,580	159,575,129
1896	16,239,061	195,146,842
1897	18,582,755	218,226,927
1898	21,234,664	253,069,740
1899	25,255,816	261,364,750
1900	25,643,073	267,041,959

Much of this is iron ore on its way to Ohio and Pennsylvania mills, but there would be added to it the enormous shipments of products from Lake Michigan ports, a great part of which is intended for tide water and European ports.

MAX OWEN.

After Thoughts.

About the queerest thing in the world is other people's notion of what is funny.

Better be content with your privileges than make trouble by insisting on your rights.

It would be shocking to think that our neighbors had as poor an opinion of us as we have of them.

In making up our minds we sometimes find that the material at hand is not what is best suited for the work.

Little things should not annoy us, of course; but it does seem that for the man who drums the arm of his chair and taps the floor with his foot, a dungeon cell is the proper place.—Indianapolis News.

OLD SINGING MASTER DEAD.

EDW. H. REDFIELD PASSED AWAY AT HIS HOME IN BOUND BROOK.

Used to Travel From Cranbury to Rocky Hill Conducting Singing Schools.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, June 4—By the death of Edward Henry Redfield, who passed away yesterday, Bound Brook loses one of its oldest as well as one of its most respected citizens. He was in his eighty-first year and has been a citizen of this place since 1848. Born in Killingworth, Conn., and spending his early life in Guilford, of the same State, he came to New Jersey in 1840 He early decided to devote his entire time to the study of music, and it is through his success in this direction that he became so well known throughout this whole section.

He was one of the singing masters of a half-century ago. These singing masters had regular routes, similar to those of the "circuit riders," of the middle west during the pioneer period. The circuit of Mr. Redfield extended from Cranbury to Rocky Hill, one of the longest. He traversed this route at regular intervals, teaching a singing school at a different town each evening, and giving individual lessons in the day-time.

For eighteen years he was organist of the First Presbyterian church of Cranbury, and held the same position in the Reformed church of South Bound Brook for twenty-eight years. He was an elder in the latter church until his death.

In 1858, he married Miss Lucinda Willis, of Brooklyn, who died in 1895. He leaves two children, Edw. O. Redfield, a merchant, of Chester, Mass., and Mrs. J. C. Somers, of this place. Mr. Redfield was always very thrifty and left an estate of considerable value.

WERE WEDDED AT HIGH NOON

CEREMONY UNITED MISS LOUELLA T. MILLS AND FRANK FULTON.

Pretty Home Wedding Today At Residence of E. W. Mills—The Bridal Party And The Gowns.

Surrounded by nearly one hundred guests, many of whom were from distant points, Miss Louella Taylor Mills and Frank Fulton were married at noon today at the home of Mr. and Mrs E. Wickham Mills, at East Fifth and Washington streets.

Sweet peas, Easter lilies and smilax, effectively interspersed with stately palms and ferns, formed the decorations at the wedding festivities. The front of the large parlor, where the nuptial ceremony took place, was handsomely arranged a mass of beautiful flowers and plants entwined in such a manner as to form an attractive bower.

Precisely at 12 o'clock Miss Mabel Blanchard Tuttle, of Port Jefferson, L. I., a ten year old cousin of the bride, commenced to play the wedding march from "Lohengrin." Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated at the wedding.

The bridesmaids were Miss Fannie Mills, the bride's sister, and Miss Helen Fulton, the sister of the groom. With much solemnity the clergyman uttered the words which made the young couple man and wife. They were married with a ring.

As soon as the ceremony was concluded Mr. and Mrs. Fulton received the congratulations of the assemblage and then all were served with a delightful luncheon.

The happy pair have left for an extended honeymoon. While away they will visit the Pan-American Exposition, Niagara Falls, Quebec, and most of the eastern States.

The bride was fetchingly gowned in white de esprit over white taffeta, trimmed with satin ribbons. A tulle veil was fastened by a diamond brooch about which were sprays of lilies of the valley. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley tied with white ribbon. The gowns of the bridemaids were white organdie over white silk, trimmed with lace and pink ribbons. They carried bouquets of pink carnations. Little Miss Tuttle, the pianist, was dressed in pink silk trimmed with lace. The bride's presents to the bridemaids were tiny gold crescent pins.

In the large assemblage of guests were relatives and friends from St. Louis, Mo, Port Jefferson, Long Island, Brooklyn, Port Chester and Middletown, N. Y., and Colorado Springs, Col.

On the completion of the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Fulton will reside in this city. The groom has accepted a position with his former employer, J. H. Leggett, the druggist. For the past three years Mr. Fulton has served as apothecary on board the battleship "Philadelphia." He has lately returned from a cruise in Pacific waters.

Inspector Wm. N. Pangborn was instructed to raise the quarantine on the house of a family named Peterson, living near the borough line. There were three cases of diphtheria in this home. The house has been properly fumigated.

Several requests were made to the Board for permission to have pigsties on premises in the borough, but only one of the these petitions was granted.

COMPARISON OF TWO CITY WATER WORKS.

Interesting Facts Regarding Water Works at Perth Amboy and New Brunswick.

COST OF THE TWO PLANTS.

PERTH AMBOY CHRONICLE PRINTS SOME INTERESTING STATEMENTS.

New Brunswick Pays $11,525 a Year to Support Works While Cost to Amboy is Only $600—Other Figures Given.

Students of the question of the municipal ownership of water works will be interested to learn of the progress made by the water works of both Perth Amboy and New Brunswick. The Perth Amboy Chronicle recently published a lengthy article comparing the water works of those two cities.

The article is in part as follows:

The value of a water department that is properly and economically managed can sometimes be appreciated best by comparing the results obtained with those in other cities.

A comparison was suggested by noticing in the report of the water commission at the county seat an item of $11,525 under the heading "received from city of N. B.," from January 1, 1900, to December 31, 1900. Within the fiscal year ending March 1, 1901, the Perth Amboy water works received from the city the sum of exactly $600.

To make these figures more forcible it might be added that in this city, during the year, the extension of the system cost $15,484.87, which was paid out of the receipts. In addition, $13 647 50 was paid on interest on the bonded debt and a bond of $5 000 was paid.

These three last named items make a total of more than $34,000, money spent above the cost of maintenance. To offset this sum, New Brunswick spent $25 107.41 for a new boiler house, a new engine and on other similar accounts.

Perth Amboy's total receipts for water rents were $40,756.86. New Brunswick received $56,146 31 from the same source, exclusive of the city.

True, $10,000 in bonds was issued during the year, but the amount had not been expended when the year closed. It was in the nature of a temporary loan and, like others, will be repaid out of the receipts of the department.

The Perth Amboy works pumped during the year a total of 726,407,243 gallons. The New Brunswick plant handled 697,630,981 gallons.

The Perth Amboy plant has been running since 1893. The city appropriation was at first $6,500 and for two years it has been at the present figure, $600. During all of that time the city has not been charged a cent for all of the water consumed in public buildings throughout the city. The amount consumed is, of course, increasing each year, and the cost charged to the city remains the same, nothing.

In 1882 the water used in public buildings in New Brunswick cost $7,465, the lowest figure recorded. It has gradually increased to the present figure, $11,525, which is $110 more than in 1899.

A Chronicle reporter asked Superintendent Burns what he supposed the water used by the city would amount to if charged for. He said that a low estimate would be $10,000. There are all of the public school buildings, each using an enormous quantity of water daily. The City Hall, with the lockup and Tony Buchanan's park sprinkler, means no small item. Water is furnished the contractor for all public works and the city is well covered with fire hydrants.

Each of the fire houses uses a great deal of water washing the hose and carriages. The street commissioner uses some now and then in flushing sewers and other work.

New Brunswick has a total of 198,559 feet of water mains, varying in diameter from four to 24 inches. Perth Amboy's system takes in 161,732, from four to 16 inches in diameter. While the former has larger mains, 430 feet of 24 inch and 8,350 feet of 20-inch, the latter has 39,649 af 16-inch against 13 934 at the county seat.

MANY LISTENED TO WELL RENDERED MUSIC

Particularly Fine Musical Programme Given at Miss Whitney's Recital Last Evening.

HELD IN Y. M. C. A. HALL.

MISS WHITNEY WAS ASSISTED BY ARTISTS OF MUCH ABILITY.

Number of Her Pupils Also Took Part And Did Excellent Work—Hall Was Crowded by an Appreciative Audience.

Though Plainfield is rich in musical talent and many meritorious recitals are given here from time to time, yet it is seldom that the opportunity is afforded to listen to such a thoroughly enjoyable musicale as was tendered by Miss May Vincent Whitney at the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening.

From the introductory number to the closing selection it was a grand, inspiring and enchanting musical entertainment which held the true lover of melody in one continued state of ecstasy. Time and again the large and appreciative audience, that filled every available seat in the hall, and even crowded the doorways, in its rupturous delight gave vent to long applause, though it was known beforehand that no number on the rich programme would be repeated, neither would the performer respond in any manner to an encore.

The galaxy of talent included, besides Miss Whitney, such well known musical leaders as Mrs. Walter Beard Chichester, a soprano soloist of a Brooklyn church; Charles Henry Corwin, a fine baritone from Morristown; Wm. E. MacClymont, the skillful organist of Holy Trinity church, New York, and P. Ludwig Conde, the celebrated violinist.

The opening number of part first on the programme, "Return to Town," by Gurlitt, was well played by four of Miss Whitney's pupils, the Misses Florence Dickerson, Amy Winant, Frances Rittenhouse and Carolyn Welles. On the clavier, an instrument used for teaching piano music, Miss Frances Rittenhouse gave an exhibition, practicing "Village Festival," by Schmol. Miss Rittenhouse then played the selection for the first time on the piano. She also played three other selections to the enjoyment of the audience.

The "Hungarian Rapsody, No. 2," by Liszt, rendered as a piano duet by Miss Whitney and her pupil, Miss Mae Ecff, evoked much applause, and this demonstration was repeated when Charles Henry Corwin sang "Twickenham Ferry" and "Land o' the Leal." Later in the evening Mr. Corwin sang in a pleasing manner "Dove Wings" by Woodman, and "Jenny" by Pepper. He was accompanied by Mr. MacClymont. Miss Lucy Norris, of Brooklyn, a pupil of Miss Whitney, gave two piano selections, "Solfeggetto" by Bach and "Valse Arebesque" by Lack, both of which were well received.

The Misses Helen Whitney, Belle Smith, Marion Winant and Helen Adams played very acceptably, as an eight-handed selection on two pianos, selections from "Martha" by Flotow-Stieger, and Miss Whitney completed part first of the programme by the skillful rendition on the piano of "Preludes, op. 28, Nos. 21 and 22," by Chopin and "Polonaise, in E," by Liszt.

A. K Virgil, the inventor of the helpful dummy piano, which is used by Miss Whitney in her work, was to have been present to explain the uses of the instrument, which he calls the clavier, but Rev. Dr. Whitney explained that Mr. Virgil was unavoidably absent and in his stead Miss Bertha Hurst Whitney would entertain the audience with some recitations. Miss Bertha Whitney, who is a sister of the music teacher, cleverly recited "So Was I" and as encores "Ol' Picketts' Nell" and "In May." Her elocutionary efforts caught the audience at once and every one regretted that there were not more numbers by her on the programme. In the last recitation she was accompanied by her sister, Miss Whitney.

Louis Hunt, another Brooklynite, performed on the piano, as a duet, with his teacher, Miss Whitney, "William Tell," by Rossini Gottschalk, and subsequently he rendered three piano solos very effectively. "Cascade du Chaudron," by Bendel, "Prelude," by Pachulski, and "Witches' Dance," by McDowell were his contributions.

The feature of the evening was the charming soprano solo "Ave Maria,"

FIRST DAY OF ANNIVERSARY.

CELEBRATION OF REV. E. E. JACKSON'S PASTORATE AT MT. OLIVE CHURCH.

Several Addresses Were Made At Last Night's Meeting—Exercises Continue Several Days.

Rev. E. E. Jackson is this week celebrating the third anniversary of his pastorate at the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Last evening the first of a series of meetings in honor of that event was held. Through the efforts of Mrs. William Dempsey, president, and other members of the Faithful Workers' Society, the church is handsomely decorated with flowers and the primary class room has been transformed into a pleasant reception room. With handsome rugs, tables, banquet lamps and lace curtains, the room presents an attractive appearance.

Pastor Jackson was in charge last evening. He made an interesting address, reviewing the work of the past three years. Among other things he said was that $6,722 had been raised during that time by the church, and at present $70 would pay all outstanding debts. He congratulated the members for their earnest efforts. Since January 1, sixty-one new members have been received into the church.

Other addresses were made by Senior Deacon Daniel Brown and Charles Sheldon, in which the pastor was praised for his excellent work. Miss Pierce gave a recitation. The Independent Singing Club, of the Fillmore Baptist church, under the direction of Richard Randolph, sang a number of selections. The singing was greatly enjoyed.

After the meeting all adjourned to the room below where refreshments were served. This evening the service will be in charge of the Faithful Workers and there will be a change of programme.

Practical Christianity.

The Sunday-school class of girls at the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue, taught by Mrs. A. T. Stryker, inaugurated a plan several months ago whereby each member agreed to contribute one cent and the teacher ten cents a week, during the winter, the money thus raised to be used as the class directed. A very worthy poor woman in the borough was made happy yesterday by the gift from the class of a new dress and other articles of clothing.

IMPORTANT BUSINESS BY BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Several Subjects Of Much Interest Which Will Come Up At Meeting Friday Evening.

STREET SIGNS PROMISED.

MAY BE A REPORT ON MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP QUESTION.

Somerset Street Is Now Ready For The Storm Sewer—Mayor Smalley Has Several Subjects To Bring Before The Council.

Undoubtedly some important business will be transacted at the Borough Council meeting Friday evening. A report is expected from the committee on municipal ownership concerning the water question.

The agitation for a public water plant has not apparently grown less, and, although nothing has been heard from the committee since the matter was placed in its hands, it is probable that some feasible plans will be reported to the Council at this meeting.

It is understood that the Mayor has an idea relative to a municipal water works which is said to be more advantageous in some respects than the proposition advanced by the Boston syndicate. Whether he will refer to the subject at this meeting is not known for His Honor is very reticent on the subject at present. He does not desire to have his actions in this matter attributed to the unpleasantness which, at present, exists between himself and the local water company.

Another report looked for is that from the committee on streets. Work on Somerset street so far as widening the thoroughfore is concerned has been completed and everything is in shape now for constructing the storm sewer. This matter will occupy the serious attention of the Councilmen.

There are several other important measures which require early action on the part of the Councilmanic body, but it is not likely that all of them will be discussed at this meeting. One of them which will, however, is the subject of street signs. It has been felt for a long time that the borough is sadly in need of this improvement and from present appearances no time will be lost in having suitable signs placed at the intersections of the various thoroughfares. Among the other measures which are said to demand early attention are a curbing ordinance and a building line ordinance, both of which propositions are backed by His Honor, Mayor Smalley.

FLOWER MISSION DAY.

Observed With Special Exercises By the Loyal Temperance Legion Yesterday Afternoon.

Flower Mission Day was appropriately celebrated by the Loyal Temperance Legion in the rooms of the W. C. T. U., on Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon.

After the regular business meeting was concluded the members participated in a programme specially arranged for the day. Miss Florence Cooney, the president, read a paper on "How the Flower Mission Began" and Miss Amy Moore, vice-president, also read a paper on "Flower Missions." Other numbers were recitations entitled "Wishing" by Miss Elsie Clark;" "I Wouldn't" by Clifford Vail, and "The Cup Bearer" by Russell Miller.

Members of the legion sent to the police station, the hospital and several sick persons, cut flowers with Scripture cards attached.

PEDDLER TO JAIL.

Charged with peddling without the required license, Sammy Bratter, a young Newark boy, was arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning for the second time within a few months. He was arrested by Patrolman McCarthy on East Third street, yesterday, but he stoutly denied peddling. He finally broke down and admitted his guilt. Being his second offense he was given $3 or ten days. As his combined capital consisted of sixty-seven cents and his stock in trade, he took the latter.

There will be appropriate exercises of an interesting character, including an address by DeForest A. Preston, of Brooklyn. The graduates will be Miss Mary Westcott and Miss Muriel Robinson.

PROMINENT RED MAN AND WORKMAN DEAD

Norman C. Mague Passed Away at His Home on McDowell Street Yesterday.

FIFTY-SEVEN YEARS OLD.

ASSISTED IN ORGANIZING MIANTONOMO TRIBE OF THIS CITY.

Prominent in State Circles of Red Men—Also a Leading Man in the A. O. U. W. of New Jersey—Funeral Friday.

In the death of Norman C. Mague, which occurred at his home on McDowell street, yesterday morning, the Red Men of the State and also the members of the A. O. U. W. were bereft of one of their most energetic workers and widely known members. Since the formation of the Improved Order of Red Men, he was interested in its welfare and gave much of his personal time and attention to promoting its interests, in doing which he became familiar with practically every tribe in the State. Miantonomo Tribe, of this city, which is one of the most flourishing in the order, owes its existence to him, as in company with William A. Westphal, he organized it in 1889. He was the first past sachem of the tribe and was great representative to the Great Council of the United States, held at DesMoines, Iowa, a much coveted honor.

He was also instrumental in the formation of Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., and became its first past master. At the time of his death he was recorder of this lodge, which office he held for eight years. At any of the functions of either Workmen or Red Men, he made it a point to be present, and if unable to do so, which was seldom, he felt the disappointment keenly.

Mr. Mague, who was fifty seven years old, came to this city in 1887 from Worcester, Mass., at the time the Pond Machine Tool Company removed its plant. He was a machinist by trade, and with the exception of a short time when he was engaged in the bicycle business on Somerset street, was always employed at the Pond shop.

Last February he suffered a paralytic stroke from which he never fully recovered. Complications ensued, and in the hope of obtaining relief, he visited Worcester for four weeks, returning only a short time ago. He rapidly grew worse, but despite his suffering, maintained his cheerfulness and determined spirit until the end.

He leaves a wife, one daughter, Miss Beesie Mague, and two sons, Frank and William, all of whom live in this city. The funeral services will be held from his late residence Friday afternoon at 2:30, and will be in charge of the members of Miantonomo Tribe and Central Lodge.

The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Epworth League and the proceeds will be donated in liquidation of its pledge towards the discharge of the church debt.

Reward For Efficient Services.

WILL REMOVE TOOLS FROM SHOP TOMORROW

Strikers Accept The Ultimatum Of Pond Tool Works And Will Leave Employ Of Company.

TRIAL OF STRENGTH BEGINS

MEN BELIEVE THAT COMPANY CANNOT SECURE ENOUGH NEW MEN.

Pond Employes Will March To Works In a Body Tomorrow Morning And Remove Their Property And Get Pay—Were Given Till Monday.

Not to be daunted by the ultimatum posted at the Pond Tool Works, the striking machinists of that shop met this morning and concluded to comply at once with the company's request to remove their tools if they were not going to work. Instead of waiting for Monday they agreed upon a concerted move.

At 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, the entire force of machinists, with but few exceptions, will meet at the Grant Avenue railroad station and proceed to the shop in a body. They will remove their posessions and ask for what money is due them. By so doing, they sever all connections with the company officials, and the latter will no longer consider them employes.

A similar notice has been given the machinists of the Niles Tool Works, at Hamilton, Ohio, one of the Niles-Bement Pond combine shops, with the additional warning that if the men do not return to work by Monday, their places will be taken by non-union workers The strikers do not feel greatly concerned over this announcement, as they claim it is impossible to secure enough skilled machinists at the present time to run the shop.

The same sentiment prevails among the local strikers. They are determined not to return to work under any conditions but a fifty-four hour schedule with sixty hours' pay and are confident enough men cannot be secured in their places to run the shops.

In order to further show its sympathy for the strikers, the local Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators presented the Plainfield machinists this morning with $25, and declared its willingness to subscribe as much more when needed.

At the Potter and Scott shops the situation remains unchanged, and the officials declare there is no prospect of a settlement. Of late no overtures have been made by either shop.

Company Trying To Settle.

Mrs. Klemen, of Newark, mother of David Curtis, of this city, who was seriously injured in the trolley wreck at Westfield several months ago, is still at her home in Newark. She does not improve to any extent and the services of a trained nurse are required continually. Although she has filed a suit against the trolley company for $25,000, the company has been trying to settle.

Congress Not to Be Called This Summer.

PRESIDENT AND CABINET DECIDE.

Recent Insular Decisions Do Not Affect the Status of the Philippines—Civil Government Under Military Rule Soon.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The president and members of the cabinet have decided, after a full discussion of the question, that an extra session of congress to consider the Philippine question will be unnecessary.

After the meeting of the cabinet the following official announcement was made:

"The president has determined that existing conditions do not require or warrant calling congress together during the present summer or making any change in the policy hitherto pursued and announced in regard to the Philippine Islands."

The principal point upon which the cabinet reached a decision that an extra session of congress is not necessary to enable the president to put in operation a civil government in the Philippines is that the supreme court decisions do not affect the president's military power in the islands under his authority as commander in chief of the army.

It is not proposed by the administration to abandon the idea of putting into operation a civil form of government and promulgating a revised Philippine tariff. The plan now under contemplation is to inaugurate a civil government just as soon as possible under the president's military power. This will mean that while there will be a civil administration in the islands they will continue under military control until congress has passed laws making a complete change of government with a civil head.

The question of promulgating a new tariff in the Philippines is not changed by this decision, as the new tariff, which is merely a revision of the old one, will be announced when approved by the secretary of war, and the duties will be collected by officers appointed for that purpose by the president under his military power.

The supreme court decisions as viewed by the administration settles, first, that the Foraker act is constitutional; second, that the collection of duties on Porto Rican products between the time of the cession of the island of Porto Rico and the passage of the Foraker act was illegal and must be refunded. These are held to be the main essential points of the decisions. Nothing in them is construed to apply to the tariff situation as between the United States and the Philippines. The conclusions of the cabinet are not based on any knowledge as to the prospective Philippine decision of the supreme court, though it is declared there is little apprehension as to the findings of that decision. If the present system is upset in that decision, which is now anticipated, there will be little difficulty, it is believed, in refunding the amounts meantime collected under protest.

Shot In a Quarrel.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., June 5.—Sewall Harvey, a hotel keeper at Grant, Herkimer county, drove on business to the hotel of Sol Carnahan, in Wilmurt, in the northern part of this county. There he met William Baxter, who had been drinking. Harvey, it is alleged, accused Baxter of alienating the affections of his wife. The men had a heated quarrel, which ended, it is charged, in Baxter's pulling a pistol and shooting Harvey. The ball lodged in the man's bowels. He is still alive, but physicians say he cannot recover. Harvey is about 34 years of age, and Baxter is about 50.

Contractor Reid's Terms.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 5.—Mr. Reid, the contractor, consents to surrender the telegraphs to the government and agrees to revise his land grants so that the rights of other holders will be protected. He will undertake to allow the colony to purchase back from him the ownership of the railway at the end of 50 years by compensating him for the then value of the property. On these conditions, if the minor details are adjusted, the government will agree to the transfer to a limited liability company, as Mr. Reid desires.

Hungarian Crops Poor.

BUDAPEST, June 5.—The official crop report, just issued, says since the last bulletin unfavorable weather has prevailed. Rust has begun to spread rapidly in wheat, and there is every reason to fear that unless favorable weather sets in the yield will be considerably less than that of last year. Rye is poor, barley is in urgent need of rain, maize is poor, rape is weak and sugar beet has been damaged by vermin.

Binghamton May Get Car Shops.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 5.—W. K. McFarlin, chief engineer of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railway company, has been in the city looking over the ground for the proposed switch through the manufacturing portion of the city. It is believed that if the right of way of the switch is secured Binghamton will get the car shops.

Bridge Jumper Killed.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Holding an American flag in either hand, Robert G. Bidwell, a writer, jumped last evening from the Brooklyn bridge. He was instantly killed. The man had prepared himself for the jump. Around his waist was an air life preserver, and he had padded his back and stomach with heavy towels.

Serious Freight Wreck.

NEWARK, N. Y., June 5.—A serious freight wreck occurred on the West Shore railroad at Macedon yesterday afternoon. A light engine, with a crew from this village, crashed into an east bound freight train. Two men were killed and two seriously wounded. An open switch caused the accident.

For China Famine Sufferers.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The first remittance of $20,000 for the relief of the China famine sufferers was yesterday cabled by The Christian Herald to Rev. Arthur H. Smith of Tientsin, chairman of the missionary relief committee.

NEW YORK, June 5.—General Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America was last night initiated into the mysteries of Masonry in the lodge at Montclair, N. J.

THE CASE OF CAILLES

Filipino General Must Surrender at Once.

CAPTURE OF AGUINALDO DOUBTED.

His Proclamation Believed to Be an American Trick—Commission Resumes Organization of Civil Governments.

MANILA, June 5.—Guevarra, adjutant to General Cailles, had a three hours' interview with Aguinaldo yesterday. He said that Cailles did not believe that Aguinaldo had been captured and consequently issued a proclamation characterizing Aguinaldo's address to the Filipino people as an American trick. Aguinaldo, through Guevarra, advised Cailles to surrender immediately. After this interview General Wade and General Sumner informed Guevarra that Cailles must notify the latter at Pagsanjan not later than next Monday of his decision in the matter. The American generals declined to guarantee that Cailles would not be prosecuted.

General Trias, in company with Senor Lucban, brother of the insurgent leader still operating in Samar, has gone to Samar island and will attempt to induce Lucban to surrender.

Some of the leaders of the Federal party have prepared a resolution in which it is declared that the party will disband unless the United States civil commission reappoints several Filipino judges who have recently been removed from office. Upon the advice of the more rational members of the party as well as certain American authorities the resolution was not presented. The wisest of the Federal leaders are convinced of the lack of wisdom in forcing discord, especially at a time when the administration at Washington is about to confer general civil government in the archipelago.

The commission today resumed the organization of civil governments in the provinces. A bill has been prepared creating 14 judicial circuits. The salaries of the circuit judges range from $3,500 to $5,000 a year. Judge Bates and Judge Ladd will probably be assigned to the circuits of Iloilo and Cebu respectively.

General Sumner says that 3,000 rifles have been captured or surrendered during the last two months in the provinces of Laguna, Tayabas, Batangas and Cavite.

It has been decided to begin the occupation of the island of Mindoro with three companies of the Ninth regiment, which has just arrived from China.

The American Lawyers' association has addressed a memorial to the Philippine commission in behalf of the use of the English language in courts of justice.

No Change In Mrs. McKinley.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Dr. Rixey was at the White House an hour and a half last evening, and on leaving at half past 10, in answer to inquiries concerning Mrs. McKinley's condition, said: "There has been no important change in Mrs. McKinley's condition. She is resting very comfortably. Of course there are fluctuations in her condition. At times she is better and at times worse, but she is certainly not losing any ground. In fact, she is possibly gaining very slowly. There is no more immediate danger than there has been for some time." One of the president's visitors said that it was conceded that Mrs. McKinley was in a very grave condition. There was hope of the outcome, he said, but it was a very slender hope.

Country Home For Carnegie.

YONKERS, N. Y., June 5.—It is learned that Andrew Carnegie is building a summer home for himself 35 minutes by rail from New York city at Chauncey, in Westchester county. He is securing title to two of the most picturesque hamlets in Westchester county, which it is said will go to make up his estate. The site which Mr. Carnegie has selected comprises three high terraces intersected by spacious valleys, marked by patches of forest and banked by heavy woodland. The central elevation is the highest of the three, and the erection of a splendid building on it is now well under way. It is on the easterly side of the center ridge. The site is within a stone's throw of the great St. Andrews golf links, to the south.

Congregationalists Expel Herron.

DES MOINES, June 5.—George D. Herron, former professor of applied Christianity in Iowa college at Grinnell, is no longer a Congregationalist. He was tried by a council of ministers and elders of the church, representing eight organizations, sitting at Grinnell yesterday, on the charge of "conduct unbecoming a Christian and a gentleman." Evidence was introduced to show cruel treatment of his "unusually loyal and devoted wife," which finally resulted in divorce proceedings and legal separation. A lengthy letter from Dr. Herron was presented in his defense, but at the close of its consideration the council decided that the charges were sustained and voted unanimously to expel him from the church.

A Malay Doctor Kills Six.

LONDON, June 5.—The Daily Mail publishes the following dispatch from Singapore: "A Malay doctor named Ibrahim ran amuck and killed six people with a spear, seriously injuring nine others. He was then knocked down, and he died from the effects of a fractured skull."

Only a Drunken Brawl.

PEKING, June 5.—General Gaselee, the British commander, says the fracas at Tien-tsin Sunday was a mere drunken brawl, such as is liable to happen in any garrison town, and that it has not disturbed the cordial relations between the British and French authorities.

Big Increase of Stock.

ALBANY, June 5.—A certificate of increase of capital stock of the American Telephone and Telegraph company from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 has been filed with the secretary of state. The amount of stock of the company actually issued is $94,237,500.

Unanimous For Woman Suffrage.

HARTFORD, June 5.—The bill for woman suffrage has received the unanimous favorable vote of the state senate. It had been defeated in the house. A measure providing for free textbooks for public schools was tabled in the senate.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; fresh westerly, shifting to southerly winds.

CARNEGIE'S PREDICTION.

Says England Will Some Day Need Our Aid.

LONDON, June 5.—"Mark my words," said Mr. Andrew Carnegie last night, "the time is coming when the continental powers will combine to smash up this little island of Great Britain. When that happens, she will have to turn to the United States for help.

"I feel certain it will not be refused. The United States will step in and say 'Don't.' They will act just as Great Britain did in the Spanish-American war. What she did then was great, and it is not half realized yet."

When Mr. Carnegie gave utterance to these sentiments, he was in the Langham hotel, London, where he had arrived from Scotland for the Chamber of Commerce gatherings. Until then he had steadfastly refused to be interviewed.

Resuming the topic of Anglo-American relations, Mr. Carnegie said:

"I believe in the community of the English speaking races, by which I mean that the Americans and the British are now closer than ever before. Could you get a better instance than the visit of the delegates of the New York Chamber of Commerce to Windsor last Saturday? I suggested it, and King Edward took up the idea thoroughly. It was a fitting commencement of the new reign.

"I know how deeply interested King Edward is in the United States. I have known this since the time, years ago when I drove him on a locomotive in the United States, which, by the way, he did not forget when we met under different conditions.

"The idea that the visit of our delegates to Windsor can be in any way construed as King Edward's recognition of American commercial superiority is all nonsense. The king is full of tact and of friendship for our country."

AIRING FOR CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Startling Revelations Expected In the Eddy-Woodbury Trial.

BOSTON, June 5.—If Lawyer Frederick W. Peabody, as counsel for Mrs. Josephine Curtis Woodbury in her $150,000 libel suit against the "Rev." Mary Baker G. Eddy, is allowed to bring out one-half of the dissensions that now exist in Christian Science circles, the devout members of that cult will have their credulity and faith put to a very severe test, for he said before court opened upon the third day of the trial that if one-half of the truth about the leaders of the Christian Science movement were known there would be a rapid disintegration of that rapidly growing church. Mr. Peabody's only fears now are that Judge Bell may not let him bring to light all the facts in his possession. But he said he would have no difficulty in putting the Christian Scientists on record as being afraid of the light of publicity.

The crowd of spectators which tried to get into the courtroom yesterday was as great as ever. Most of those who succeeded in wedging their way past the court sentinels were witnesses in the case, and nearly all were of course Christian Scientists, with the women, as usual, in the majority.

Among the witnesses on the stand yesterday were "Judge" Hanna, Mrs. Woodbury and Mrs. Helen Winchester.

FOR A BABY OF THIS SIZE

Or a baby of any size, when suffering from simple fevers, coated tongue, constipation, or any trouble arising from the stomach, the purest, safest and best remedy is LAXAKOLA, the great tonic laxative.

Mothers, watch your children carefully. Their health, perhaps their lives, depend on keeping their bowels regular. Many parents make a fatal mistake by giving their little children the old-fashioned, violent purgatives which are racking and griping, and are therefore not only unpleasant, but dangerous. Make no mistake, give them

LAXAKOLA

It does not gripe nor irritate. It is a pure, gentle, speedy and painless liquid laxative. It is not only a sure laxative, but it contains valuable tonic properties which act upon the bowels, tone up the entire system and purify the blood.

A few drops can be given with safety to very young babies, and it will often relieve colic by expelling the wind and gas that cause it. It will aid digestion, relieve restlessness, assist nature and induce sleep.

For constipation, simple fevers, coated tongue, or any infantile troubles arising from a disordered condition of the stomach it is invaluable. Great relief is experienced when administered to young children suffering from diarrhœa, accompanied with white or green evacuations, as LAXAKOLA neutralizes the acidity of the bowels and carries out the cause of the fermentation.

LAXAKOLA FOR THE COMPLEXION

Blotched, sallow, unwholesome and muddy skin, with its consequent mortification, often leading to morbid seclusion and aversion to society and friends, shows that your blood is bad. The only way to clear the complexion and restore it to its normal, healthy, velvety condition is to clean out the entire system, purify the blood and remove the causes, and Laxakola does it, as well as acting directly on the pores and assisting the perspiratory glands in throwing off impurities. It purifies the blood as no other medicine can, and your skin will not only be well but you will be well. All druggists, 25c. and 50c. Send for free sample to LAXAKOLA CO., 132 Nassau Street, New York, or 358 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

GAMES AT BUFFALO.

In the Intercollegiate Contests Cornell Leads.

BUFFALO, June 5.—Clear skies and bright sunshine, tempered by a cooling breeze, made an ideal day for the first athletic contests to be held in the stadium at the Pan-American exposition grounds. Representatives of 16 of the leading colleges and universities in the east and west participated in the intercollegiate track and field events which marked the real opening of the stadium to sports. The quarter mile cinder track and the 140 yard straightaway, located inside the oval, were in fine condition. The athletes were enthusiastic in their praise of the stadium.

The training quarters are large and commodious, being 853 feet long and 32 feet wide. They can accommodate 100 men without the slightest crowding, and 150 men could use them at the same time without discomfort. The rooms are equipped with lockers, dressing rooms, a dozen shower baths and 40 rubbing tables and other facilities. The 4,000 persons who watched the contests yesterday afternoon filled only about one-third of the seats in the great amphitheater.

Duffy of Georgetown won the 100 yard dash in easy style, with Devers of Westminster second. The Maloney brothers of Chicago were in fine form and won all of the events in which they started with the exception of the 880 yard run, which went to J. M. Perry of Princeton. The finish in the 440 yard run was one of the most exciting of the day, with A. Maloney defeating Holland of Georgetown by a magnificent burst of speed at the tape. S. S. Jones of New York outclassed his field in the running high jump. The pole vault resulted in a tie, both Endaly of Purdue and Frederick of Cornell clearing 11 feet. They tried unsuccessfully for a higher mark and finally agreed to toss the coin for first place. Endaly won the toss.

The showing in points made by the different colleges and universities is as follows: Cornell, 28; Chicago, 17; Georgetown and Pennsylvania, 9 each; Westminster, 7; Beloit and Minnesota, 6 each; Yale, Princeton, Purdue and New York, 5 each; Amherst, 2.

THE PAYMENT QUESTION.

Powers Differ as to Manner of Settling Chinese Indemnity.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—As a result of the exchanges of the last few days the situation in China has resolved itself to about the following basis:

There is no further issue as to the total indemnity, that being agreed upon by all the powers at $337,000,000. But there remains the question of how this amount shall be paid. The Russian suggestion, which appears to have the approval of a majority of the powers, is that China issue bonds for the full amount and that all the powers then unite in giving a joint indorsement or guarantee of the payment of them. The desire has been not only to secure the assent of a majority of the powers to this scheme, but the unanimous approval of all of them. This, however, has not been accomplished up to the present time, and it is for this reason that the modus vivendi is now being considered as a possible means of bringing about united action.

The British government is not favorable to the Russian proposition, and the British view has taken form in a plan to have China issue her own bonds to the several governments, each government thereafter adopting its own course as to an individual guarantee.

The chief difficulty which the United States finds as to a joint guarantee is that the constitution does not authorize the executive to guarantee bonds in the absence of the approval of congress. As to the attitude of congress, it has been stated during the negotiations that it is very doubtful whether the legislative branch would approve a joint guarantee of such a vast total of bonds.

Big Newspaper Strike Threatened.

NEW YORK, June 5.—At a meeting of delegates from the Central Federated union to be held this afternoon official cognizance will be taken of the strike of members of the International Association of Machinists. It is said that the Central Federated union will indorse the strike and urge its members to assist the machinists with contributions of money. At the headquarters of the International Association of Machinists Constant Booth, business head of the association, said that the strike now really centered about the factory of a well known firm which manufactures printing presses. "If they undertake to start up with nonunion men," said Mr. Booth, "we will tie up every newspaper and printing office in the United States using their presses. We have won this strike except for the shops of this firm and a few others in this neighborhood, and we propose to force the acceptance of our terms by these people by invoking the aid of organized labor everywhere."

Medical Men In Session.

ST. PAUL, June 5.—Fifteen hundred physicians occupied seats in the Metropolitan Opera House when the convention of the American Medical association was called to order yesterday. Interest centered in the discussion of the report on reorganization which followed the reports of officers, trustees and the executive committee. Dr. Simmons, secretary of the association, presented a report showing that the association now had a membership of 106,000, an increase of over 1,500 in the past year.

Fatal Railway Wreck.

ATLANTA, June 5.—A switch engine of the Southern railway struck an incoming passenger train from Macon yesterday near the Southern shops and overturned several coaches. Three passengers were killed and 16 injured. Both locomotives were moving rapidly. The switch engine skimmed along the side of the train, knocking the coaches over as it struck them. The collision, coming without a sound of warning, took the passengers by surprise, and they had no means of protecting themselves.

Eight Miners Killed.

Some were killed outright by the shock, and others died of suffocation.

French Cyclist Won.

A SLIGHT REVERSE.

Boers Overpower British Garrison at Jamestown.

VLAKFONTEIN FIGHT WAS DESPERATE

Boer Attack So Sudden That Fifty British Fell at the First Volley. Battery Lost Guns, but Recovered Them.

LONDON, June 5.—The war office publishes the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, June 4:

"Jamestown, Cape Colony, surrendered to Kritzinger's commando on the morning of June 2 after four hours' fighting. The town guard and loyal volunteers were overpowered before our pursuing columns could come up.

"Our casualties were three killed and two wounded. The Boer loss is said to have been greater.

"The stores were looted, but the garrison was released.

"Have placed General French in charge of the operations in Cape Colony."

Details received regarding the fighting at Vlakfontein show that it was one of the most desperate engagements of the war. General Dixon's column was traversing the district and establishing posts when it was attacked by 1,200 Boers under Commandant Kemp. The Boers were so close that 50 British fell at the first volley.

The yeomanry held the position, protecting the guns until they were nearly decimated, and then, finding it impossible to save the guns, the artillerymen shot the gun horses to prevent the Boers moving the guns.

The column quickly recovered from the shock of the unexpected attack. The Derbyshires charged with bayonets and, after a short desperate fight, drove off the Boers and recovered the guns. The Derbyshires and yeomanry both lost very heavily.

It is asserted that while the Boers had temporary possession of the guns they shot two artillerymen in cold blood for refusing to work them against their own comrades.

The appointment of General French, who has been recruiting his health in Cape Town, to command the operations in Cape Colony indicates that Lord Kitchener attaches considerable importance to the invasion.

The recrudescence of serious fighting brings further demands for the sending of re-enforcements.

The surrender of Jamestown is regarded as a disagreeable incident because it has provided Commandant Kritzinger with a fresh supply of the sinews of war.

Burglars Break For Liberty.

TORONTO, June 5.—Frank Rutledge, Fred Rice and Frank Jones, three alleged bank burglars extradited from Chicago and on trial here for robbery of a private bank at Aurora, were being transferred from the courtroom to the jail last night in a cab, in which were Police Officers Boyd and Stewart. The three prisoners were handcuffed together. When the rig was approaching the jail, an unknown person threw three loaded revolvers into the cab. Jones grabbed one of the pistols and shot Officer Boyd, who died in a few minutes. Officer Stewart opened fire on Jones, shooting him in the arm and groin. The prisoners then leaped from the cab and, boarding a passing street car, ordered the motorman to proceed faster. The latter removed the arm of the motor and struck Rutledge over the head, while the conductor threw off the trolley pole from the wire, bringing the car to a standstill. The men were then overpowered. Jones is in the hospital and will lose his arm if he recovers.

Across East River.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The last plank of the two footbridges over the new East river bridge was laid yesterday morning, and when the work was done the first persons to cross from the Williamsburg tower top to the Manhattan side were Chief Engineer Hildebrand of the Roebling Sons company of Trenton, which has the contract for the cable work; Isaac Harts, the assistant engineer, and H. B. Robinson of the bridge engineer's staff. Arrangements are being made to escort Mayor Van Wyck and other public officials across the footbridge and entertain them on the Brooklyn side.

Exciting Boat Race.

CLEVELAND, June 5.—The 100 mile race from Cleveland to Erie between the Cleveland passenger steamer City of Erie, owned by the Cleveland and Buffalo Transit company, and the Tashmoo, Detroit's crack passenger boat, owned by the White Star company, was in many respects the most noteworthy race ever sailed on fresh water. The Erie covered the distance in 4h. 19m. 9s., passing the stakeboat at Erie 45 seconds ahead of the Tashmoo, beating the latter by 45 seconds elapsed time. It was pronounced by old vessel men to be the prettiest race ever witnessed.

Reception to American Delegates.

LONDON, June 5.—The reception tendered last night by Mr. Choate to the delegates of the New York Chamber of Commerce drew a crowd of celebrities to Carlton House terrace. Leaders of the bar, finance, diplomacy and politics attended to do honor to the Americans. Lord Lansdowne, the foreign secretary, as the chief representative of the British government; J. Pierpont Morgan, Andrew Carnegie and Maitre Labori, the distinguished French advocate, were centers of admiring groups throughout the evening.

The Trolley And The City.

While there are occasional lapses, there are few cities where the local street railway company is held to a closer adherance to the agreement with the authorities of the municipality than in Plainfield. The substance of that agreement depends largely on the men who are at the head of the city affairs, and in that direction Plainfield has done far better than most places and might have had still better terms if the Councilmen had insisted on them.

Councilman Lee brought to the attention of the other members of the Common Council at the meeting Monday evening that the local trolley management was not keeping to the letter of its agreement with the city and offered a resolution that the company be informed of the fact.

Since the local trolley lines, which originally were owned by the Plainfield Street Railway Company but are now part of the greater system of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company, have thus become a small part of a great system, the management of the lines has passed into the hands of men who are not well acquainted with either local conditions or the understanding with the city government. They are used to running trolley lines in cities where the trolley service is not so carefully regulated. The result is the occasional infraction of the local franchise.

Of course, the big system has its advantages to Plainfield, and has brought certain privileges which could not be otherwise secured. There are rules, however, which the trolley company is bound to obey. It is the duty of the city officials, Councilmen included, to see that these rules are obeyed. If they fail in this effort, then they are not fulfilling the duties to which they were elected.

One of the chief objections which has been made to the putting underground of wires and the laying of water and sewer pipes is the great trouble in restoring the roadway to its former condition. Plainfield and North Plainfield are justly proud of their roads and anything which tends to injure them is sure to be looked on with much disfavor by the inhabitants of those two municipalities. At present, the employes of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, are at work in both city and borough putting down conduits to hold the telephone wires of that company. The thoroughness with which the work has been done and the roadway returned to its former condition has been an object lesson to other corporations which occasionally tear up the city and borough streets. Long and careful rolling has almost eliminated any sign of an excavation, while the ground has shown no signs of settling, a usual trouble in such cases. Much credit is due Charles W. Bunyon, the local manager of the telephone company, for the excellent work that has been done by his men. It will be well if the other companies will follow that example.

Councilman Lee's proposition, as set forth in the ordinance introduced by him at the Council meeting Monday evening, to make a new office of city sealer of weights and measures, has been the subject of considerable comment, some favorable and some otherwise. There is no doubt but that the people of Plainfield are entitled to proper weight and measure in the purchase of any kind of goods from the local dealers. As far as is known, most of the local business men are perfectly sincere in their attempt to give full weight and measure. That there may be some weights and measures, which do fall short of the standard value, is undoubtedly true in this city as well as in other cities. The question, however, which should be carefully considered is whether this is the best plan of achieving the desired result and also whether the same results might not be obtained at a less expense. The addition of each new official brings an increase of cost to every taxpayer, directly or indirectly, and the Councilmen should give this proposed ordinance careful thought before adopting it.

It is to be hoped that Mayor Smalley and the members of the Borough Council will not lose the opportunity of showing their earnestness in the welfare of the borough by providing for new street signs at the meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening. Mayor Smalley says he in favor of street signs and that he wants to see them put up as soon as possible. A majority of the Councilmen are of the same opinion. Therefore let these public officials lose no time in acting in this matter.

The two prizes, which have been offered to the members of the Plainfield High School cadet battalion to be contested for in a competitive drill, are gifts of two public spirited citizens. This is the first time that the cadet battalion has had an opportunity to have its good work properly appreciated.

It is to be hoped that the Plainfield Board of Education has been as successful in securing a good man for the place of vice-principal and science instructor at the High School as the one who has now resigned to take a higher position elsewhere.

The month of June seems to have brought with it the long expected summer weather.

WILLIAM E. BROCK'S NEW INVENTION—THE MANUMOTOR.

About the streets of this city has lately been seen a novel machine, in the form of a tricycle, but few who have observed it have any real knowledge of the vehicle or its history.

The wheel, which is styled a manumotor, represents the work of a lifetime. Its invention is due to much study and labor on the part of a Plainfielder, William E. Brock, of Mountain avenue. Mr. Brock claims to have worked out for practical use a new mechanical movement. The art of propelling the machine is similar to the movement necessary in rowing though the expenditure of energy is much reduced. It mechanical construction is a clever combination of oscillating levers and fulcrums. With very little effort it is claimed that a speed of from twelve to fifteen miles an hour can be attained on the vehicle. The machine is intended to answer many requirements. It can be used for recreation, racing, athletic training and business purposes. The motor power it is said is alike useful for boats and for running machinery.

Mr. Brock has a factory at 12 Regent street, which is devoted exclusively to the manufacture of these vehicles.

The exercises opened yesterday morning at 10 o'clock with devotional services, conducted by Rev. Percy R. Ferris, of Perth Amboy. An address of welcome by Rev. Charles H. Dodd, pastor of the church, was responded to by Rev. Benj. Otto, of Jersey City. Rev Dr. J. W. Richardson, of Plainfield, was elected moderator, and C. Edgar Sutphen, of this city, was re elected clerk for the ensuing year.

The associational sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of Plainfield, who said in part:

"Every man born of God receives in his soul the light of the Gospel. To him the truths of the Gospel become eternal verities. Whoever has looked into the face of Christ has seen this light, and no one sees it who has not looked into Christ's face. But the light is given to the church, that the church may shed it abroad throughout the world. The philosopher and the scientist know not the way of life, but the humblest child of God knows it. We are to be witnesses for God in the world. But sometimes we do not shine. We have the light in us, but it is hidden, and then we fail in our mission. To us, as Baptists, the call come to spread our denominational light.

"We are the guests of this old and venerable church and it is fitting to say a few words about it."

Dr. Yerkes then reviewed the history of the church and the pastors and laymen. In conclusion he spoke of the twentieth century church. It might adapt itself by new methods to new conditions, he said, but it would not differ much from the church of the century past. The new generation must build on the foundation laid by the fathers, but must build in accordance with the plans of the Great Architect.

The morning session closed with the transaction of routine business. In the afternoon the address was by Rev. Samuel C. Dean, of this city, on "The Ideal Church." There were also brief addresses by Rev. Benjamin Otto, of Jersey City; Rev. Dr. Albert Foster, and C. Edgar Sutphen, of this city, and Rev. T. E. Vassar, of Elizabeth. The feature of last night's session was a historical address on "The Life and Times of Rev. Dr. Henry Clay Fish," by Professor Newton L. Andrews, of Colgate University.

Prejudice Against Glasses

Many persons are prejudiced against the wearing of Glasses and sometimes positively decline to use them even when they are imperatively needed. They may be sensible persons and display good judgment in other matters, but in this one respect they act most foolishly and without any reason. A contest with age is hopeless, and it is the part of wisdom to yield gracefully to the first summons to surrender.

With a low whistle Stanton returned to the messenger and asked: "Do you want to take a ride?" The boy grinned, and he continued: "Here's a dollar for your time. Get into that carriage as quick as you can and slam the door after you, but don't speak to the driver. When he stops on the ferry and asks you where to go next, tell him to drive back to the stables and that I will pay him in the morning. See?"

The boy saw, for he was in the carriage in no time. The dor closed with a bang that thoroughly woke the driver, whose educated brain caught up the thread precisely where he had dropped it. Before his eyes were well open, the blankets were off the horses, the whip had cracked over them, and they had started most satisfactorily.

Stanton watched them from the shadows. A moment later the tips of his teeth appeared under his mustache as a carriage came from the side street and followed his own with the messenger boy.

"Dat's him," he muttered, and was still looking after the lost interest, when another hand touched his arm, and another voice, softer than the messenger's, repeated:

"Mr. Malcolm?"

It was a time of swift vicissitudes for one guided by instinct. In the first quiet thoughts of his waiting he had honestly determined to give up the plan for the sake of her who was to be the sacrifice. A moment later he was turning away, disgusted that he had ever thought of trusting her. It took but a touch of opposition, in the shape of Raymond round the corner, to determine him to carry out the plan at all hazards. Now the determination vanished in an instant, whether because the sacrifice stood before him or because the way was clear of opposition, and he replied:

"I was this morning, but I am ashamed of it. My name is Stanton—Robert Stanton."

"Mine is Esther Thorndike. My friend explained to me what is required, and I am ready to act for you."

The young lawyer hardly realized what she was saying. He was looking for the deformity. It required but a moment to decide that at least it was not in her body. Whatever was wrong was surely under the veil. He could not even see the outline of the face.

She stood as if waiting for a reply, but he was not aware that she had asked a question. He tried to recall what she had said, and then took refuge in expressing his compunction.

"I've begun to realize that my plan was a very cold-blooded and selfish idea, and I've grown heartily ashamed of it," he said.

"A plain business bargain is hardly open to sentiment," she replied, quickly. "I am quite ready, and if you are we had better start."

"Yes, but my carriage. It has just gone with your messenger-boy to Jersey City." He paused as his ear caught a low laugh tinkling under the veil. It was contagious. He was smiling, too, as he continued: "Shall we have another carriage and go on, risking a meeting? It seems cowardly to run from anyone, but there are many detestable things which we might do that would delay us till after midnight, in spite of anything but common law, which would be to degenerate altogether. I hate to run the other way, but perhaps it would be wiser, to-night, to go to Brooklyn instead. Does it matter to you?"

"Dr. Atwood is my pastor, and I would rather not go to him. But to anyone else. Yes. I think it would be better to go to Brooklyn," she said.

"Rev. Dr. Borden was a witness to the will. It might save publicity, in a legal way, afterwards, to have him also perform the ceremony."

It occurred to Stanton that this was really a remarkable idea, and he was wondering that it had not occurred to him before, as the lady replied:

"I know just where he lives, and perhaps it would be better that we should not go together. I will be there as soon as you."

She had hardly ceased speaking when she literally disappeared. Stanton looked after her for a moment, and the tips of his teeth appeared as he muttered:

"She'll be there some time before me at that rate. To say the least, she's not a cripple." Then he followed her.

On the way conflicting sentiments so thoroughly disturbed his first impressions of that new idea that by the time he arrived at Dr. Borden's he heartily wished himself anywhere else in the world, and it appeared the most fortunate thing that the good lawyer was attending a conference in lower New York and could not return before ten.

The lady talked incessantly, upon subjects which had always interested him, and more than once Stanton found, to his astonishment, that he was laughing heartily at her wit and joining eagerly in arguments, frequently with the conviction that he came out of them overmatched. He wondered that he was not bored, and said to himself that if it were not for the business ahead of him he should count it one of the pleasantest evenings of his life. Sometimes it occurred to him that he would have been fortunate if he had made the bargain for a real wife, instead; only how could he have known in advance? Yet underneath it all his other mind was entertaining conflicting sentiments about the advisability of securing the services of Judge Russell, after all. There were certain social complications which might result, later on, which would not threaten if Dr. Borden performed the ceremony. Besides twelve o'clock was creeping dangerously near, and at last he suggested that they go back to Dr. Borden's.

In all his life he had never been of so many minds; but the lady concurred with each as though it were the wisest possible suggestion, and they returned. Sober thought would have helped him, but ideas came in the abstract and in utter confusion, piling one on another. If Dr. Borden had returned, doubtless Stanton's first impulse would have been to turn and run. But Dr. Borden had not returned. It roused in him simply a determination to find him before it was too late.

Absolutely nothing occurred to him but to go at once to New York and hunt him up.

They went by the ferry, as nearer their destination and less conspicuous, and a curiously safe feeling crept into Stanton's heart as he walked by Esther Thorndike. He only realized it, just as he had realized that she entertained him at Judge Russell's. He had no time for more than that among the crowding of conflicting sentiments concerning the business in hand, but he remembered the impression afterwards, and better appreciated it.

Among the thoughts that came to him was one picturing his condition at that moment had it not been for his first caller—had he been forced, for instance, to select the bedizened duchess for his bride, or the runaway schoolgirl.

His heart went out in an unaccountable fashion to Esther Thorndike. He wanted to grasp her hand and thank her for saving him from that. He did not venture quite so far; but he spoke to her that he might at least hear her voice in reply. It was like water to the thirsty. He wondered what it could be that was wrong with the hidden face. He was sorry for her—very sorry; and he resolved that as soon as this business was settled he would show her his gratitude and appreciation in a very substantial way. Indeed, he had reached a point where he was almost ready to declare that she should not sink into oblivion at all, when the boat touched the New York side, and she proposed remaining in the ferry waiting-room, that she might be near at hand when he wished her without hampering his search.

An hour later he came hurrying down the walk alone, his face expressive of failure.

Esther Thorndike was waiting at the gate. He knew her in an instant, but before he could speak she laid her hand on his arm, saying:

"Hurry. He just passed me. He is on this boat."

Again a strange feeling crept over him, which he remembered afterwards.

As the wheels started, Esther Thorndike entered the ladies' cabin, and on the other side Stanton greeted the clergyman with the question:

"Do you remember my uncle's last words, Dr. Borden?"

Early in the morning the good doctor had heard that the property was taken from his young friend and parishioner. It fell like a heavy weight upon his heart, and all day long his mind had been upon the death-scene, with the dying words its salient feature. Instantly he repeated them: "Twelve o'clock, and all is well." "But, Robert," he said, anxiously, "what does this mean that I hear about the property?"

"A mistake," Stanton replied hurriedly. "It is for me to correct if I can, and I can do it with your help. I did not like the way the property was left, and did not care to redeem it. Only last night I learned the reasons for my uncle's wish that I should keep it, and I resolved to do so if I could. I cannot explain it better now, but I will satisfy you fully later. The seizure of the estate was made acording to the death certificate, which was dated December 5; but the physician has acknowledged that he was wrong, and, as you know from those last words my uncle did not die until after 12 o'clock. It was upon the 6th. If I am married before midnight to-night, I shall carry out my uncle's wishes."

"But the wife, Robert?" the good doctor said, lowering his head to look over the top of his glasses, as was his wont in moments of emergency.

"She is waiting in the ladies' cabin. We have been searching for you all the evening," Stanton replied.

"A good wife is better than riches, but a poor wife turns heaven into hell. I am sure your uncle would not have the property put to the risk of a sacrifice," the doctor said, a little doubtfully.

"She is very much too good for me, in any case," Stanton said, taking out his watch—a legal trick which rarely fails to distract the attention. Involuntarily Dr. Borden looked at his own watch, and his thoughts turned upon the time.

"It is 11:25, Robert," he said. "Too close to the last moment. Too much like a death-bed repentance. But we can make it by taking a carriage directly to the house. Have you the papers ready?"

Stanton handed him the Brooklyn permit. He glanced at it and said: "Esther Thorndike, Brooklyn. It's a good name, Stanton. Whatever there is in a name I don't know, but there's something; and that is a good one. But I don't seem to remember it. Where does she live?"

"She attends Dr. Atwood's church," Stanton replied, with some hesitation. He was not an expert at answering questions, especially when he had something to conceal, and from the doctor's tone it was evident that if he knew the facts his assistance would be doubtful.

"Yes, but her home?" Dr. Borden said.

There was a wild cry forward. Some one was overboard; and it was not surprising that Stanton's first thought was of Esther Thorndike.

Instantly leaving the doctor, he pushed his way frantically through the ladies' cabin till he found her, and, laying a trembling hand upon her shoulder, said:

"Thank heaven! I was afraid that it was you, and that I had driven you to it. I've been blind to every interest but my own. I want you to ask whatever it is that you are to ask me, and I will do it, and a great deal more, if I can, and we will let this miserable business drop right here."

"I am not troubled, sir," she replied, quietly. "Unless you are afraid to trust me, the end that you wish to accomplish is worth more than any sacrifice which I am making, and ought not to be abandoned."

Afraid to trust her—to trust Esther Thorndike? In his present condition that idea struck him as so unjust to the woman before him, that it instantly threw the other thought from his mind, and he exclaimed: "Of course I trust you."

"Then we will carry out your plan," she said; and as the excitement forward became intense, they turned their attention towards it, and for a time neither spoke.

Some poor creature had gone into that icy water in search of the friendly hand of Death; but he was dragged out again at last and carried in triumph into the opposite cabin, to be forced again into the miseries whence he had tried to fly.

"A life saved. A grand omen for those about to marry," Dr. Borden exclaimed, coming upon the two. "And this is the lady? I thought so. I've a great instinct. I congratulate you heartily upon your husband. I've known him from a baby. He's of the salt of the earth. I've congratulated him already, for Esther Thorndike is a grand good name. When I know you better I shall congratulate him again. But, Stanton, I must have a word with you."

"Don't hesitate, doctor. Miss Thorndike understands the predicament,"

"It's now only seventeen minutes before twelve."

Stanton replied, quickly, touching his companion's arm to prevent her turning away; and for the instant he realized a thrill of pride and satisfaction in the thought that she was there and that she understood. He felt safer than when he was alone with Dr. Borden. He remembered it afterwards.

"It's only about the worldly side of this matter, Robert," the doctor said, hurriedly. "A good wife is more than a thousand fortunes. You will be amply the gainer; but I'm afraid you will have to let the fortune go. You see, we ran with the tide after the drowning man, and have drifted against the New York piers, well up the river. It will be some minutes before we get out, for we're wedged behind a long tow. It is now only 17 minutes before 12."

Stanton put his hand to his forehead and staggered back.

In the last four-and-twenty hours his mental and physical being had been tortured and dragged about in most unaccustomed ways. He had been ready to yield of himself, but to be driven to it at the last moment was too much. Esther Thorndike called him to himself by gently touching him and asking:

"Why shouldn't we be married right here?"

The NEW WOMAN

By Eliza Archard Conner.

JUST now Mrs. Ann Hamilton is struggling to fathom the meaning, if not the meanness, of life. She was a widow when she married Hamilton, he a bachelor. She was keeping boarders and laying up money, Hamilton being one of her lodgers. He had scarcely enough to pay his board and was laying up not a cent. He was a good sort of man, however, and so soon as she was his wife and he had her to plan for him and furnish capital for him to do business on he became successful. They were quite happy and harmonious. She was ambitious that they should be well to do in their old age. So she generously told Hamilton he need not even pay her any more board after they were married, but should put his money into "the business," she supporting him and herself and giving him more capital from her lodging house enterprise. So it went on 17 years. By that time Hamilton was worth $25,000, all made from capital his wife had earned and furnished to him. But he put it into his own name, take notice, with that chivalrous generosity characteristic of the masculine sex. Then, having finished things, he lay down and died. He left no will, only a scrap of paper saying he owed his wife a 17 years' board bill. That was not worth a spring poem in the court. When Mrs. Hamilton went to claim her money, some relatives whom she had never seen came and took it from her, and the court decided it was theirs. Next time she marries she will know what not to do.

It is for the development of the individual soul that we are born into this world. If the individual character is not developed in a woman, she is no better off than a horse or a cow. Consider carefully and earnestly what are your own particular talents, your own convictions of right and justice, and do what you think best. If you are wrong, you will suffer for it and learn thereby. If you are right, you will have grown and cultivated a new flower for eternity. Do not take up a fad merely for the sake of posing or seeming different from others or of attracting attention to yourself, for that is despicable. But consider in all seriousness what you yourself would rather do and be; then go and do and be it.

Mrs. Lillian R. Pardee, formerly active in politics in Utah, is now in New York city in charge of a woman's life insurance department connected with one of the leading companies of the country. Mrs. Pardee is an able, conscientious woman, and her prospects for success are bright, even though she has left a state where she could vote for an old fogy one where a wife's earnings still belong to her husband.

In the towns and villages of New York state women taxpayers may now vote on all questions for raising money by a tax levy. They have the same right in Louisiana.

Mrs. Hetty Green believes it is the duty of every woman to manage her own business affairs. She says: "What man has done woman can do. If I had let other people manage my business for me I most likely wouldn't have any business to do now."

Mrs. Cyrus J. McCormick has given $20,000 to build a girls' dormitory for a Tennessee college. Miss Louise Loeb won the oratorical contest among the students of Wisconsin university, which entitled her to represent that university at the intercollegiate oratorical contest. Society women of Boston are training in athletics. Let the good work go on.

AN IOWA MAN'S IDEA.

Phonographic Knapsack for Private or Public Dances.

Young Men Carry the Strange Device on Their Backs and Grind Out Two Steps and Waltzes at a Lively Rate.

The phonographic knapsack is the invention of an Iowa genius. His idea is to place an ordinary phonograph in a knapsack that can be carried on a man's back. The phonograph has two sets of receivers to be placed at the ears. These receivers are fitted into an arrangement so that they can be retained at the ears without being held by the hands.

The phonographic knapsack, says the Chicago Tribune, has been designed for use at dances. The young men carry them on their backs. In beginning a waltz a man places one set of the receivers at his own ears and the other at the ears of his fair partner. By pulling a cord dangling from the phonographic knapsack the machine is set in motion and a waltz is played to which the young man and his partner merrily dance. The invention will do away with orchestras and tin sounding pianos, each male guest furnishing his own music for himself and his partner.

The invention will be hailed with delight by dancers. Now, instead of 60 or 70 couples dancing to a waltz which only four or five people in the whole ballroom especially like, each pair of dancers can consult their individual preferences in the matter. Some dancers will be stepping gayly to the merry notes of "The Duchess of Central Park," while others will trip to the music of "Rufus on Parade," and dignified elderly couples will revolve stiffly by to the ancient air of "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

Young people can romp around with the merry notes of the "Caddies' Two-Step" ringing in their ears, and the young man who wishes to properly prepare the mind of his partner for what he is going to say to her a few minutes later in the conservatory can have his phonograph play "Call Me Thine Own" and "Only You" and other stuff of that nature.

The society novel of the day when the phonograph knapsack has driven out the form of music now used at balls will probably contain paragraphs like this:

"Will you waltz with me, Miss von Bulow?" Percy Styvesant bent low.

Miss von Bulow's voice grew firm.

"No, Mr. Styvesant," she answered, "I cannot."

Mr. De Styvesant's face grew almost white.

"And why, Miss von Bulow," he asked, "why, may I ask, do you refuse to dance with me when all the evening you have been dancing with Reginald Rogers and Harold Pymm and Augustus Doolittle? Yet you refuse to dance with me. Why, Miss von Bulow, may I ask, why this invidious distinction? Do you dislike me?"

"Mr. De Styvesant," answered Miss von Bulow, "I do not dislike you. But if you must know the truth, your phonograph knapsack needs oiling badly, and, besides, it does not play the 'Mosquito Two-Step,' and the last time I danced with you it jumped a cog and changed from that beautiful waltz refrain, 'Dreaming,' to that hateful old coon thing, 'When I Walk This Levee 'Round.' I don't care to waltz with you, Mr. De Styvesant, until you get another phonographic knapsack."

Mr. De Styvesant sighed and went away. A few minutes later a sound was heard in the cloakroom as of a man breaking up a phonographic knapsack with an ax.

A Noiseless Alarm Clock.

A noiseless alarm clock would prove a boon to a host of sufferers from unseasonable din. The suggestion is made that a silent alarm can be given by focusing an electric lamp upon the head of the person to be awakened and arranging the switch so that the current to light the lamp would be turned on by the clock at the desired time. It is claimed that the flash of light would invariably arouse the sleeper.

Growth of Boys and Girls.

At five years of age boys are mainly taller than girls, but the girls appear to equal them at the seventh year and continue thus up to and including the ninth year, after which the boys rise again above the girls for two years. At about 12 years the girls suddenly become taller than the boys, continuing until the fifteenth year, when the boys finally regain their superiority in stature.

Snow Water Is Not Pure.

Snow water, the product of melted snow, it was long thought, was the purest of all water. This idea has been proved incorrect, as the reverse is the case. Snow is really a purifier of the atmosphere, attracting from it as it falls various impurities; and these are found in the snow water.

CUP DEFENDER WRECKED.

Constitution's Mast Broken While Taking a Trial Spin.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 5.—The Constitution, which left here so proudly early yesterday afternoon, with sails glistening in the sun and her hull bending gracefully before the brisk breeze, came slowly into the harbor just before 6 o'clock looking more like the derrick boat which stepped her mast at Bristol than the candidate for the world's yacht racing championship. The Mount Morris, tender of the Constitution, and the Herreshoff steam yacht Eugenia had lines out to the big sloop, and at a snail's pace they were dragging her toward her moorings.

The cup defender carried away her mast three miles off Brenton's Reef lightship. She was standing offshore on the starboard tack in a strong southwest wind when her topmast snapped about half way up, and before it reached the water the steel mast bent double about eight feet below the three lower spreaders, and sails and mast fell over the port side. It was practically a repetition of the Columbia accident, and it happened almost in the same locality. No one was hurt in the accident, although one of the mates was swept overboard. He was rescued and suffered no harm. Rear Commodore C. L. F. Robinson of the New York Yacht club was on board the Constitution with Manager Duncan.

The accident at first caused consternation among yachting men here, as it was thought serious delay in the work of the yacht might result. When it became known that the loss of the mast was the most serious damage, the opinion was generally expressed that in spite of the trouble the Constitution would be ready for her races with the Columbia, scheduled to take place here June 15 and 17.

The British Smile.

LONDON, June 5.—Regret, not unmixed with satisfaction, is expressed at the accident which has befallen the Constitution, and her misfortune is held to prove that yacht designers on both sides of the Atlantic show a tendency to cut matters too fine. "The laugh is on our side now," says The Daily News. "Yacht racing will soon become a dangerous sport if ships are not allowed a larger margin of safety."

VOLUNTEERS' SETTLEMENT.

Commander Booth Outlines Plans For the Georgia Colony.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Ballington Booth, commander of the Volunteers of America, makes this statement relative to the proposed Volunteers' settlement to be established in Georgia:

"The colony to be formed by the Volunteers will not be similar to those now in operation, but we have under consideration a plan for a more successful carrying on of our work among the tenement house class in congested cities.

"In visitation work we come into contact with a deserving class of poor without hope of bettering their condition. These individuals come from agricultural districts in this and other countries with the view of being restored to their natural environments.

"We have under consideration the proposal to own 100,000 acres of land in the south. Under our plan a stock company would be formed under a separate corporation. The Volunteers would hold through representatives sufficient stock to insure the philanthropic work of the Volunteers being carried out.

"Should the undertaking prove a financial success, a portion of its proceeds accruing to the Volunteers will be used in the extension of humanitarian efforts throughout the United States."

A Mysterious Explosion.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Passengers on the steamship Monmouth, running from New York to Atlantic Highlands, were startled by a terrific explosion on the pier of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Atlantic Highlands just after the boat landed. Andrew Heavy, the baggage master, had picked up an ordinary looking trunk to carry it from the boat to the train when the trunk blew to atoms. He was burned from head to foot, and several baggagemen standing near by were slightly injured. The crowd of passengers rushed from the pier. No scraps of the trunk could be found afterward, but some bits of wire and pieces of electrician's tape were discovered lying about. When Heavy was removed to the Long Branch hospital, a cartridge was found embedded in his leg. Pieces of metal sheeting were also found.

Linemen to Resume Work.

BOSTON, June 5.—The linemen of the various electric light companies in Boston and vicinity who have been on strike for the past month returned to work today, an agreement having been reached. The terms have not been made public. The men are employed by the Boston, Brookline, Cambridge and Somerville Electric Light companies. The linemen of the Boston Elevated Railway company and of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company are still out.

Dady Bid Rejected.

HAVANA, June 5.—The municipal council of Havana has unanimously rejected the Dady bid for the sewering and paving contract on the ground that it is too high. Senor Gener, the mayor, says the contract should be advertised more extensively and for a longer period than before. The Dady bid, approximately $14,000,000, now goes to Governor General Wood for final decision.

SPORTING.

GOLF.

Edward Erickson, expert at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Clubhouse, having fully recovered from his recent severe illness, is again at his post of duty.

The Plainfield Field Club is desirous of arranging a baseball game with the New Jersey A. C. and challenges it to a match to take place at Dewey Park Saturday afternoon.

During last month the best gross score made by a woman member of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club in competition was 101. This was made by Mrs. N. Pendelton Rogers on May 11. Miss VanHerwerden on May 24, made the next best socre, 107, and on the same day Miss Adelaide Ball made a gross score of 121. For the men W. L. Glenny made the best gross score in competition. It was 84 and was made May 18. Willard Wadsworth made the next best score, 86, on May 11, and Howard Wright made an 89 on May 4.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Alis Athletic Association team did not put in appearance to play the baseball game scheduled between it and the Plainfield High school nine Saturday afternoon.

The Scotch Plains' nine has reason to feel proud of its home grounds. At a considerable expense and after much work a diamond has been laid out which is the equal of any one in this vicinity.

Captain McDonough and Manager Randolph, of the Middlesex Juniors' baseball team, say that their team defeated the North Plainfield Seconds Saturday morning in a five-inning game by a score of 22 to 19.

VARIOUS SPORTS

The crowd of young athletes of the Y. M. C. A. have been endeavoring to arrange an out-door meet with the S. O. H. of Westfield, but have been unsuccessful thus far. It is likely that the local boys will make overtures to the Pingry school lads of Elizabeth to join in the contest.

As a combination of unrivalled attractions, Conrad Knoth, the winner of the cup in the foot race scheduled for Decoration Day, has announced that a three ring performance will take place at Dewey Park Saturday afternoon. In order not to blur the vision of the onlookers by the dazzling spectacle the events will take place separately. A baseball game will be followed by an acrobatic performance by daring tumblers. A foot race will climax the programme.

Five Days in Lockup.

Wm. Richards, who hails from Morristown, N. J., was given a hearing, on a charge of drunkenness, at the borough police court last evening. Recorder Doud imposed a fine of $10, in default of which Richards will spend five days in the lockup.

—A very important business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. A full attendance of members is desired.

Olen L. Harvey, of Lafayette College, has been the guest of his former college chum, E. Maxwell Honeyman, of Grove street.

HARVEY DAYTON IS MISSING.

LEFT HOME EARLY MONDAY MORNING AND WENT TO NEW YORK.

Nothing Has Since Been Heard of Him—Was Steady and Industrious—Wife Greatly Worried

Much anxiety is felt over the disappearance of Harvey Dayton, of Westervelt avenue, who left his home Monday morning early to go to New York, where he is engaged in business. He had a few errands to do before going to work and for that reason he took an earlier train than usual. Before leaving home he told his wife he would return early that evening and after supper they would take a bicycle ride.

That was the last time his wife saw him, and the only word received concerning him was through a friend who went into New York with him and left him at the ferry. Mrs. Dayton cannot account for her husband's strange disappearance and she cannot imagine what keeps him away from home. She is greatly worried about him and has fears that something has happened to him. Still, she believes that she would receive some word if this is true.

Mr. Dayton formerly worked as a pattern maker at the Pond Tool Works, and is well known in this city. He was very active at the Y. M. C. A. and was always very industrious and steady in his habits. As yet every effort to locate him has failed and it is quite likely that if he does not return home soon a general alarm in New York will be given.

RECEPTION TO OFFICERS.

Given Last Evening by Endeavor Society of Warren Chapel.

A reception was given to the retiring and newly-elected officers of the Warren chapel Christian Endeavor Society after the regular weekly business meeting last evening. Refreshments were served and a social time had.

The committee in charge of the affair was Mrs. Theodore Martin, chairman, Mrs. L. C. Ely, Miss Florence Smith, Miss Dolly Smith and William Kenny.

Getting Ready for Parade.

There was no business of importance transacted at the meeting of Warren Engine Company last evening. David Bodine, F. Merton Lunger and J. Higgins, the committee appointed to represent the company in making arrangements for the borough fire department parade will confer with a similar committee appointed by the West End Hose Company. The committee of the latter company is Louis Bimble, Jr., Charles Graeder and Gustave Feiring.

MISS GIDDINGS DEAD.

Passed Away at Muhlenberg Hospital This Morning After Brief Illness.

Miss Laura E. Giddings, who came to Plainfield three weeks ago at the solicitation of friends to give several lectures on character as shown through the body, died this morning at 6:30 o'clock at the hospital, where she went a week ago Monday for an operation for appendicitis. She was ill during the week previous to her admission to the hospital, but she gave two or three talks at the home of Mrs. Truell, on Central avenue.

Miss Giddings was forty-four years of age, and was a resident of Somerville, Mass., where she was born. She leaves a mother and brother, who live at that place. Miss Giddings was a member of the Unitarian church. She had made many friends in Plainfield, although this was her first visit here. Word has been sent to the relatives at Somerville and arrangements will soon be made for the funeral.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE.

No Clue As To Cause Of Conflagration At Barn of Edward Gepthe, Near New Market.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, June 5—Complete mystery surrounds the origin of the fire which broke out early yesterday afternoon in the barn on the old Thiers place owned by Edward Gepthe

When discovered the flames had destroyed the interior of the structure and were bursting through the roof. The barn and several outbuildings were totally destroyed. No cattle were in the barn as was at first thought, but four horses, valued at $700, were burned to death. The building and contents were insured for $2,100, but the loss will greatly exceed this amount.

KNOCKED OFF WHEEL.

End of a Ladder on Wagon Struck Clifford A. McGee This Morning.

Clifford A. McGee, of Willow avenue, met with a painful injury while riding his wheel on the way to the North Avenue station this morning. While coming down Madison avenue he met the delivery wagon of A. M. Griffin, which was turning into the yard at the rear of the Babcock building. As the wagon swung around the end of a long ladder in it struck Mr. McGee a heavy blow felling him to the ground. The injured man was removed to his home in Love Brothers' delivery wagon. He is not seriously hurt.

WEAVERS' STRIKE IS OVER.

SETTLEMENT WAS FINALLY EFFECTED THIS MORNING.

Slight Increase Made in the Pay Per Yard Strikers Will Return to Work Tomorrow

The strike among the weavers at the Watchung Silk Company mills was declared off this morning and they will return to work tomorrow morning, a satisfactory settlement having been made between the weavers and W. R. Stanbery, the superintendent.

Previous to the strike the weavers received 5½ to 6 cents a yard, now a uniform rate of 6 cents will be paid, except on the "dobby" work. On this an increase of a half cent per yard was conceded. Originally the weavers wanted one cent increase on the plain work and one and a half cent increase on the "dobby" work, the latter work is the weaving the brand of silk on every yard. Under the new agreement the weavers practically will receive a quarter of a cent increase.

Three meetings were held by the weavers and at the meeting this morning Superintendent Stanbery was present. It was then that the settlement was effected, and both the employes and superintendent are well satisfied with the terms.

PLAYED CHESS.

Interesting Game Explained at Length at Y. M. C. A. While it Was Being Played.

An interesting game of chess was played at the Y. M. C. A. last evening. F. I Miller, a stranger in this city and Clarence L Murphy, of West Front street, played the game scientifically in a room on the third floor of the building.

As each move was made by the players it was reported by F. Richard Stevens to Alexander Millar and H. D. Hibbard, who repeated the game, in the second floor hall, for the benefit of local lovers of chess. Messrs. Millar and Hibbard analyzed each play as the game progressed.

The game was won by Mr. Miller. The play was as follows:

WEDDED IN CHURCH MIDST MANY FLOWERS.

Marriage of Miss Mabelle B. Smith, of Plainfield, and L. R. Walton, of New York.

HELD AT GRACE P. E. CHURCH

PRETTY WEDDING WAS FOLLOWED BY A RECEPTION.

Ceremony Took Place at 7:30 o'Clock—Members of Bridal Party—Handsome Gowns of Bride and Her Attendants—Will Reside in New York.

With all the pomp, glory and impressive solemnity of the Episcopal service, Miss Mabelle Bowne Smith, daughter of Mrs. Ella B. Smith and the late Henry Townsend Smith, of Westervelt avenue, and Lester Roberts Walton, of New York City, were married at Grace church at 7:30 o'clock last evening.

Long before the time had arrived when the ceremony was to be performed, the stately looking church was taxed to the utmost of its seating capacity by a host of relatives and friends of the young couple, all anxious to witness the wedding.

The interior of the edifice was tastefully decorated with a profusion of flowers. About the choir stalls had been placed palms, ferns and other plants. These also lent an enhancing appearance to the chancel, where a mass of flowers abounded. Beautiful cut flowers also covered the high altar.

As the strains of the Tannhausser wedding were heard the vestry door opened and forth came the vested choir, which wended its way slowly down the side aisle, while the page, flower girls, bridemaids and ushers came through the same doorway and passed down the main aisle. No sooner had the two bodies met at the foot of the church nave than the sweet melody of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" announced the arrival of the bride and the maid of-honor at the church door. Led by the choir, singing this beautiful march, the bridal party advanced up the main aisle.

First came the ushers, Royal T. Phillips and Harold Davis, of this city, and Lester Baldwin, of Brooklyn, and Frederick Lord, of New York. Closly following them were the four lovely bridemaids, Miss Lydia M. Garretson, and Miss Helen Walton, a sister of the groom, of New York, and Miss Marie E. Collier and Miss Grace Teller, of this city. Next walked three little flower girls, Margaret Zabriskie and Beatrice and Dorothy Bowne, cousins of the bride from Glen Cove, L. I., and a page, Howard Zabriskie, also of Glen Cove, L. I., another cousin of the bride.

Preceding the charming bride, who entered with her brother, Thomas Underhill Smith, was the pretty maid-of-honor, Miss Elsie Townsend Smith, a sister of the bride.

At the choir steps the bridal party was met by the groom and his best man, John Lovell, of Irvington-on-Hudson. Standing before the officiating clergyman, Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector of the parish, the betrothal took place. The bride and groom then advanced to the chancel steps where the marriage was solemnized. The bride was given away by her mother.

When the nuptial ceremony was completed the bride and groom marched down the aisle followed by the maid-of-honor and best man. Bringing up the rear were the bridemaids and ushers preceded by the flower girls and page. While this was taking place Mendelssohn's wedding march was being played. As soon as the bridal party had passed out of the church the choir marched around to the vestry, singing as a recessional "Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart."

Immediately after the wedding, a reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, which had been decorated for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Walton departed on a late train for their wedding trip. On their return they will reside in New York, where the groom is employed as chemist in the Walton Oxygen Company.

The gowns of the bridal party were attractive. The bride was dressed in a smart gown of peau de soir trimmed with duchesse lace, and carried bride roses tied with white ribbon. Her veil was of tulle caught up with orange blossoms, and her ornaments were pearls.

White point d'esprit over white taffeta was the material of the gown worn by the maid-of-honor, who carried pink roses. The gowns of the FORMER PLAINFIELDER DEAD.

WM. B. SHOTWELL PASSED AWAY AT HIS HOME IN BROOKLYN.

Was Born in This City and Was a Charter Member of Crescent Avenue Church — Seventy-seven Years Old.

The death of William B. Shotwell, aged seventy-seven years, occurred very suddenly at his home in Brooklyn last Tuesday. He had been enjoying his usual good health, though troubled a little with inflammatory rheumatism. It was this that caused his death.

Mr. Shotwell was born in this city. He was a brother of the late Freeman Shotwell and an uncle of William H. Shotwell, of Fairview avenue. When a young man he learned the trade of tailor with George Thorn on East Front street, and followed that business for some time. He was a charter member of the Crescent Avenue church, of which there are now two left, William Corlell and Mrs. Corra Meeker. During recent years he was engaged in the life insurance business. He leaves a wife, one daughter and four sons, all of whom live in Brooklyn.

The funeral services will be held this evening at 8 o'clock from Mr. Shotwell's late home, 581 Lafayette avenue. Interment will take place tomorrow at Perth Amboy. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shotwell will attend the services.

WEDDED AT THE RECTORY.

MISS EVA PERRY MARRIED TO GEO. GROLLMISCH, OF NEW YORK.

Ceremony Took Place Last Evening—Was Followed By a Reception At Bride's Home.

With only a few immediate relatives and intimate friends present, Miss Eva Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Perry, of Harrison street, and George Grollmisch, of New York, were married at 7:30 last evening in the rectory of Holy Cross church. The words which made them man and wife were pronounced by Rev. W. Montgomery Downey, rector of the church.

Miss Perry was attired in a handsome gown of Henrietta silk serge trimmed with silk and lace. She carried a bouquet of roses. She was accompanied by an intimate friend, Miss Annie Christensen, whose gown was also very becoming. The best man was Harry Kesselring, of this city.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party adjourned to the home of the bride's parents, where they were accorded a reception by a host of friends. It was a happy occasion for all concerned and, at the close, Mr. and Mrs. Grollmisch took their departure amid a shower of rice for New York, where they will reside permanently.

Although a New York man, Mr. Grollmisch has many friends in this city, while his bride is very popular. They received numerous handsome presents.

FATHER DIED.

James W. Crawley Has Just Returned From Warsaw, Virginia.

James W. Crawley, of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, returned yesterday from Warsaw, Richmond county, Va., where he was called by the death of his father, Joseph Crawley, who passed away Friday, May 24, and was buried the following Sunday.

According to a custom in the South when relatives cannot be present at the time of death to attend the funeral, that service has been deferred until they can be present. The interment takes place soon after death.

Mr. Crawley left three brothers and four sisters, also a wife and one son, James. The latter was accompanied north by his mother who will reside in Plainfield.

Scales on Somerset Street Removed

The large scales in front of the wholesale grocery store of C. Frank French, on Somerset street, are being removed. The widening of the street at this point made it necessary to remove the scales as at present they encroach upon the new sidewalk line. Street Commissioner W. B. Emmons is superintending the work.

Will Attend Ministerium.

Rev. Wm. R. Trebert, of Watchung avenue, pastor of the German Lutheran church, will leave during the fore part of the coming week to attend the annual ministerium of New York, which meets at Rochester, June 13. While away Rev. Mr. Trebert will visit the Pan-American Exposition and Niagara Falls.

Will Elect New Janitor.

A new janitor will be elected by the Gesang and Turn Verein at its regular meeting this evening. Joseph Haurand, of Manning avenue, the present janitor, has resigned.

MRS. N. P. ROGERS TO CONTEST DECISION.

Objected to Change of Handicap Last Saturday After She Had Started to Play.

AFFECTS STANDING FOR CUP

IT WAS SUPPOSED THAT SHE HAD TIED FOR SECOND PLACE.

Change of Handicap From 18 to 15 Put Her Out of the Race—Case Appealed to President Chapman and U. S. Golf Association.

There has been a slight change in the standing of the contestants for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club since last Saturday, and the change threatens trouble in the club. It will be remembered that Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers and Olaf Saugstad were announced as tie for second honors, each receiving one and one-half points. This gave Mrs. Rogers a total of seven and one-half points. It has since been learned that prior to last Saturday the handicap committee reduced Mrs. Rogers' handicap from 18 to 15. This was not generally known. In fact, it is said, Mrs. Rogers had no intimation of the change until Tuesday, when she was informed by an outsider. The decision regarding the matter in dispute was not given until yesterday when the golf committee announced that the handicap of 15 is to stand.

In addition to the events for women scheduled at the Hillside course, Mrs. Rogers entered the competition for the Golf Committee cup, and it so happens that she is the only woman competing for this cup. At the commencement of the season she received a handicap of 18, and under this she has played in this event. She soon secured a place among the leaders in the competition and up to last Saturday she was first with six points to her credit. At the conclusion of Saturday's play an additional point and a half was won by her as she and others supposed. It is now learned that Mrs. Rogers failed to score any points by reason of the fact that prior to Saturday her handicap was reduced to fifteen, thus making her net score eighty-five instead of eighty-two as recorded. She still leads with six points, while Olaf Saugstad is given two points instead of one and a half and D. H. Rowland is given one point.

Now there arises a question as to whether Mrs. Rogers is or is not entitled to points. The golf committee declares that prior to Saturday the handicap was reduced from 18 to 15, and that instructions were given to have it posted on the bulletin board. This, it is admitted by the committee, was not done through some oversight until after Mrs. Rogers had started on her rounds, yet the members think that it should make no great difference. The change was made and if through some little misunderstanding the handicap was not posted until afterward, it should not be the occasion for any great dispute.

As soon as Mrs. Rogers learned of the change she began an investigation, with the result as stated. She now intends contesting the decision of the committee. Mr. Rogers wrote a letter to President G. A. Chapman, of the Hillside Club, and another letter to the president of the United States Golf Association. She intends to appeal from the decision of the committee providing her claim is not allowed.

In writing Mr. Chapman, Mrs. Rogers said that she considered the action of the committee unfair, unsportsmanlike and unmanly, and she thinks that she is deserving of better treatment than that accorded.

Mrs. Rogers contends that she has always played a fair and square game and that she has always brought all the honors to the Hillside club that were possible through her efforts, and to be treated in this manner is very discourteous. She also says that she has not objected to the committee cutting her handicap if she is notified of the fact. She is willing to play from scratch if the committee so decides, but to compel her to play with a "blind" handicap she considers decidedly unjust.

She has asked President Chapman for an explanation for the way in which her handicap was changed, and unless she is granted the number of points made last Saturday she will carry the case higher. In the meantime she awaits an answer from the United States Golf Association regarding the matter.

Sheriff Schoonmaker, of Somerville, was in Plainfield yesterday looking after some business matters.

THE PASTORAL CELEBRATION.

SECOND NIGHT OF ANNIVERSARY AT MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Several Addresses and Music by Independent Singing Club—To-night's Programme.

The second evening of the pastoral celebration at the Mt. Olive Baptist church attracted a very large crowd last evening. Pastor Jackson was in charge. The Independent Singing Club, under the direction of Richard Randolph, gave a number of selections in its usual pleasing manner. At the close a vote of thanks was tendered it.

Mr. Jackson was called upon to make a few remarks concerning the work and the spirit of harmony that prevails. Rev. David Blow delivered an earnest address on the subject "Where Are You Going?" After the services refreshments were served under the direction of the Faithful Workers' who were in charge.

This evening the pastors of the city and visiting ministers will speak. There will also be a heated debate on the subject: "Resolved, That slavery was more of a blessing than a curse to the race."

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

YOUNG COUPLE FROM NEW ENGLAND MARRIED HERE.

Ceremony Took Place At Home Of George B. Wean, Of West Front Street, Last Night.

In the presence of 100 guests from this city, Philadelphia, Newark, Milford and North Adams, Mass., Miss Gertrude Lee Scarborough, a resident of the latter place, was united in marriage yesterday afternoon at the home of her brother-in-law, George B. Wean, of West Fourth street, to Edwin Keyte McPeek, of Adams, Mass. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

In honor of the occasion the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, was completely transformed. Cut flowers and palms in endless profusion, but in a tasty manner, were placed about the room making a very pretty effect. The bridal party assembled in a spacious corner which was relieved by a background of handsome palms.

Attending the bride was Miss Mabel McPeek, a sister of the groom, who was very becomingly attired in a gown of white organdie. She carried carnations. Miss Scarborough's gown was a beautiful creation of silk mousseline, intertwined with lace, while she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. Mr. McPeek was attended by his brother, Forest McPeek, who acted as best man. Completing the party were two little ribbon girls, Ruth and Marion Wean, nieces of the bride, who performed their duties with becoming dignity. The ushers were John Fitzpatrick and N. Mansfield Smith, of this city. The bride and groom took their places before the clergymen while the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march pealed from the piano, presided over by Professor W. G. Miller.

Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served by a local caterer, during which congratulations were extended. At its conclusion the young couple left for a wedding trip, the destination of which they kept a secret. It will last for some time, but on terminating they will make their home at Adams, where the groom has a well-established law practice and where he is considered one of the most promising members of the legal profession.

Although it would be impossible to enumerate the beautiful array of presents received by the bride and groom, one in particular, a handsome Haviland china dinner set, deserves special mention. It was presented the bride by the members of the Picnic Party of '99, of the Presbyterian church, by whom she is held in high esteem.

Lawn Party And Concert.

The Womans' Guild of the Church of the Holy Cross is arranging a lawn party to be given in the near future. Mrs. J. O. Stevens, of Clinton avenue, the president of the guild, has offered the use of her lawn for the purpose. The out-door affair will be held in the afternoon and evening. A supper will be served and in the evening concerts will be given every half hour.

Entered Another Business.

Samuel F. Harker, formerly stationer on Watchung avenue, has left Plainfield and accepted a position as manager for the American Printing and Engraving Company, of Philadelphia, one of the largest concerns of its kind in that city. His position is very satisfactory to him and more remunerative than his business in Plainfield.

SOLDIER BOYS TALK ABOUT LOCAL ARMORY.

Decide to Start Movement to Raise Money for Headquarters for Company K.

DRILLS OVER FOR SUMMER.

WILL SEND CIRCULARS OUT ASKING FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Site For Armory Has Been Offered Free—Will Present Sword to Lieutenant Wherley—A New Corporal Elected.

Company K held the last drill of the season at Washington Hall last evening after which a meeting was held when several important matters were considered, the paramount one being the question of a new armory building. The members have already taken this question in consideration and, judging from the reports of the committee having it in charge, rapid progress has been made.

The ways and means committee reported that the citizens of the city were generally in favor of the project and, if broached, would contribute liberally toward its completion. A plan was suggested and adopted whereby those willing to subscribe would be furnished with blanks on which the amount they wished to give would be appended. This will entail more work upon the committee and in order to facilitate the plan, its number was increased from three to five, the new members being Harry Kitchell and Walter Wikoff.

It was stated that members of the Board of Freeholders had been seen in regard to the matter and they had declared that that body would make an appropriation of $500 in aid of the movement.

One member declared that he could raise $1,000 alone among Plainfielders whom he had spoken to about the company. The committee also reported the offer of a lot free by a Plainfield citizen if the company could raise the money for the building.

Among the other matters of business transacted was the starting of a subscription paper to secure funds for the purchase of a sword, to be presented to Lieutenant Wherley, of Somerville, in recognition of his services when the company was first formed, and the election of Edgar A. Pearsall, of Westfield, as corporal. Mr. Pearsall was formerly a member of the Elizabeth company. The guns of the company will now be stored until drills are resumed next fall.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, June 6.—The ninety-fifth annual General Synod of the Dutch Reformed church in America began its sessions in the Second Reformed church at New Brunswick yesterday afternoon. Rev. Edward P. Johnson, of Albany, called the meeting to order.

Rev. Dents Wortman, of Saugerties, N. Y., and Rev. E. J. Read, of Somerville, N. J., were the leading candidates for president. On the third ballot Dr. Wortman was elected. It had been expected that Dr. David J. Burrill, of the Marble Collegiate Reformed church, would be an active candidate for the presidency, but he was not present. Rev. Mr. Read was elected vice-president, and Rev. Harry Lockwood, of Knox, N. Y., and Rev. R. Bloomendale, of Michigan, were made temporary clerks.

At the evening service the retiring president, Rev. Edward B. Johnson, preached the synodical sermon. The synod will last one week. There are about two hundred delegates in attendance.

MARRIAGE AT DUNELLEN.

TOOK PLACE AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Miss Anna M. Powers, of Samptown, Wedded to Harry J. Denckiau, of This City.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, June 6—A very pretty wedding took place in St. John's church at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when Miss Anna M. Powers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs John Powers, of Samptown, was united in marriage to Harry J. Denckiau, of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Bogaard, of Somerville, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the young couple.

Miss Powers was very prettily gowned in white and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Mamie Flynn, of Plainfield, whose gown was also of white material. Michael Nevins, of Plainfield, acted as best man. On entering the church, the bridal party assembled at the altar while the Lohengrin wedding march was rendered by Miss Frances Hunt.

Immediately following the ceremony, the guests to the number of one hundred repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held lasting until late in the evening. At its conclusion, Mr. and Mrs. Denckiau departed for a wedding journey. On returning they will reside on Central avenue, Plainfield.

The groom is an employe of the Æolian Company at Garwood and has a host of acquaintances. The bride is also a popular young woman which fact is attested to by the handsome array of gifts extended by numerous friends.

GETTING TOOLS AT POND TOOL WORKS.

Only One Man at a Time Allowed in the Shop While Rest Waited Outside.

WILL TAKE SEVERAL DAYS.

AGENT OF CROCKER-WHEELER CO IN TOWN LOOKING FOR MEN.

Strikers Asked Him to Leave and He Did—Contributions Received From Several Other Organizations—Picnic Tonight.

In accordance with their decision of yesterday, the 200 striking machinists of the Pond Tool Works assembled at the Grant Avenue railroad station, this morning, and at 8 o'clock marched in a body to the factory for the purpose of removing their tools and securing what money was due them.

On reaching the works they were met with an unexpected phase of the situation, as the officials refused to allow more than one man to enter the building at once. As it took one man some time to get his belongings, the wait became very monotonous and a large number of the men left the vicinity before noon. Those who remained contenting themselves with sitting in the shade until their turn came. It is likely to be several days before the last man will have gotten his tools.

At a meeting held in Trades Union hall this morning it was announced that contributions were still coming in from other unions in sympathy with the strikers. The Bricklayers and Masons Union sent its check for $25, while another for a generous amount was received from Unity Lodge, K. of P.

An agent of the Crocker-Wheeler Company, of Ampere, whose employes are on strike, spent several hours in this city last evening in an attempt to induce the local strikers to accept positions at that place. The attitude of the first few men he approached was anything but favorable, and when it became noised about what his purpose was, he was politely but firmly asked to depart. He complied with the request.

Interest among the strikers today centers in their picnic which is to be held this afternoon and evening at Mountainside Grove. A large number of tickets have been sold and it will no doubt be a great success.

Robert Randolph, formerly of this city, and a brother of Asa D. Randolph, of Park avenue, recently secured a lucrative position with a Chicago firm and is now in Alaska, where he is assaying gold and silver in a new mining district. Upon his report will depend the kind of machinery to be used in developing the mine in question.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May Be Of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

It does seem strange that a competent man for the superintendency of the Rahway institution could not have been found in the State of New Jersey. It doesn't appear that Mr. Heg is a marvel in the field of work at which he has been engaged four or five years. After all, the chief requirement in the management of a reformatory is plain, everyday common sense. Theoretical notions of how juvenile offenders should be treated have never brought practical results. While Mr. Heg may have the say as to how the Rahway Reformatory shall be conducted, the management of the institution will, as a matter of fact, be left to the attendants and deputies.—Trenton State Gazette.

Road building in Hunterdon county is meeting with the same opposition that it has met with everywhere until the people have had some actual experience with the value of stone roads. It is strange that Hunterdon should have been so far behind other counties in accepting the advantages offered by the State in this matter. Somerset now has stone roads extending almost the entire distance from north to south within her borders, and a number of other roads which make the most delightful drives. The Freeholders are unable to comply with the many demands for the roads. They are wanted everywhere. They could not be built without the State aid, but with it the property owners and the county authorities find it beneficial to build the roads. We believe they are an excellent investment for the property owners along whose property they go, and we have yet to hear of a farmer who does not think so. No wonder that Hunterdon farm values are so low when they stick to their dirt roads and the old methods of their fathers, while the world is forging ahead. Hunterdon will be close to New York when the electric trains go between New York and Philadelphia in an hour and at a cost of fifty cents, but with dirt roads, New Yorkers will have no use for her.—Somerville Unionist Gazette.

CAN'T EVADE IT.

Positive Proof From Plainfield Can't Be Brushed Lightly Aside.

The reader is forced to acknowledge that convincing proof in his own city is pre-eminently ahead of endorsements from everywhere else in our Republic. Read this:

Mr. Jos. VanArsdale, carpenter and contractor, living at 213 Spooner avenue, says: "For several years I suffered from severe pains in my back, hips and loins so bad at times that it was almost impossible for me to get around and attend to my work. Any stooping or heavy lifting aggravated it and if I contracted a cold it always settled in my back and at such times my suffering was something intense. When Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice I was in pretty bad shape and procuring them from L. W. Randolph's drug store, I took a few doses when I found they were helping me, and on completing the treatment I was quite free from pain. I always keep Doan's Kidney Pills on hand so as to have a sure remedy close by if the trouble should ever return."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

—Mrs. A. L. Goodhue, of Boston, Mass., has leased a flat at 42 Lincoln place.

—Dyspeptics cannot be long lived because to live requires nourishment. Food is not nourishing until it is digested. A disordered stomach cannot digest food, it must have assistance. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests all kinds of food without aid from the stomach, allowing it to rest and regain its natural functions. Its elements are exactly the same as the natural digestive fluids and it simply can't help but do you good. L. W. Randolph.

CROP REPORT.

Weekly Bulletin Issued By New Jersey Weather Bureau.

The climate and crop report of the New Jersey section of the Weather Bureau for last week is as follows:

The week has been most unfavorable, cool and cloudy, with frequent heavy showers. The temperature has averaged three degrees below the daily normal, and the rainfall largely in excess in all sections. Farm work is at a standstill, and it will require several warm days before the ground is fit for planting and cultivating. There is yet much corn to plant, and considerable replanting will be necessary, as much of the seed has rotted in the ground. Some fields of wheat and rye are badly lodged, and some rusting is reported.

We devote our entire space to reports regarding the fruit prospects in all sections of the State. At this date all orchard fruits, except apples, and in a few places Bartlett pears, are in a promising condition. In some places the June drop has already begun.

Metuchen—Strawberries abundant; a good set of peaches, plums and cherries, and fairly good of apples and quinces. A. W. Marshall.

Plainfield—Fruit will not be as plentiful as thought at first, on account of much dropping; rainfall, 1.74 inches. John Neagle.

Rahway—Good outlook for apples, pears and cherries; peaches will not be as large as last year. Edgar D. Smith

Somerville—All fruits have set well, and the outlook is for good crops; quince trees in full bloom. H. V. N Garretson.

Cranford—Apples, peaches, pears and cherries promise a fair crop; plums not so good; quince trees in bloom. G. W. Westervelt.

—The bilious, tired, nervous man cannot successfully compete with his healthy rival. DeWitt's Little Early Risers the famous pills for constipation will remove the cause of your troubles. L. W. Randolph.

AWAITING INSTRUCTIONS.

Cuban Convention Assembles, but Is Disappointed.

HAVANA, June 6.—The nonarrival of the instructions from Washington was a disappointment to the convention, which had assembled nominally to listen to the report of the committee on style and to accept formally the amendment as passed a week ago after the committee had put the finishing touches to it. The conservatives had hoped for the arrival of the instructions so as to enable them to change the style in such a way as to conform, if possible, to the instructions, but a valuable opportunity was lost.

The report was accepted and will be sent to General Wood.

Senor Sanguily said that if the instructions specifically stated that there could be no interpretations or explanations added the convention should vote for or against accepting the amendment without further argument.

There seems to be a feeling that if the instructions are in the form of an ultimatum the convention will unanimously refuse to accept the amendment and will then dissolve.

Voting Machines Question Up.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 6.—Governor Stone has signed the senate bill providing for a submission to a vote of the people at the next general election a proposed amendment to the constitution to substitute voting machines for the present system of balloting. The last legislature passed a joint resolution proposing this change in the constitution, which was vetoed by the governor. The supreme court decided that the executive had no right to approve or disapprove a resolution of this kind. This bill is the next step in the proceeding and simply provides the time and manner of submitting the proposed amendment to the people.

A Copyright Decision.

CHICAGO, June 6.—An interesting decision under the copyright laws has been announced by Federal Judge Kohlsaat. The court holds that the act of a subscriber in using a copyright story without notice of the copyright owned by the company which had leased it does not give another company the right to appropriate the story for its own use. In deciding this point of law Judge Kohlsaat denied the injunction asked by the American Press association to restrain the Daily Story Publishing company from suing customers of the American Press association who had used a story alleged to be owned by the Daily Story Publishing company.

Public Institutions to Be Improved.

ALBANY, June 6.—Plans for improvements to public institutions have been approved by the state board of charities as follows: Women's dormitory and keeper's residence at Wayne county almshouse, cold storage building at the New York State Reformatory For Women at Bedford, administration building and dining hall at Woman's Relief Corps home at Oxford and residence for Catholic chaplain at Sonyea.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Dr. W. Seward Webb, who is chairman of the board of directors of the Rutland company, has bought the Chatham and Lebanon Springs railway, 57 miles in length, in the interest of the Rutland railroad. Dr. Webb and the officials of the Rutland company will go on a tour of inspection of the Chatham and Lebanon Springs railroad tomorrow.

MRS. EDDY A WINNER!

Judge Ordered a Verdict For Her In Libel Suit.

THE PLAINTIFF MADE NO CASE.

Court Holds That Words Used by Defendant Alleged to Be Libelous Did Not Sufficiently Identify Mrs. Woodbury.

BOSTON, June 6.—The trial of Mrs. Josephine Curtis Woodbury's libel suit for $150,000 damages against Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy came to an abrupt end yesterday afternoon, when Judge Bell ordered the jury to return a verdict for Mrs. Eddy, as the plaintiff had not made out a case.

The plaintiff rested shortly after noon. Counsel for the defense then made two motions—first, that the counts in the declaration (complaint) relative to publications of the alleged libelous message in The Christian Science Journal and Sentinel be stricken out, and, second (the usual formal motion), that a verdict be ordered for the defendant. Lawyer Elder argued the motions for the defense.

Mr. Elder contended that because Mrs. Eddy had relinquished the detailed supervision of the publication of The Christian Science Journal and The Sentinel it could not be held that she was responsible for any particular article published in these periodicals. On the second motion—namely, that to order a verdict for defendant—Mr. Elder said that there was no evidence that Mrs. Eddy intended Mrs. Woodbury in her annual message on June 4, 1899, and for that reason he thought the plaintiff had not made out any case that the defense should be called upon to rebut. He then read the annual message with a view to showing that the objectionable paragraph was only a small part of the message. When he reached the paragraph about the "doom of the Babylonish woman," he stopped short in his reading. He said the author did not intend any of those words to single out anybody. All her language was, he thought, merely symbolical.

MRS. EDDY.

After Mr. Peabody had replied Judge Bell said:

"It seems to me that the plaintiff has not made out her case, because the words alleged to be libelous in Mrs. Eddy's message do not sufficiently identify Mrs. Woodbury." The judge then directed the jury to return a verdict for the defendant.

Great French Advocate In London.

LONDON, June 6.—Maitre Labori, the distinguished French advocate, speaking in a strange tongue—English—held the leaders of the British bench and bar last night spellbound by his eloquence. More than 500 of Great Britain's most eminent jurists, including the lord high chancellor, all the legal members of the cabinet, all the justices of the high court of judicature and many other distinguished persons, did honor to the defender of Dreyfus and paid him a tribute such as was never before rendered in Great Britain to a Frenchman. The occasion was the annual dinner of the Hardwicke society.

Christian Science Doctor Dead.

BALTIMORE, June 6.—Miss Maud Knight, a Christian Scientist practitioner, is dead in this city. She was stricken with a disorder of the stomach about seven weeks ago. When one of the members of the family with whom Miss Knight boarded learned that she had not had the attention of a physician in her sickness, he called the matter to the attention of Health Commissioner Bosley. In this way the story of Miss Knight's sickness got into the papers and provoked something of a controversy. Miss Knight was a highly educated and accomplished woman.

Cash Register Employees to Resume.

DAYTON, O., June 6.—The labor unions in joint session voted to accept the terms of settlement of the strike at the National Cash Register works. The company agreed to take back the old force, excepting the four men whose discharge caused the trouble. Work probably will be resumed by the 2,500 employees next Monday.

The Plague In Hongkong.

LONDON, June 6.—The colonial office has received a dispatch from Sir Henry A. Blake, governor of Hongkong, announcing that 215 cases of the bubonic plague were officially reported during the week which ended June 1 and that the total number of deaths thus far from the disease is 207.

A NOTABLE BANQUET

American Financiers Royally Entertained In London.

FELICITOUS AND FRIENDLY SPEECHES

Lord Brassey's Warm Welcome Responded to by Morris K. Jesup. A Toast to President McKinley.

LONDON, June 6.—The banquet tendered by the London Chamber of Commerce to the delegates of the New York chamber at Grocers' hall last night was one of the handsomest affairs of the kind ever given in a city famed for lavish hospitality. No effort was spared to honor the American guests.

In welcoming the delegates Lord Brassey, who made the first speech, said:

"We welcome them as the representatives of the skill and enterprise which have turned the vast resources of the American continent to the service of mankind. We are largely sharers in these benefits. Our teeming millions could not live without the food America produces and the raw materials for our industries America teaches us lessons not only in the creation but in the liberal distribution of wealth."

Referring to the debt Great Britain owed to the New York Chamber of Commerce at the time the Venezuela difficulty arose, Lord Brassey said he desired to mark Great Britain's deep sense of the service rendered.

"To no other nation," he continued, "are we drawn as we are to our kinsmen across the Atlantic. The wisely directed friendship of our two peoples—not as yet and perhaps never to be cemented by formal alliance—should be a potent influence. Working together for the common good of all mankind, we may keep open the door for trade, we may spread civilization, we may protect the oppressed, and we may establish peace among the nations."

LORD BRASSEY.

The following is a synopsis of the reply of Morris K. Jesup, president of the New York Chamber of Commerce, to the address of welcome of the president of the London chamber:

"Mr. Chairman, my lords and gentlemen, it is said that kind words are the music of the world. For the gracious and kindly words with which you have made us welcome and for the generous warmth of our reception manifested in every eye and felt in the clasp of every hand it is my privilege to express the thanks of the New York Chamber of Commerce and especially of my associates here present as your guests at this memorable banquet."

Mr. Jesup then reviewed the founding of the New York Chamber of Commerce and said:

"We do not forget how you instilled into our minds those habits of industry with which we have worked during the past 130 years, so that now in the dawn of the twentieth century we are able to state with some pride that the business relations between the two countries amount to the astounding sum of over $960,000,000 yearly.

"We do not forget the kindness shown us in times of financial distress, notably in 1837, when specie payments were suspended, business at a standstill and our people disheartened, when one of our honored citizens and princely merchants, afterward a president of our chamber, Mr. James Gore King, visited London and by his high character so impressed your financial men that the Bank of England advanced £1,000,000 in sovereigns and sent the same by packet to New York under the control of Mr. King to enable the banks in New York to resume specie payments and thus restore confidence, asking for no security save the honor of Mr. King and his and Baring Bros.' guarantee, no stipulation being made as to the time the loan was to be returned nor any profit expected or required, the only reward being the desire to do a kindly and friendly act. We do not—we never can—forget that when, during our late struggle, we were not only threatened with a divided country, but were overshadowed by the menace of war with you, your illustrious, good, wise and beloved queen—God bless her memory!—was our best friend and left the dying bed of her husband to stay the hand that might otherwise have been lifted up against us.

"We are the same race, the same blood, the same language and tradition, we have the same religion, civilization and laws, and we read the same Bible. No, sir; we can only be rivals in the effort each may put forth, actuated by the same desires, to carry to the ends of the earth the blessings of our civil and religious liberty. To this end we will work hand in hand, shoulder to shoulder, heart beating with heart, and not resting satisfied until the remotests ends of the earth shall feel the effects of our unselfish purposes and desires and all the world become in touch with us."

There was a murmur of expectancy as Lord Lansdowne, the foreign secretary rose to toast President McKinley.

"I imagine," said he, "that this honorable duty has been assigned to me because I am connected with the department of foreign affairs and because it may be that a toast, coming from my lips, may seem to denote something more than a mere private expression of admiration and good will. I think I may say that to all the subjects of his majesty it requires an effort to think of our relations with the United States as foreign relations.

"With regard to President McKinley we think of the great office he fills, and in addition to his public cares we remember the burden of private anxiety he has to bear, and it is the prayer of our whole country that his wife may be restored to health and that he may continue to be to the whole world a potent influence for the good of the human race."

SERIOUS TROLLEY ACCIDENT.

Baseball Team Put Out of Action Many Others Badly Injured.

SYRACUSE, June 6.—A north bound trolley car on the Syracuse, Lakeside and Baldwinsville road, with 48 passengers, including six of the Syracuse baseball players and six policemen, jumped the track while rounding a sharp curve at 2:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon, plunged across the south bound track and toppled over, injuring more than 20 persons quite seriously.

Failure of the hand and electric brakes to check the speed of the car as it shot down an incline was responsible for the accident. No one was killed, and while none was fatally hurt scarcely a person aboard escaped without some evidence of injury. The car left this city at 2 o'clock, and most of those aboard were bound either for the lake resorts or the baseball game.

The scene that followed the plunge was almost indescribable. Men and women were tossed from one end of the car to the other and piled up on top of one another in a shapeless fashion. Windows were shattered, all the seats in the car were broken and the air was filled with flying glass and splinters of wood. Some of the passengers were rendered unconscious. Others lapsed into unconsciousness from the shock they sustained, and more than half of the 48 people were pinned under the wreckage.

SHOOTS HIS FAMILY.

A Drink Crazed Man Epacts a Terrible Tragedy.

DETROIT, June 6.—A News special from Coleman, Mich., says that Will Arnell, proprietor of a hotel and saloon in Beaverton, ran amuck and before he was overpowered shot and killed his 6-year-old daughter, fatally wounded his wife and shot his aged mother, father and sister. No reason can be assigned for the shooting.

When Arnell, who had been drinking for several days, entered the house, he went up stairs to where his daughter was hiding from him under a bed and killed her. He then came down and fatally shot his wife and fired at his invalid mother, who was sitting in her chair, shooting her through the hand. Mrs. Samuel Dopp and Arnell's sister were attracted by the shooting, and as they approached Arnell walked out to the street and opened fire on them, wounding his sister slightly.

At this juncture Arnell's brother and Mrs. Dopp's husband came on the scene, and Arnell shot his brother through the arm. Dopp was armed with a shotgun and opened fire, wounding Arnell, who was then captured and taken to the county jail. His wound is not fatal.

The Purpose of Carnegie's Gifts.

LONDON, June 6.—John Morley, one of the persons consulted by Mr. Carnegie regarding his gift of £2,000,000 to the universities of Scotland, told his constituents at Brechin that it had been prematurely stated that the annual income of the fund, which is £104,000, would be devoted to the abolition of all fees at the Scottish universities. "This notion," continued Mr. Morley, "is entirely erroneous. Half of the income will be expended in strengthening the faculties of science, medicine, history, modern languages and literature until these become as strong as similar faculties in the universities in Germany and the United States. The second half will be expended in paying the ordinary class fees of Scottish students, female as well as male."

Two Cadets Dismissed.

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 6.—Two cadets, members of the soon to be first class, were yesterday summarily dismissed from the United States Military academy. They are Stephen B. Verner of Syracuse and Charles S. Perry of Iowa. They were court martialed upon a charge of having falsely obtained permission to leave the post. This permission having been granted them, they were subsequently detected by an army officer drinking at a bar in Newburg. They were dismissed without travel pay and started for home immediately.

Was This Check Signed by Morgan?

NEW YORK, June 6.—A check which purports to be signed by J. Pierpont Morgan and drawn to the order of H. M. Grayson of the Michigan Central railway was found lying on the street in Bloomfield, N. J. The check was picked up by a dry goods merchant named Harris. It is awaiting a claimant, but Mr. Harris thinks it is a fake intended as a joke upon the finder.

Fire Causes Explosion.

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., June 6.—Fire in the cellar of Otis & Day's hardware store on Main street caused an explosion which completely wrecked the rear of the store. Several persons were blown through the plate glass front, but marvelously escaped with slight cuts and bruises. Crane's liquor store and Leo's tailor shop adjoining were badly damaged.

TILLMAN ALSO YIELDS.

Senator Withdraws Resignation Under Protest.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 6.—Senator Tillman, protesting against the governor's right to reject the senatorial resignations, has withdrawn his resignation. In his letter to Governor McSweeney Senator Tillman says:

"I have Senator McLaurin's communication in which he graciously consents, at your request, to 'hold on to his commission as United States senator and continue to serve the state as he has done in the past to the best of his ability.'

"This leaves me one of three alternatives—to appeal to the Democratic executive committee to take the matter up and determine what the best interests of the party requires to be done, to appeal to the senate itself to determine the question as to whether a resignation from that body to take effect at some future time is binding or to withdraw my own resignation. There are no precedents on this subject, because in the 125 years of our national life, with more than 200 resignations from the senate, no senator hitherto has been willing to occupy the despicable attitude now assumed by Senator McLaurin and forced on me. I am certain of one thing, that the executive of a state has no authority to decline a resignation that has been tendered, and I am equally certain that had your excellency confined your action within legal bounds that your appointees would be seated in the senate when that body meets in December and hold their seats until the legislature should act in January.

"My chief regret is that I am forced by your action to engage in what the outside world will consider a game of opera bouffe by withdrawing my own resignation after Senator McLaurin's undignified and puerile action, but the purpose for which it was tendered has been thwarted by Senator McLaurin's precipitous acceptance of executive advice. Bob Acres has been outdone for once. I have already said I had no motive or purpose in resigning except to force McLaurin's, and there is nothing for me to do but accept the situation and withdraw my own resignation, if it be lawful to do so."

Miners' Bills Still Held Up.

HARRISBURG, June 6.—The anthracite coal miners, who have been urging the passage of a number of bills in their interest through the legislature, yesterday made a final effort to get the senate committee on mines and mining to report to the senate the three mining bills that are still in that committee. This effort was made in the shape of a letter to each senator asking that the committee be discharged from further consideration of the bills. In order to make their position stronger the legislative committee of the miners has requested the members of the house of representatives from the anthracite coal counties to continue to withhold their support of the Fox bill providing for an appropriation of $5,000,000 for a new capitol at Harrisburg until favorable action is taken on their bills. The three bills still in committee provide as follows: That the miners shall be paid at the rate per ton instead of a rate per car, that a check weighman or check measurer, employed and paid by the miners, shall be present when the coal is weighed or measured and that coal shall be weighed before it is screened.

No Prayers For Unionists.

PITTSBURG, June 6.—Just before final adjournment the Reformed Presbyterian synod of America refused to accede to the request of the Federation of Labor Unions of Chicago to pray for the eight hour working day. The resolution adopted on the subject expresses sympathy for the laborer in his struggle for the betterment of his condition, but condemns the secret nature of labor unions and says Sabbath meetings are destructive of spiritual life.

FORBIDDEN CITY FIRE

Lightning Causes Destruction of Three Buildings.

VALUABLE CHINESE RECORDS BURNED

Troops Under Yuan Shih Kai Who Are to Occupy Peking Expected to Reach the City In Fifteen Days.

PEKING, June 6.—Li Hung Chang has sent an urgent demand to General Ma to hasten 10,000 Chinese troops to central Chi-li province, which is now being evacuated by the allies.

Lightning struck a building inside the gate of the American end of the Forbidden City, causing a fire. Three buildings were burned, though the American and Japanese guards did all possible to prevent a spread of the flames. A heavy rain saved the Forbidden City. One of the buildings burned was a library containing many valuable manuscripts and numerous historical records of the dynasty.

The troops of Governor Yuan Shih Kai, who are to occupy Peking, are reported to be making rapid progress. They have reached Tsangohou and are expected here within 15 days.

The Franco-German government of Pao-ting-fu has been abolished, and the native authorities have resumed jurisdiction.

The ministers have informed the Chinese plenipotentiaries that they will refuse to permit provincial examinations in Peking or Pao-ting-fu. They will, however, agree to allow metropolitan or national examinations, but not at points where provincial examinations are not permitted.

An Imperial Decree.

SHANGHAI, June 6.—The North China Daily News learns that an imperial decree has been issued commanding special examinations of candidates for appointments in the proposed reform of the government and abolishing the custom of sending an annual tribute to the court, except tea and medicines.

Baroness von Ketteler's Reception.

BERLIN, June 6.—Emperor William's reception of Baroness von Ketteler, formerly Miss Maud Ledyard of Detroit, was extremely cordial. His majesty listened with interest to the recital of the widow's sorrowful experiences during the siege of Peking and to her account of Baron von Ketteler's death. The empress, who was present at the audience, often interrupted with questions, evincing the highest regard for the widow's courage and subsequent nursing of the sick and wounded. Her majesty, at the emperor's request, pinned the insignia of the highest class of the Louise order to the widow's breast. In the evening she dined with the emperor and empress.

Whitney's Colt Won the Derby.

LONDON, June 6.—The race for the Derby stakes of 6,000 sovereigns, the blue ribbon event in the turf world, was run at Epsom yesterday and was won by W. C. Whitney's Volodyovski. The Duke of Portland's William the Third was second and Douglas Baird's Veronese third. Twenty-five horses ran. The betting was 5 to 2 against Volodyovski. Up to noon the railways carried 73,000 persons to Epsom Downs, while a great crowd went by road. A noticeable new feature on the roads was the number of automobiles. The field that started was the largest since Hermit won the Derby in 1867.

American Invasion of England.

LONDON, June 6.—The Daily Mail prints the first of a series of articles on "The American Trade Invasion," showing that the United States is successfully competing with every branch of British industry. Commenting editorially upon the question, under the caption "Why We Regress," it expresses astonishment that Englishmen, with a reputation for integrity and patriotism, should be found "ready to tell England that she has no cause for uneasiness."

Verdict Against the Lackawanna.

NEW YORK, June 6.—A verdict of $11,000 was awarded yesterday in the circuit court before Judge Nevins in Jersey City in the suit of Miss Ellen Douglass McDonald of Oxford, N. Y., against the Lackawanna railroad. Miss McDonald's leg was broken in six places and she was otherwise hurt in a collision of trains at Paterson, N. J., on Thanksgiving day, 1899. The company had already paid surgeons' bills of $4,000 and has accepted the verdict.

British Losses For May.

LONDON, June 6.—The total number of deaths from disease and military operations among the British troops in South Africa during the month of May was 25 officers and 709 men. It is understood that Lord Kitchener has not asked for re-enforcements. Mr. Brodrick, the war secretary, speaking in London last night, declared that the government was in no way discouraged over the present state of the war, which, he said, would soon be finished if the enemy would only come to action.

A Rumored Lynching.

AURORA, Mo., June 6.—It is rumored here that Mrs. Stallion and her stepson, arrested on the charge of killing Mrs. Stallion's 16-year-old daughter, have been taken from the jail at Galena and lynched. All the wires to Galena are down, however, and little credence is given to the rumor. The arrests were made on statements attributed to the woman's 7-year-old son.

Demands by Brewery Workmen.

OSWEGO, N. Y., June 6.—Brewery workmen employed in five local breweries have made a request for a nine hour workday with ten hours' pay and 50 cents an hour for overtime. The brewers are considering the request. It will probably not be granted. The spinners of the Mohawk Manufacturing company are on strike for higher wages.

A Fake Report.

LONDON, June 6.—The report from St. Petersburg circulated by a news agency in the United States that 800 inhabitants of the Tartar village of Irbeisk, on the Yenisei river, had been massacred by Russian peasants in revenge for horse stealing appears to be founded upon an insignificant affair published a fortnight ago in a Siberian paper.

The Strike Situation.

It has been the hope of all Plainfielders that the trouble between the local machinists and their employers might be speedily and amicably adjusted. There seems little hope of it now, however, particularly as far as the Pond Tool Works is concerned. The company made its proposition to the men which they refused. They were then instructed to remove their tools as they would no longer be considered employes at that shop. While the men were given until next Monday, they accepted the ultimatum at once and acted promptly. It now looks like a long and expensive fight for both employers and men as both sides are determined not to yield. It is a subject for great regret that no settlement could have been made as the fight now in prospect may bring with it many hardships for both sides.

If both employers and men retain their present stand it means that there will undoubtedly be an attempt made to fill the vacancies with machinists from other cities. The local strikers will then have the most difficult problem to confront that they have yet met with. So far, there has not been the slightest sign of violence and the strikers have been remarkably orderly and well-behaved. Will the good order continue over those circumstances which now seem so likely to exist in the near future? If the local leaders succeed in restraining the men, they will have accomplished a great work.

So far, the strikers, may be said to have retained the sympathy of the general public. They certainly have won much commendation for their orderly conduct. Let it be hoped that the future will not see any happenings that will mar the excellence of that reputation already made.

If every citizen of the borough, who is interested in seeing street signs placed in North Plainfield as soon as possible, will so express himself to either Mayor Smalley or the Councilmen before the meeting tomorrow evening, those worthy borough officials will find that they have the strong support of the citizens of that municipality in the work which they propose to undertake. There should be no delay in beginning the work and action should be taken at once. Mayor Smalley has declared himself to be heartily in favor of the signs and says that the subject will come up before the Council tomorrow night. A reminder, however, will serve to strengthen him in the opinion that his proposed course is the right one.

The people of Plainfield are interested to know just what are the arguments in favor of Councilman Lee's plan of a city sealer of weights and measures. Whenever any plan is proposed that involves the making of a new office, there is bound to be the cry that it is only a scheme to give some good partizan a fat "plum." It will be well if Mr. Lee and the other advocates of this plan will explain to the public their reasons why. It is always the best course for public officials to take the public into their confidence occasionally.

It is possible that the members of the Borough Council will hear something Friday evening concerning the proposition of a water works to be owned by the borough. A committee of that municipal body was appointed some time ago to look into the subject. The labors of that committee were found to be much greater than was first expected, and the report has therefore been delayed. The committee is now nearing the end of its labors and may have something to say at the meeting tomorrow evening.

Several Democratic journals have declared that prominent Republicans from Essex county have said that the nomination of Franklin Murphy by the Republicans will mean the election of a Democrat for governor. How much truth may be placed in these reports it is impossible to say. It is certain, however, that Essex county is going to play a very important part in the coming campaign, and that the old saying, "As Essex goes, so goes the State," will be true on this occasion.

An advertiser whose experience and success are vouched for by Printers' Ink, and who has been interviewed for that periodical, says the Philadelphia Record, tells the beginner in business that he will make no mistake in selecting a medium of publicity if he shall place his announcements to the people in a newspaper which carries a large amount of advertising and which makes exact and regular statements as to its circulation.

Although the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad was held Tuesday, there was really nothing of importance done. President Baer held a majority of the proxies and simply voted to re elect the old officers.

Rev. E. E. Jackson, the pastor of Mt. Olive Baptist church, is really deserving of much credit for the excellect work which he has accomplished at that church during the three years that he has been pastor.

An official high in power in the Reading Railway is the authority for the statement made that there will be no change in the present traffic arrangements of the Baltimore and Ohio and the Reading.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

A most praiseworthy action on the part of the Union County Board of Freeholders at their last regular meeting was that which increases the annual appropriations to the three hospitals in the county $1,000. Heretofore, the hospitals have been receiving $1,500 and they will now get $2,500. In each case the increase will be welcome and the officials of the institutions feel thankful for the increase. This action was brought about by the efforts of the Plainfield members of the board and the entire board voted for the resolution unanimously.

The highest elevation in New Jersey is called High Point, and is on the extreme top of the Schooley Mountain. It does not compare in any way favorably with the high points of the other American localities, and it would look like an ant hill when compared with Pike's Peak, with its 14,147 snow-crowned summit, and Mount McKinley, with its 20,000 towering feet. It is the best that New Jersey can do in the mountain line. While New Jersey has shown a weakness for nicknaming all kinds of hills and elevations mountains, it has never seriously laid any positive claim to being a mountainous State, and the record elevation is 1,804 feet, according to the official figures on file with the State geologists.

L. F. Loree, who has just been elected president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, in place of J. K. Cowen, resigned, is a cousin of Mrs. Edmund Pack, of Park avenue. When a boy he lived at Rahway, and when he became a young man he began his business career as a civil engineer. He was graduated from Rutgers College and soon afterward was associated with the B. & O. Railroad. He was sent to Mexico and the west by the company, after which he worked himself up to the position of general manager. He was then promoted to fourth vice-president. For some time past he has held responsible positions with the company, and this latest promotion is considered a deserving recognition of his services. Mr Loree now lives at Shields, Ohio, but expects to take up his residence in the east. He is very popular with his associates and the employes generally, all of whom are glad to learn of his promotion.

ITS RECORD.

Prudential Insurance Company Has Just Paid Its Five Hundred Thousandth Claim.

The Prudential Insurance Company of America has recently paid its five-hundred thousandth claim. The Prudential is the only life insurance company confining its operations exclusively to the United States that can point to such a wonderful record, and it shows what a vast amount of good is being done by that company, particularly through its system of industrial, or weekly payment, life insurance.

These 500,000 claim payments show a total amount of over $45,000,000 paid by the Prudential on industrial claims alone, the daily number of payments now averaging over 200.

On policies issued by the Prudential on the industrial plan, the premiums are collected weekly at the homes of the policy-holders, in sums of five, ten or fifteen cents and upwards, per week. Another feature showing the company's liberal treatment of its policy-holders is that of additional benefits, by which an industrial policy, after it has been five years in force, is credited with an additional amount of insurance, without any additional expense whatever to the insured.

Considering both ordinary and industrial, the Prudential has paid over $50,000,000 to its policy-holders since its organization.

AT PAN-AMERICAN.

Some of the Attractions Offered By the Midway Red Star Route.

One of the most valuable object lessons in the Midway Red Star Route of the Pan-American Exposition is the Hawaiian Village, where in a short time and at little expense the visitor can obtain an adequate idea of the barbarian's nature, his sports, pastimes, methods of warfare and his really enchanting music. Here also are to be seen examples of their wearing, personal adornments and conduct of household. All in all it is an exhibition of rare ethnic and anthropological value.

Principally attractive is the native theatre, where among the special features is the famous dance of the Hula Hula; the witchery of which is the very poetry of motion.

"Kapna," the Man-Fish, by all odds the most adventurous of surf swimmers, is to be seen, as are also "Kalei" and family, whose habitation has been constructed of human skulls. They are the first and only cannibals introduced into the United States, and their abode as well as themselves afford a grewsome sight. Again, you witness Kuhanas, the native priests, who perform the deeply mystic rites of Pele. You look once more and behold the beautiful flower girls with flashing eyes and graceful physiques, and ere you leave you are prone to watch the natives swim and dive in the artificial lake. Col. E. W. McConnell has booked a long list of attractions on the Midway Red Star Route and not the least among them is this quaint village.

CHAPTER VI.

"Marry us here, doctor," Stanton said, gathering himself together.

"It could be done," replied the clergyman, easily entering again into the worldly wisdom of the transaction. "No one is aft on this side. Not a soul need be the wiser. I have two friends aboard who will stand as witnesses. But to think of my marrying John Olmstead's nephew on a ferryboat! And hold on, Robert. How about the license? This is New York, and the permit is for Brooklyn. You know the importance of the case and whether there's any law to conflict."

"It wouldn't matter, but this is for New York," Stanton replied, calmly enough so long as he was upon a point of law, at the same time handing the clergyman his third paper.

"Good boy, Robert!" the white-haired saint exclaimed, slapping his friend on the shoulder. "Trust a lawyer for doing the thing brown. Just take your wife back to the most quiet corner you can find, and I'll join you with my friends in no time."

Again Stanton was trembling so that he could scarcely move or speak; but there was little need, for the clergyman was well alive, now, to the worldly wisdom of the case. The witnesses were hardly introduced when he began, from memory, the marriage ceremony, holding his watch before him as though it were his Book of Prayer, while his lips flew with the second-hand.

The wheels started, but his lips only moved the faster, under the full sense that millions of money hung upon them, and he cut and abridged the ceremony without consideration for anything but the law. He hardly waited to catch the first faint sounds of response, much less to judge from them what of doubt or fear or uncertainty the voices might portend.

In thinking of it afterwards, Stanton often shuddered as he realized what the result must have been had the clergyman been in his own quiet home. Even if the matter could have been brought so far as the ceremony, Stanton himself would have failed there, over and again, under any circumstances but the present, with the din and excitement and demoralizing haste that obliterated every feature by the way in the struggle for the end.

The awful meaning of those words, rapidly and almost unintelligibly as they were spoken, came to him even now with overwhelming force, and struck him dumb with terror.

"Now join hands," Dr. Borden repeated, and, hardly giving them time to obey, he continued: "Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder. I pronounce you man and wife."

Then came the repetition of the sacred names, followed by a moment of reverential silence, broken by the good doctor's cheery voice, devoid of the faintest professional accent, exclaiming:

"Gentlemen, your watches. The exact time is a matter of the gravest importance."

"Three minutes of 12."

"Two and a half is all, I think."

"Two, gentlemen. Two. Precisely two. Rely upon my watch. It is two minutes before 12, this 6th day of December, 1892. Two minutes is enough, gentlemen. It is enough. And let me tell you that this is the second time that one and the same fortune has been rescued, as by a miracle, by the space of two minutes one side or the other, of 12 o'clock. But bless my soul, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton, forgive me. My heartiest congratulations and best wishes. May you—"

Fortunately the boat struck the pier, and the good doctor had all that he could do to keep his feet. Stanton could not have listened to much more.

As they parted in the waiting-room, the clock struck 12, and for his last words Dr. Borden repeated:

"Twelve o'clock, and all is well."

From the moment when the ceremony began, Stanton had acted only mechanically. He had heard the clergyman say: "Join hands," and involuntarily extending his own, which was cold and trembling, he saw a white hand come from under the cloak to meet it. He saw a diamond flashing on one of the fingers. He even saw that the diamond was beautifully set in pearls. He felt a strange thrill as the warm, firm hand touched his own.

Then he heard those words—fearful words they seemed to him—"Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

He tried to cry out to stop, to save the brave little woman by his side from such an awful bond; but before he could utter a sound the rest of the sentence was spoken, and John Olmstead's millions and the woman by his side were his forever.

He would have given all those millions, and all that he had beside, to see that little woman free. How he pitied her and despised himself as they stood alone, man and wife together, in the ferry waiting-room!

"This is a case where I can congratulate you, too," she said, "and then I must go at once. It is much later than I thought it would be."

"Go?" Stanton muttered. "Go where? Didn't you hear him? 'Whom God hath joined together'?"

"You are overwrought to-night," she replied, gently. "It will be different in the morning. You will remember, then, that it was only a plain business bargain, clearly understood and fairly carried out. A wise end has been accomplished, and I am perfectly satisfied."

"I do not want to remember that it was a bargain," Stanton exclaimed, struggling to rouse himself. "It was the meanest of self-interest in me, and simply unheard-of generosity in you. Forgive me. Come with me now and be my real wife. I am not worthy of you, but I will do my best to—"

"Why, sir, not half an hour ago you said you trusted me. If I was worthy of your confidence, surely I shall not be false to our compact, for your sake, any more than for my own. Here is the card of a banking house in New York. If there are any papers requiring my signature, send them addressed to Esther Thorndike, in their care, and they will be forwarded to me at once. If no harm will result from it, I think I shall go abroad, with friends who are to leave a week from to-day. I wish that you would go away, too, for awhile, even to Florida, or California. You don't know how many uncomfortable things will come up for you to face if you remain here. Promise me that you will go."

"Why, certainly, if—" The incongruity of following instinct and saying "if you wish it" checked him. He waited a moment, and added, falteringly: "I should like to go with you." It was not necessary to see her face to know that a decided negative was coming, and before she could speak, he added: "At least you will let me send you the money for your trip?"

"Certainly not, sir. That was not the bargain which we made," she exclaimed. "You forget that, except for this legal matter which you have to settle, we are each of us precisely what we were an hour ago. We neither of us wished to marry anyone, and, to accomplish a wise end, we went through a ceremony the only result of which upon ourselves is that we, privately and secretly, know that now we cannot marry. That is all, and it was no sacrifice to either of us. I know well enough that we shall each of us respect the other's position, and that unless one of us should change and wish that we might marry, there will never be a sacrifice. I assure you, I have a great deal more money than I can ever begin to use, in all my life."

"At least, madam, there was to be a condition, and you have not named it," Stanton muttered.

"I do not need to, now," she replied, turning to go.

"It was not that way in the bargain," Stanton said, and the tips of his teeth showed under his mustache. This time it was more like the smile of a boy who had been already flogged, and smarts, and still is doing his best not to cry.

For a moment she hesitated, then, turning with a quick motion, as if to have it soon over with, she said:

"It was only that you promise me that, except where this business demands it, you will never, in any way, in public or private, admit to me or to anyone that you ever saw or heard of me."

"Why, madam?"

"That was a part of the bargain."

"Not speak to you or write to you?"

"Never. I should never respond if you did. Wasn't that the wife you wanted and the wife I promised to become?"

"Madam, I was a detestable fellow to suggest it. God grant that some day you may come to think better and forgive me."

"Don't put it so," she said. "I am bound to do my part and you are bound to do yours. Such a condition will help us both. How could I possibly have anything to forgive? With all my heart I am glad that I was able to help you in thwarting one who would have wronged you. You have done more than that, and avenged a wrong he did you long ago. Listen. I am going to trust you with a secret which would place me helplessly at your mercy if you chose to take advantage of it to discover me." She stepped nearer, took his hand in hers, and, leaning forward, added, in a low tone: "You have married the affianced bride of Richard Raymond. The engagement was broken this afternoon."

Before he realized that she was going, Stanton stood alone. Hundreds were passing, but he was alone. Later the waiting-room was almost deserted, but he was no less or more alone. The night watchman stopped before him again and again, and at last, assuring himself that at least the man was not drunk, he shook him gently and asked if he was ill.

HUGE COCKTAIL BUG

Mixed-Drink Mystery of a Marble Bar in New Orleans.

Practical Joker Almost Lands a Fresh Barkeeper in a Padded Cell—Game Worked Well for a Number of Days.

"It wouldn't have happened if it hadn't been for the freshness and frivolity of the bartender," said a young cotton man who has a well-earned reputation as a practical joker to a New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter. "One morning, two or three weeks ago, I dropped into the place where he works and ordered a cocktail. He made it, and as I was about to pick it up from the counter, I chanced to look into the glass and was horrified to see a huge, hideous bug, of a species unknown to me. It had a purple head, yellow body, and gray legs, and a less active monster I never clapped eyes on. 'Here!' said I, pushing the glass toward the bartender, 'do you put those things in your cocktails now instead of cherries?' 'What things?' said he. 'Why, things like this chromatic kissing bug in my glass,' said I. 'I can't see anything,' he replied, smiling significantly, and, by jove! when I looked the second time I could not see anything myself! The creature had vanished.

"I was so startled I could hardly find my tongue, and the bartender continued to grin in a meaning fashion. 'I'd take an oath,' said I, 'that I saw a horrible purple and yellow bug in that glass not ten seconds ago!' 'Yes, I've seen 'em myself,' said the fresh bartender; 'I've even had 'em come out of the glass and make faces at me. It's a sign you ought to change your brand of whisky.' I ignored his unkind innuendo and was about to leave the place with badly jarred nerves, when the solution of the mystery suddenly appeared before my eyes. You see, the bar counter is made of that spotted variegated marble in which you can find all kinds of queer patterns, and right before where I stood was my bug in natural mosaic. My cocktail happened to be directly above it when I noticed the thing, and it was, of course, somewhat magnified by being seen through the convex bottom of the glass.

"I said nothing about my discovery at the time," continued the cotton man, "but next day I dropped in again and ordered a drink. 'Seen any purple bugs this morning?' asked the fresh bartender, sarcastically. 'Not yet,' said I. At that he gave me the cocktail and I quietly shifted it to the right spot. 'Merciful heavens!' I yelled, 'what does this mean, anyhow! Is it a joke or a put up job to murder me?' The bartender looked into the glass and turned ashy. 'Great snakes!' he gasped, 'how did that get in there?' 'I don't know,' said I, 'but it's a brother of the bug I saw yesterday, and I believe you keep 'em in stock.' He grabbed the glass and dashed its contents in the slop bucket. Then he made me a new cocktail, I drank it and walked out.

"I let several days elapse," the story teller went on, chuckling, "and then I sauntered in again at a time when the bar was crowded. When the fresh bartender mixed my drink he watched me narrowly, but by a curious chance he deposited the glass directly over the mosaic bug. 'That's a nice confection to serve in a cocktail,' said I to the man at my elbow. 'Good Lord!' he exclaimed, getting green about the jaws, 'what kind of brute is that?' 'I don't know,' said I; 'some brand of candied microbe, I guess; they serve it to me here regular now, although I've never asked for it in my life.' Everybody at the counter crowded up to take a look, and everybody was horror struck. The bartender was distracted, and as soon as possible he seized the cocktail and threw it away; but his reputation as a careful mixer was gone with that crowd.

"Well, I don't want to bore you with unnecessary details, so suffice it to say that I have done my great bug specialty four times since, and have decided to call it quits. Between you and me, I have commenced to notice a wild look in the eye of my victim when I come into the place, and as it was no part of my plan to land him in a padded cell I think it is about time to let up and whistle off the bug. I don't know what he'll do when he finds out the truth. If it was me I'd get an ax and leave an aching void the size of a bug in the top of that counter."

At the end of the great Civil War there was many a poor soldier who came out of the smoke of battle without bruises, but with broken health on account of the hardships which he had gone through. Many of those who had escaped the bullets were just as badly wounded through stomach and digestive troubles brought on by camp life. A Justice of the Peace for Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, in relating his experience of years before, recently said: "I served four years in the Civil War, and spent ten months of that time in a Southern military prison in which, as is well known, the bill of fare was not high but rough, and which deranged my stomach and bowels to such an extent that I have been a continuous sufferer from indigestion and constipation ever since. I recently procured a box of Ripans Tabules and gave them a trial and was both pleased and surprised to find I could eat the most hearty food without inconvenience, which I have not been able to do for thirty years. I would not be without Ripans Tabules for many times their cost."

AMERICAN SILK COCOONS.

Women Can Produce Them Profitably All Over This Country.

Why is it that women in country homes in the United States have never followed up the silkworm industry that began so promisingly among us at the time of the World's fair in 1892? The mulberry and mock orange, on which the worms thrive, grow all over the Union. A Japanese expert who examined some of the raw silk reeled from American grown cocoons pronounced it superior to much of that raised abroad. The rearing of the cocoons costs practically nothing but a moderate amount of time on the part of women and girls at home, yet here are still American silk manufacturers paying annually a million of money to foreign countries when it could be and ought to be paid to American women and girls. During our World's fair Miss Ellen A. Ford of The Irish World, New York, who was one of the women commissioners, investigated this matter of silk culture thoroughly, and there was exhibited from Utah a rare collection of home grown raw silk and cocoons, so that all who saw marveled and were convinced that the industry here would be a magnificent success. Yet it lapsed. Women went on just as before. Absolutely silk culture will pay well. Cannot some woman who has a little time and can afford to spend a few dollars take this matter in hand for the benefit of herself and woman's home industry?

ORGANIZED FARM WOMEN.

Agricultural Union Among Colored Women of the South.

The saying that in union is strength is as old as the world, but the world has been a long time finding out how true it is. Among those in whom the genius of co-operation and united effort at length begins to move and thrill are the colored women of the south. This for them is the brightest sign of the future.

Some time ago negro farmers of Texas founded an improvement society, designed to foster thrift and scientific agriculture among their own people. Immediately the women of their race organized what is called the "Barnyard Auxiliary" of the Farmers' Improvement society. The object of the Barnyarders is distinctly and definitely to develop the live stock industry among colored women of the south. These earnest, brainy negro women finally understand and know that industrial training in the things they are doing, the business immediately under their noses, is what they need even more than literary and professional education.

Accordingly they will devote themselves to bee culture and to the rearing for market of poultry and domestic animals. Swine breeding will be included in their list, likewise dairying. First of all, they will make these industries pay—industries of which every one can be conducted at home. There the women will stay, not fooling after things they cannot reach, but cleaning up their barnyards, studying the science and art of poultry and pig raising, of beekeeping and dairying. They will bring the best products in these lines to market and then shrewdly claim the best price. The negro men will attend to the mules and crops. The homekeeping women will rear and improve the small live stock and put on sale choice butter and milk. Already this noble union of women has a membership of 2,500. They have bought 50,000 acres of land in different places and possess a united capital of $700,000.

Grilled haddock is a very tasty dish, but spoiled unless the fire is perfectly clear. First split a haddock open so that it will lie flat, wipe it thoroughly dry, smooth the flesh with a broad bladed knife, brush it over with oil and dredge dry flour over it. Broil upon a well greased gridiron, putting the skin side first to the fire; broil both sides, dish on a napkin.

HIS CAREER CLOSED.

Exit of Baron Fava, Italian Ambassador at Washington.

The Record He Made in This Country Is Not an Enviable One—Upholder of the Vicious Padrone System.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE diplomatic representatives of all nations now located in our national capitol, and all of the leading statesmen of our republic, are publicly expressing regret that Baron de Fava, the Italian ambassador, has been recalled from the embassy here and required to return to Rome.

How much sincerity there is in all this ado about Fava may be understood when facts take place of fancies, and naked truth is placed upon the pedestal usurped by fiction.

In the first place be it known that the Italian government fosters the immigration of the paupers of Italy to this land of the free. Because of Italian official promotion of the padrone system, or because of official connivance in encouragement of that system, tens of thousands of Italian paupers have been annually sent to America, until the total amounts to hundreds of thousands. This country protects itself against invasions from China; bars out the honest industrious slaves of the six companies; and encourages the slaves from Italy who come here to toil for inexorable masters.

Although it is announced that Baron Fava has been recalled at his own request, it is known that his going has been accelerated by the fact that for many years past there has been some complaint on the part of officers of the United States government that Baron Fava was not inclined to do anything toward breaking up the padrone system among the Italians in this country. On the contrary, the immigrant officers in New York and elsewhere have complained repeatedly that whenever they have attempted to break up the padrone system the principal offenders invariably have appealed to the Italian ambassador, and on all occasions Baron Fava has used his official position to protect these traffickers in the flesh and blood of Italian paupers. Moreover, it has long been known to well-informed newsgatherers in this city that reports of treasury officials demonstrated that the Italian government favored the padrone system, and that Baron Fava encouraged the immigration of numberless men, women and children who served in slavery in our cities for a certain number of years after their arrival in this "land of the free."

These conditions became so notorious at last that it was impossible to longer cover the facts, so that Italian societies in New York and other large cities took up the matter and presented it in such a strong light before the new king of Italy that the recall of Baron Fava was inevitable. Whether the villainous padrone system is now to be broken up remains to be seen.

It seems a pity that Celso Caesar Moreno could not have lived a few months longer, in order that he might have witnessed the departure of Baron Fava—as a fruition of the work of poor old Moreno against the enslavement of his Italian countrymen. He had been rich and powerful, but he died here last March in humble circumstances. He was or had been concerned in many controversies, one of which was over the management of the Italian exhibits at the Philadelphia exposition. This quarrel, which involved Secchi de Casali, of New York, was waged for many years, long beyond the time when the public ceased to have any interest in it one way or the other. He was very vigorous for many years in trying to break up the padrone system, and in his crusade against that evil made charges against Baron Fava, the Italian ambassador, which he was not able to fully substantiate in court, because his witnesses, the poor organ-grinders and peanut venders, were under duress of threats from the Italian legation. The result was that Baron Fava caused Moreno's incarceration for libel four years ago. It seems a pity that he could not have lived a little longer to have seen the sunlight of truth gild the spires of the temple of justice.

It was a pitiful sight to see Moreno in the police court, answering a charge of libel, and the agony depicted upon his countenance could not be portrayed by pen or brush when it became apparent to him that the poor Italians, in whose behalf he had labored, dared not come into court to substantiate his charges.

In 1879 this old man, who went to prison in this city a few years ago, was made prime minister to King Kalakaua, of Hawaii, but retained that high office only five days. The ministers from Great Britain, France and the United States formally objected to Moreno's continuance as prime minister, and King Kalakaua was obliged to revoke his appointment. Nevertheless, to show his continued confidence in Moreno, the Hawaiian king secretly commissioned him as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States and to all of the European courts. He was publicly authorized to take three young Hawaiians to Europe to receive liberal educations, and the Hawaiian legislature appropriated $15,000 for that purpose. One of the youths was Robert W. Wilcox, now a delegate in congress from the American territory of Hawaii. On August 30, 1880, with the three youths under his guidance, Moreno sailed from Honolulu for this country.

Unfortunately for him, Moreno did not confine himself alone to the duties devolving upon him at that time. He was burning for revenge upon those who had caused his removal from the position of prime minister. He went to President-elect Garfield, told him that the United States minister at Honolulu had interfered with the government of the king. He told his story also to Secretary of State Evarts, and was making progress, when a revolution occurred in Hawaii, whereby King Kalakaua was obliged to form another cabinet, and Moreno's credentials were revoked.

This singularly gifted man was born near Chiavassa, Piedmont, Italy, in 1830. From an humble Piedmontese he rose to riches and to the confidence of rulers. In the days of his affluence and power he counted among his friends King Humbert, Li Hung Chang, King Kalakaua, Napoleon III., John Sherman, James G. Blaine, Leland Stanford, and others high in the coteries of wealth and power. He received his education from a Catholic bishop, who was his uncle. He became proficient in languages, mastering 14 different tongues, including his own Italian, English, German, French, Spanish, modern Greek, Arabic and the court dialects of China, Japan and Hawaii, as well as several other dialects which were useful to him as a man of the world and its affairs. In his dealings with national and international men and affairs, he found his conversational powers to be of great value, because he could converse with men in their own language without the aid or interference of an interpreter. He often said that interpreters were more often causes of interference and annoyance than aids.

In his young manhood Moreno owned his merchant vessel, and sailed it wherever he chose to cruise. He settled in Sumatra in 1861 for a time, and there married a daughter of the sultan. Because of a revolution in Sumatra, Moreno, as a son-in-law of the sultan, was obliged to flee, and he never dared go back to claim his wife. He went to King Victor Emmanuel, then to Emperor Napoleon, and to other rulers, urging the colonization of Sumatra by Europeans. Napoleon was especially pleased with Moreno's suggestions, bestowed upon him a medal of the Legion of Honor, but was unable to carry out his colonization scheme. Napoleon sent him to Tonquin in an official capacity, where he served two years. He then went to China, became acquainted with Li Hung Chang, received a concession to establish a steamship line under the Chinese flag, between Shanghai, Honolulu and San Francisco.

It was while on this mission that he became a favorite of King Kalakaua, and was made prime minister, giving up his Chinese concessions.

Later he proceeded with his Hawaiian protege to European countries, and was received royally in France, Germany and Italy. He made the acquaintances of Gambetta, Victor Hugo, De Lesseps and Crown Prince William, now the German emperor.

Subsequently he returned to this country and spent his declining days defending the Italians who were here in servitude under the padrone system. One by one his great friends forgot him, and the old man in poverty declined to claim their recognition. His pride was all that remained of his former self. On March 10, of this year, he fell speechless on the sidewalk near Pennsylvania avenue. He was taken to Providence hospital, lingered one day in unconsciousness, and died. He who had possessed the sincere friendship of potentates, princes and millionaires thus passed away. The passing of Baron Fava from this country recalls the passing of Celso Caesar Moreno. It does seem a pity that he might not have lived a few months longer. But human views of men, nations and epochs are circumscribed, for "there is a divinity that shapes our ends, roughhew them how we will."

GOLF.

The only event scheduled for Saturday on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course is the weekly competition for the Golf Commmittee cup. During the week a few private dinner parties will be given at the clubhouse.

There was a large delegation of golfers on the course of the Westfield Golf Club Sunday. There were no special events, the day being devoted entirely to general play. Several Plainfielders visited the course during the day.

The golf committee of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club announces that George P. Mellick has presented a cup to be played for every Saturday morning, women's handicap competition. Play will be open to all classes of members and the one returning the three lowest net scores to receive points. The player receiving the greatest number of points throughout the season will receive the cup. Competition will begin Saturday morning next.

Word has been received concerning Harvey Dayton, of Westervelt avenue, who strangely disappeared several days ago, and Mrs. Dayton has learned that he is all right. He went away in search of another position, having resigned the one he held up to Monday last, and he thought he would not return home until he got the position. Through the efforts of friends his whereabouts was learned and Mrs. Dayton was notified last evening.

BOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL LOST TO PINGRY AT ELIZABETH.

Elizabeth Boys Won By Score Of 9 To 4—Two Costly Innings Lost The Game.

Costly errors were the cause of the North Plainfield High School nine being defeated by the Pingry School team at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon in its last game of the season. The score was 9 to 4.

The boroughites went all to pieces in the first two innings and allowed their opponents to score six runs. After that the North Plainfielders took a brace and played a steady game. Pingry tried two pitchers. Miller was in the box for the Elizabeth boys for the first five innings, and then Little was substituted. Crite, the boroughites' pitcher, kept up his record by striking twelve men out. Pingry made but one base hit throughout the game.

TOO MUCH DRINK.

W. F. Shannon Arrested By Policeman Gamo For Being Disorderly, Yesterday.

After evading detection for several hours, William F. Shannon, of Brooklyn, was arrested by Patrolman Gamo at the new depot yesterday afternoon on a charge of disorderly conduct. He had been visiting about town during the day and, on meeting his acquaintances, had evidently imbibed a liquor stronger than Netherwood water. He was first noticed, it is said, annoying women on Front street and in other ways making himself conspicuous. He managed to avoid the police until captured at the station.

Shortly after being locked up a friend appeared and he was released in the latter's keeping. Owing to the absence of City Judge Runyon no date has been set for the trial.

FLAG RAISING.

Farmer Orator Martine Made the Address at Nelson's Hotel Yesterday Afternoon.

In the presence of a large crowd, James E. Martine, the "farmer orator," delivered a patriotic address on the occasion of the raising of a flag staff at Nelson's Hotel, Watchung, yesterday afternoon.

From a rough sketch compiled by Ex-Chief Marshal Wm. N. Pangborn, the speaker discoursed on the history of the history of the old tavern. The original hotel was kept in 1798, by "Aunt" Sally Davis. This building is still standing and is used as a storehouse in the rear of the present hotel. In 1828, General Wm. Pangborn, an ancestor of Wm. N. Pangborn, took charge of the hostelry. Those who followed him as proprietors were Peter Pangborn, Joel Pangborn, Wm. D. Steward, Geo. Demler, Israel Allen, Hardenburg Stevens, Samuel Oyers, Wm. Davis, Phillip Brien, George Demler, Peter Finger and the present proprietor, Fred Nelson.

The flag pole raised yesterday is seventy-five feet high and it is surmounted by a weather vane. A handsome flag was raised during the afternoon. Refreshments were served before the guests departed.

WEDDED QUARTER CENTURY.

OCCASION WAS TAKEN FOR A SURPRISE PARTY.

Given to Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rogers at Their Home on Madison Avenue Last Evening.

A most complete and agreeable surprise was given to Mr. and Mrs. C A. Rogers, of Madison avenue, last evening, by one-hundred of their friends, in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The guests came unannounced, bringing with them the means of passing a very pleasant time. Although taken back for a few moments, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers soon proved equal to the occasion and entered into the spirit of the merrymakers.

Their surprise was augmented later in the evening when Mr. Rogers was presented with a fine oak dining room table by his associates at the Potter Press Works, and Mrs. Rogers was given a silver tea set by the other guests. The gifts, coming unexpected as they did, were all the more appreciated.

For the entertainment of the guests an address was given by Rev. A. E. Main, in which he complimented the celebrants on the auspicious occasion and wished them many returns. Instrumental music was furnished by the Misses Mabel Maxson, Kizzie Neagle, Bessie Dunham and Marie Rogers. A general good time was terminated with the serving of refreshments.

For the eminent success of the whole affair, credit is due to Mrs. Clinton F. Randolph, Mrs. Warren Marsh, Mrs. J. D. Titsworth and George B. Titsworth, who arranged the numerous details.

LETTER FROM MISSIONARY.

Was Read at Meeting of Women's Home Missionary Society Yesterday.

An item of interest at the quarterly meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the church, was the reading of a letter from Miss Julia G. Shinn, well known to many Plainfielders.

Miss Shinn is now a missionary at Bassein, Burmah, and her letter enclosed a check for $100 to be paid to the Baptist Education Society, of New Jersey, towards payment of a loan made her while prosecuting her studies.

The Baptist Bulletin, commenting on Miss Shinn's similar action a year ago says: "Think of it, brethren!"

Miss Mary D. Faye, a missionary from India, who is planning to return to her labors in the early fall, will address the next meeting of the society, which will take place Wednesday, June 26, at 4 o'clock. There will be no July meeting.

MISS MARSH'S PUPILS GAVE FINE RECITAL.

Enjoyable Musicale Was Given At Home Of Miss Ada G. Marsh Yesterday Afternoon.

MANY GUESTS PRESENT.

PARTICULARLY FINE WAS THE PLAYING OF MISS FRANCES WIER.

Gave Two Selections Of Her Own Composition—Pupils All Played From Memory And Their Rendition Of The Selections Was Excellent.

A very enjoyable and successful musicale was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Ada G. Marsh and her piano pupils, at Miss Marsh's home, 340 Franklin place. The house was filled with the interested relatives and friends of the students and teacher, and the guests enjoyed an excellent musical programme, rendered in a most acceptable manner.

The first pupils to play were Miss Margaret Drayton and Miss Marion Grace Marsh, both very youthful pianists. The former gave a movement from Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," and the latter Weber's "Oberon," both playing with correctness and expression.

Miss Frederica Mead followed with a "Tarantelle" by Concone, and Walter Scott with a "Melodie" by the same composer. Pieczonka's "Polish Chivalry" was played by Miss Hope Ivins, and St. Heller's "Water Sprites" by Miss Annie Fisk. The young musicians not only gave evidence of careful training, but entered in a high degree into the spirit of the compositions they were rendering, playing with feeling as well as correctness. They, as well as the older students, played entirely without notes.

"La Grace," a dainty composition by Bohm, was given by Miss Christina Scott with spirit and sympathy; and Miss Louise Booth played a difficult "Phantasie in D minor," by Mozart, with unusual brilliancy and feeling. Schumann's "Traumerei," with its dreamy harmonies, followed, rendered by Miss Margaret Mead in a most acceptable manner, and Miss Anna Richards played a "Gavotte," by Handel, with grace and spirit.

The weird spirit of the Wagner music dramas was introduced into the programme by Hoffman's arrangement of "Die Walkure," played with much ease of execution and warmth of feeling by Miss Laura Long.

The last player of the afternoon was Miss Frances Weir, who had two numbers on the programme. She played first a "Minuet," which was her own composition, and which showed not only originality but a knowledge of musical form and the laws of composition. Before her second solo, which was Liszt's transcription of Schubert's song, "The Erl-King," an English translation of Goethe's poem, for which Schubert wrote the music, was read by Mrs. Robert Lowry. The reading was given in a very effective manner, and prepared the audience for the masterly composition which followed it, which told the story again in the impressive language of music, and which was given by Miss Weir with a brilliancy, warmth of expression and intensity of sympathy that made it the fitting close to the afternoon's enjoyment. Miss Weir was heartily encored, and returned to the piano to play another composition of her own, a very attractive "Spanish Dance."

No matter how difficult their music, the pupils played entirely without notes. Their playing showed that while they had had thorough training in technique, there had been also careful study of the meaning of music, so that style and expression had been cultivated even in the youngest.

Many flowers were received by the students after their part in the programme, and during the informal reception which followed the music congratulations were showered on teacher and pupils.

SECOND DAY OF SYNOD.

MEETING OF GENERAL SYNOD OF REFORMED CHURCH OF AMERICA.

Continued at New Brunswick Yesterday—Reports Presented and Business Transacted.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, June 7—The second day's sessions of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America were held in the Second Reformed church in this city yesterday. Rev. Denis Wortman, of Saugerties, N. Y., the newly-elected president, presided and announced the membership of the several synod committees, of which there are nineteen.

Rev. George S. Bishop, of East Orange, president of the Newark Classis, presented the report of the committee appointed by the last synod to suggest changes in the form of baptism. It reviewed at length the history of baptismal forms, and recommended many changes in verbiage, designed principally to secure simplicity. In the introduction to the form for adult baptism the candidate who heretofore has been required to confess himself "wholly incapable of good," will hereafter, if the committee's recommendation carries, simply have to admit that he is "sinful by nature." Discussion and action of the committee's recommendation will take place later.

Rev. Edward B. Coe, of New York, presented the reports of the special committee on finances of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary. The committee was appointed in 1897 to meet a crisis in the affairs of the seminary caused by a decline in the rate of interest on the endowment. The seminary's endowment is $463,000, but the expenditures had been arranged in accordance with a high rate interest. The shrinkage in interest rates had caused a decrease in income of over $5,000. Since 1897, the committee has received $77,000, to be added to the endowment and $10,000 for current expenses of the institution, thus strengthening the seminary finances, so that possibly one or more new professorships may be established. The committee recommended that the sum of $2,500 per annum be fixed as the salary of each professor in the seminary. The recommendation was adopted.

Former Sheriff's Son Married.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, June 7.—Henry P. Wyckoff, son of ex-Sheriff W. H. H. Wyckoff, and Miss Mae Victoria Crouse, were married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. S. P. Crouse, Wall street, Raritan. Rev. Dr. W. H. DeHart officiated. The bridemaid was Miss Sarah A. Topham, of Philadelphia, and the best man Eugene D. Crouse, of Philadelphia. The bride wore white lansdowne, over silk, and carried bridal roses. They have gone on a bridal trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

With the exception of the body, wheels and motor, Mr. Thompson made everything, even brazing the various parts. The auto is much admired by all who have seen it. TO AID FRESH AIR CAMP.

Endeavorers of Park Avenue Baptist Church Held Business Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held last evening in the church parlors. Miss Anna Wyckoff, president, was in the chair and there was a large attendance of members.

The reports of the various committees were encouraging, showing steady growth in membership and interest, and the financial condition is excellent. It was decided during August to combine the Friday evening meeting with the regular Wednesday evening prayer meeting of the church.

Fresh air work was discussed at some length and the members decided to identify themselves this summer with the Westfield Fresh Air Camp work by contributing money and helping in such other ways are as possible. After the transaction of business a social time followed, during which games were played and refreshments served. A. D. Thompson, Jr., chairman of the social committee, was in charge.

STRIKERS' PICNIC WAS A GREAT SUCCESS.

Two Thousand People Turned Out at Mountainside Grove For the Event.

POND MEN GETTING TOOLS.

NO CHANGE HAS YET APPEARED IN LOCAL SITUATION.

Scott's Foundry Has Closed Down—Strikers Hear of Progress of Strike at Philadelphia and Hartford—Picnic Details.

Friends and sympathizers to the number of 2,000 turned out to the picnic of the striking machinists, held at Mountainside Grove last evening. It was one of the most successful affairs of its kind ever given in this city. From early in the afternoon until long after midnight, the dancing platform was crowded to its fullest capacity. The most satisfactory part of the affair was the subsequent financial success which will greatly swell the funds of the union so badly in need of replenishing at the present time. The exact amount cleared cannot be made known until all settlements are made which will require several days.

While the success of the picnic was due to the efforts of all the machinists, with the aid of generous contributions from the local merchants, the preliminaries were arranged by a committee consisting of Foster Johnson, chairman; assisted by John Hope, Alex. Muir, Dennis Bagley, Charles Newman, James Hibbits, Chester Dennis, Samuel Clouston and Edward Edell. The latter are more than gratified with the patronage afforded them in the enterprise.

In regard to the strike situation itself, matters have changed but little since yesterday. The Pond men are still securing their tools at the rate of fifty a day. At the other shops it is but a repetition of the old story; nothing new, no concessions and no prospect of a settlement. The game of wait still continues to be the leading feature of each day's programme.

A communication was received at strikers' headquarters this morning from the union at Philadelphia, stating that the Niles-Bement Company, at that place, had offered its employes a schedule of fifty-five hours per week, with sixty hours' pay, a difference of but one hour in the machinists' demands. The offer was refused. It was also stated at the meeting that the Pratt-Whitney employes at Hartford, Conn., another shop in the combine to which Pond's belong, had been given sixty hours' pay for fifty-four hours work.

The foundry department of the Scott Press Works, which has been running since the strike began, closed down indefinitely this morning. It affects a large number of employes.

LADIES' SOCIETY ACTIVE.

One Department of Saengerbund Gave Surprise Party and Bowled For Prizes.

The Ladies' Society of the Gesang and Turn Verein tendered a surprise party to its president, Mrs. Henry Bergen, yesterday afternoon. The affair was held in Saengerbund Hall. Refreshments were served. Mrs. Bergen was presented with a Japanese vase.

The Bowling Club held its last match during the afternoon. The prizes were awarded to the members scoring the highest; fourth highest; fourth lowest and lowest score during the season. The winners were: Highest, Mrs. Henry Rummer, set of cups and saucers; fourth highest, Mrs. Charles Meier, set of fruit dishes; fourth lowest, Mrs. Wm. Beiter, fancy match box; lowest, Mrs. Fahn, fancy match box.

The society will hold its annual excursion Tuesday, June 25. Arrangements have been made to spend the day at Bechtel's Brewery, Staten Island Park. In the evening a trip will be made to South Beach.

A free concert will be given the latter part of next week in front of the Waldorf Hotel by LaVere's band. If arrangements can be made a series of concerts will be given during the summer.

He was a resident of Plainfield for many years and for some time held the position of sexton of the Unitarian church on Park avenue. He had been ill for three months and his death was not unexpected.

Mr. Jones was born in Manchester, England, and came to this country when a young man. He was very well known throughout this section. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias Lodge and was very active. He leaves one daughter and one sister, the latter residing in Ohio.

The funeral services will be held from the late residence at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning and the interment will be in the North Plainfield Cemetery about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Knights of Pythias will have charge of the services.

CHURCH WEDDING AT 'PLAINS.

MISS EDITH FULLERTON MARRIED TO WALTER W. SCOTT, OF NEW YORK.

Pretty Ceremony at All Saint's Church Was Followed by Reception at Home of Bride's Brothers.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, June 7.—One of the most fashionable events, which has taken place in this vicinity for some time, was the brilliant wedding of Miss Edith Fullerton, of Washington Valley, to Walter W. Scott, a New York broker. The nuptial ceremony was consummated in All Saints church at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large assemblage of society folk, the friends of the bride and groom.

The interior of the pretty little church was most elaborately decorated with a profusion of daisies and other wild flowers. At the head of the aisle leading to the chancel was erected a stately floral arch which added to the picturesque appearance of the scene.

Rev. Dr. Reese F. Alsop, rector of St. Ann's church, Brooklyn, was the officiating clergyman. There were no bridemaids. The groom was attended by Timothy F. Allen, Jr., of New York, as best man. Masters Henry and Donald Fullerton, nephews of the bride, acted as pages. The bride was given away by her brother, Henry S. Fullerton.

Immediately after the benediction was pronounced, the bridal party repaired to the country seat of the bride's brother at Washington Valley, where a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Scott departed late in the afternoon for their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in New York City.

The bride was superbly gowned in white crepe de chene en train, trimmed with old Honiton lace, which had been in the possession of the family for over a century. Her veil of tulle was fastened by a handsome pearl ornament, an heirloom. She carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. A large brooch set with opals and pearls, the gift of the groom, was fastened at her neck.

The function was attended by a large number of guests from New York, Brooklyn, Elizabeth, Plainfield and Scotch Plains.

The commencement committee of the North Plainfield Board of Education is engaged in sending out invitations for the Commencement Day exercises of the graduating class. George Hallock, is the chairman of the committee. Apart from the tickets sent out by the board, fifteen invitations are given to each member of the graduating class for disposal.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. T. DeWitt Talmage visited relatives in Somerville Wednesday. They drove out to the old Talmage homestead, which is now owned by Mrs. George A. Potts, and Dr. Talmage revelled in the scenes of his boyhood. He told an anecdote of his hiding for four hours under a bed in one of the rooms when a minister came to visit his parents.

Engaged Baritone Soloist.

Organist MacClymont has engaged Frank Moffett, of Westfield, as baritone soloist at Holy Cross church. Mr. Moffett is a pupil of Douglas Lane, solo bass of Old St. Paul's, New York, and a resident of Plainfield.

The matter against the Calvary Baptist church, in Chancery, will be called the latter of this month at Trenton. William Newcorn represents the plaintiff, Contractor Wm. Smith.

COLLIDED WITH CARRIAGE.

ITALIAN WHEELMAN THROWN TO GROUND UNCONSCIOUS.

Driver Attempted To Avoid Him But In Vain—Accident Occurred On Watchung Avenue Last Night.

While attempting to turn the corner of North and Watchung avenues on his wheel at 9:30 last evening, Raphael Tozzolo, of Somerset street, collided with the rear wheel of a wagon driven by George Voehl, Jr., of West Front street. Tozzolo was thrown to the ground in a semi-conscious condition.

Patrolman McCarthy, who witnessed the accident, carried him to the drug store of E. S. F. Randolph, where restoratives were applied, but instead of recovering he lapsed into complete unconsciousness. He was taken to the home of his uncle, John Wilson, of Liberty street, and a physician was called. The injured man failed to revive until this morning, but is now rapidly recovering.

According to the story of persons witnessing the affair, the accident was not due to any carelessness on the part of young Voehl. Tozzolo evidently lost his head as there was a space of ten feet in which to clear the wagon. Voehl made an effort to avoid the collision but the wobbling of Tozzolo's wheel made it impossible.

ADDITION TO HALL.

Gesang and Turn Verein Preparing to Enlarge Hall on Somerset Street.

Steps were taken last evening at the meeting of the Gesang and Turn Verein in the matter of the proposed improvements to Saengerbund Hall, the clubhouse of the organization.

The committee appointed at the last monthly meeting, which consists of Henry Haurand, Emil Dombrowsky, Carl Felber, Henry Rummel and Wm. Beiter, reported that much progress had been made and it submitted plans setting forth in detail the design for the addition to the rear of the hall as contemplated. A special meeting will be held some time during the present month to consider the bids for the erection of the proposed structure. It is intended to commence building in July. The structure, which will be twenty feet deep, will contain a gymnasium.

Frank White, of Jackson avenue, was elected janitor in place of Joseph Haurand, resigned. The vacancy in the office of vice-president, caused by the resignation of John Wirth, was filled by the election of Henry Meier.

The committee having charge of the recent fair reported that the net profits from the affair amounted to $525. A vote of thanks was extended to this committee and it was discharged.

STOLE HIS TROUSERS.

Thieves Visited Home of Oscar Zugbaum, Sr., Near Watchung, Tuesday Morning.

Sometime during Tuesday morning thieves entered the home of Oscar Zugbaum, Sr., who lives on the Slater farm, near Watchung, and decamped with a small amount of money, a new pair of trousers, two dozen eggs and four loaves of bread. Entrance was effected through a rear window. The family did not learn of the robbery until arising in the morning.

Mr. Zugbaum, who is a machinist, employed in one of the local shops, is perfectly willing the thieves should have the eatables, but he would appreciate the return of the other articles.

HEARD FOOTSTEPS.

But Police Were Unable to Find Any Trace of a Midnight Marauder.

As Roundsman Mattox was patrolling on East Front street at 2 o'clock this morning, he was attracted by loud cries of "police" coming from the residence of Thomas Hughes, on East Second street. On hurrying to the place he found Mrs. Hughes greatly wrought up over hearing footsteps on the porch which she took to be those of a burglar. Mr. Hughes is at present on a trip to Ireland, and she was badly frightened. In company with Sergeant Frederickson, who had been telephoned by a neighbor, Mattox made a thorough investigation, but was unable to discover any trace of the visitors.

Sidewalk Improvement.

The sidewalk about the corner of North and Park avenues around Armstrong's pharmacy and The Daily Press office has been reset and provided with gutters to carry off the water, thereby abating the nuisance of pools of water allowing to remain after a shower.

HIGH SCHOOL CADETS HELD PRIZE DRILL

HELD AT WASHINGTON HALL

EDSON DAVIS WON MEDAL FOR BEST INDIVIDUAL WORK.

Appointments of New Officers Were Announced—Rev. Dr. Richards Made the Awards of the Prizes—An Audience Present.

The competitive drill of the High School Battalion held in Washington Hall today was a great success from every standpoint. After the keenest competition imaginable between the three companies forming the crack battalion the prize was awarded to Company A, Captain L. L. Tweedy. Edson Davis, of New Market, a member of Company A, was awarded the prize for the best drill in the manual of arms.

The platform at the farther end of the hall was occupied by the High School girls and some other guests. The judges for the contest were Capt. George F. Edwards, Captain W Kempton Browning, of Company K, of this city, and Captain John Wherley, of Somerville. The buglers and drummer of the local State military company sounded the calls.

A battalion drill was first held. Then the several companies drilled singly. Company C, was commanded by Captain C. Ames Brooks; Company B, by Captain Fred Mason and Company A, by Captain Lawrence L. Tweedy. The work of each company was roundly applauded by the "co-eds." Each company went through the manœuvres exceptionally well and gave clean evidence of the training received under Albert B. Meredith, who has acted as commandant.

The whole battalion then assembled in the form of a three sided hollow square and the individual contest among the cadets began. The contest finally lay between Edson Davis, of New Market, and Herbert J. DuBois, of Putnam avenue, both privates in Company A. Davis was finally decided upon as the superior. The battalion was formed and the prizes were awarded by Rev. Dr. W. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church.

The following promotions were announced to take effect June 21: Major L. W. Bridgeman; first lieutenant and adjutant, R. Bailey; second lieutenant and quartermaster, Blanchard Fosgate; quartermaster sergeant, E. H. Whitney; sergeant major, Archibald Brakeley; color sergeant, Robert Meeker.

Company A: Captain, H. K. Doane; lieutenant, Arthur Murphy; first sergeant, LeRoy Hallock; second sergeant, Lawrence Whitall; third sergeant, H. Moynihan; fourth sergeant, LaRue; corporals, Harold Davis, Clarence Rocap and George Babcock.

Campany B: Captain, Claude Cubberley; lieutenant, Kenneth Bulkley; first sergeant, Arthur Denton; second sergeant, Alden Moore; third sergeant, H. Dyer; fourth sergeant, Fred Van Auken; corporals, Daniels, Koons and M. Moynihan.

Company C: Captain, Harold Nomer; first lieutenant, Fred Leland; first sergeant, Fred Lounsbury; second sergeant, VanWyck Brooks; third sergeant, Vincent B. Miner; fourth sergeant, Cyril Brown; corporals, Jos. Tweedy, A. Slauson and L. Cubberly.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May Be Of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

The Democrats up in Hunterdon County want to have money contributed direct to them to build roads with. They do not believe in State aid, which involves any expenditure of their own money in building roads. They think it will be much nicer to have the rest of the state contribute to build roads in Hunterdon. This is not mendicancy, it is just a desire to skin somebody which many persons who have gone to rural residences have observed.—Jersey City Journal.

Charles Morrison Burt, assistant passenger and ticket agent of the Boston and Maine Railroad, has been chosen to succeed the late H. P. Baldwin, as general passenger agent of the Central Railroad. The gentleman is not widely known here, but it may be taken for granted that he is a man of much ability and experience, or he would not command a position of such importance. It is confidently hoped that he will establish anew the cordial relations that have hitherto existed between Mr. Baldwin and the patrons of the Central Railroad. Mr. Hope, who was Mr. Baldwin's chief assistant, was looked upon by many as a possible appointee to the vacancy, but perhaps there is something equally good in store for him.—Elizabeth Journal.

The conversion of the Palisades into a public reservation has already begun to make property wealth for the State. A tract of 146 acres adjoining the proposed new Palisade Park has been purchased by a Philadelphia syndicate for building purposes, and will soon be filled with handsome residences. In every case on record the cost of a public park has been fully repaid to the public by the resultant property benefits. The neighborhood of the Palisades offers superb sites for residences. The vicinity of the quarrymen and the expectation that the railroads would eventually acquire land on the Hudson River front for their purposes have heretofore been a bar to private improvements. Now that these disadvantages are removed property throughout the whole Palisade section will be in great demand, with a corresponding increase in assessed valuations. — Newark Advertiser.

ACCUSED OF BRIBERY.

New York Deputy Factory Inspectors to Be Arrested.

ALBANY, June 7.—State Labor Commissioner McMackin expects that at least four deputy factory inspectors in New York city will be arrested on the charge of collusion and malfeasance in office. By mere accident the commissioner came upon what he believes to be a most serious condition in the administration of the state factory laws.

He has been informed that employees in the factory department have been receiving bribes for winking at alleged violations of the factory laws and that fees ranging from $5 to $10 have been charged poor people for licenses to manufacture in their homes, whereas the state law provides for no license fee. The commissioner stated that the discoveries had been made through his efforts to have a complete inspection of all factories and sweatshops in New York city. He had sent there all his up state inspectors, and they found that something was wrong with the manner in which matters were conducted. An investigation followed, with the result made known yesterday. The commissioner held a consultation with Attorney General Davies, and it was decided that the prosecution of the men accused should be placed in the hands of Deputy Attorney J. B. Hedges, who is in New York city.

His brother committed suicide about two years ago.

That Point Thoroughly Settled.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 7.—The feature of yesterday's session of the constitutional convention was the ordinance introduced by Mr. Sandford of Montgomery to strike out that part of the preamble which declares that no state has a right to secede. He says it is unnecessary. Another ordinance which created much laughter was that of Pierce of Marion, that no man who is learned in law hereafter shall hold any offices except those of a judicial nature.

TRAGEDY ON ISLAND OF ST. MATTHIAS

Plot to Kill Was Carried Out by the Cannibals While the Steamer Had Gone After Supplies and Coal.

BERLIN, June 7.—The Tageblatt prints special correspondence from New Guinea containing a full account of the massacre of the members of the first German south sea expedition on the cannibal island of St. Matthias. They were all killed and eaten, save Dr. Heinroth.

The Colonial Zeitung, the official organ of the German Colonial society, furnishes details of the massacre. It seems that the vessel which carried the expedition to the island of St. Matthias left after a few days for Herbertshoh, New Britain, to get coal and fresh supplies. During its absence the savages, who had hitherto appeared friendly, although known to be rabid cannibals, planned to kill and rob the diminished party.

The plot was carried out one morning while the members of the expedition, who had a bodyguard of 40 drilled Papuans, were cleaning their rifles, which they had taken apart. Suddenly eight of the islanders broke from the bushes, raising fierce war cries and brandishing spears, with which they stabbed to death the leader of the party, Dr. Mencken; his secretary, Herr Caro, and a white sailor who was asleep under a tent.

Dr. Heinroth emptied his revolver into his assailants, while the bodyguard in the meantime retired to the boats with the wounded and Dr. Heinroth, leaving 12 dead. The boats put off to an island not far distant, where the expeditionary vessel rescued them. Subsequently the survivors returned to the island of St. Matthias, where they found that the bodies had been devoured and the camp absolutely looted.

To Encourage Canadian Trade.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., June 7.—A trip via the New York Central and Rutland roads for the purpose of investigating the matter of the bonding of merchants in the coastwise trade along the Canadian frontier is in progress, the party which is making the investigation being composed of railroad men, customs officials and others. The party is traveling in the private car of E. G. Chamberlain, general manager of the Canada Atlantic railway. The members spent last night at his summer camp at Long lake, about 110 miles west of Ottawa, and tonight they will reach Parry sound, on Lake Huron, where they will take a steamer for Duluth. On their return they will stop at Chicago and then proceed by rail to Buffalo, where, after visiting the Pan-American exposition, the party will break up.

Secretary Long Returns.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Secretary Long is back at the navy department after an absence of some weeks on the Pacific coast and later in Colorado. He finds a number of minor matters awaiting his attention, but nothing of very serious concern. He has not yet taken up the report of the naval board on the Santiago medals or of the board which reported on wireless telegraphy. The secretary says the policy of gradually reducing the fleet in the Philippines will be carried on, although there has been no material development in the plan already announced on this subject.

A $10,000,000 Corporation.

OMAHA, June 7.—Fred A. Nash, president of the American Smelting and Refining company and who is one of the promoters of the proposed combination of city and suburban railways and other franchised corporations of this city and Council Bluffs, has confirmed the reports of the formation of the new $10,000,000 corporation. He said it would not include the water companies of the two cities. He admitted that there was some dissatisfaction with regard to the price to be paid for that company's property.

No Improvement Perceptible.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Dr Rixey, after an hour and a half spent in attendance on Mrs. McKinley, said: "There is no material change in Mrs. McKinley's condition. She remains the same as mentioned in our bulletin yesterday." In answer to specific inquiries he replied that he could not say there had been any perceptible improvement whatever during the day.

Storm Wrecked College Hall.

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., June 7.—A storm wrecked Waddell hall, on the campus of the Southwestern Presbyterian university, yesterday. The end of the building collapsed and fell through two floors. The damage is $5,000. The tobacco warehouse of Gold & Pettus was damaged, and their loss from rain will amount to between $15,000 and $20,000.

Lawson Yacht Injured.

BOSTON, June 7.—The Lawson yacht Independence in her second trial yesterday met with her first accident, a not very serious jamming of the steering gear, but sufficient to stop the trial after an hour and a half of splendid sailing, during which she attained a speed on a reach of a little over three miles of 13½ nautical miles an hour.

Masonic Temple Cornerstone Laid.

SANDY HILL, N. Y., June 7.—The cornerstone of the Masonic temple at Sandy Hill was laid yesterday by Most Worshipful Charles W. Mead. A large number of Knights Templars were present from Saratoga, Troy and the surrounding country. The temple is to cost $25,000 and will be finished in December.

Run Down by Electric Car.

MILWAUKEE, June 7.—Congressman Otjen and his private secretary, Nathaniel Green, were run down by an electric car here while driving. Both men were injured, but how seriously the physicians have not yet determined.

YERKES' BIG SCHEME

Chicago Promotor Has Captured London Subways.

WILL AMERICANIZE THE SYSTEM.

The Syndicate Is Composed of British and United States Financiers. Maryland Trust Company the Agent In This Country.

LONDON, June 7.—"Yes," said Mr. Yerkes when interviewed last night, "we have practically got control of the London underground railway. That is what it amounts to. My syndicate is composed of both British and American financiers, although far the largest proportion of the capital comes from the United States. We hope to begin work in a few months, as soon as the necessary consent of parliament has been obtained.

"The system we intend to install is almost exactly similar to that in use on the elevated lines in Chicago. We will sell the present antiquated cars and substitute those of an American pattern. We intend to rebuild the stations, to install arc lights and to make the road equal to any rapid transit line in the world.

"Yes, we must have American engineers to do the work. They know nothing about that sort of thing here. I tell you what, the trouble with the English concerns is that they don't know the value of a scrap heap.

"As to the agitation about the United States buying up England, it is absurd. Years ago British capital controlled the bulk of the American railroads. Since then Great Britain has been on the decline, and the United States has progressed. As a natural result the circumstances are now reversed.

"When I first proposed to take over the underground railway, the English company raised all sorts of objections, but gradually they came round, and they now appear to be perfectly satisfied with the bargain.

"No, I cannot say who are in with me. However, I wish to assert distinctly that the report that the Widener-Elkins group is in any way connected with the syndicate is absolutely untrue.

"I intend to remain here for a considerable time, as there are likely to be several things needing my personal attention."

After declining to say whether he contemplated buying up other roads, Mr. Yerkes concluded with a declaration that the remodeled underground railway would be far superior to the existing London "tubes." "The people who built that," said he, "knew nothing except how to dig holes. Everything else is wrong. Chicago is ahead of the rest of the world in electric traction. If they had studied the Chicago system, they might have given London something better. In the course of time my syndicate will be represented by directors on the board of the underground railway, but there is no hurry about that."

DETAILS OF THE SCHEME.

Maryland Trust Company to Finance the London Enterprise.

BALTIMORE, June 7.—The details of the plan for the formation of the Metropolitan District Electric Traction company in London, engineered by Charles T. Yerkes of Chicago, with whom were associated officials and experts of the Maryland Trust company, have just been made public in this city. The Maryland company will be the American financial agent of the enterprise.

Colonel J. Wilcox Brown, president of the Maryland Trust company, spent three months in London in the past year examining the property and its possibilities. He had the assistance of the well known construction and electrical engineering corporation, J. G. White & Co., whose headquarters, which were formerly in Baltimore, are now in London. The experts of this concern made a thorough examination of the Metropolitan railway and submitted an exhaustive report. A number of conferences followed between Mr. Yerkes and Colonel Brown. Since the latter's return to this country he has been in conference with the American capitalists that are jointly interested with English capitalists in a $5,000,000 syndicate formed to carry out the plans agreed upon for the Metropolitan railways.

The Metropolitan District Electric Traction company, which is organized under the plan, will equip the Metropolitan District Railway company and control it. The latter is considered the key to the rapid transit situation in London. Its position is regarded as strategic for the innovation of the new ideas, which promise to revolutionize the transportation business in and about London. This railway serves directly 1,000,000 people along its own tracks. The service to the public will be increased fully 50 per cent and the average train speed will be 22 per cent faster than at present. Trains with a maximum speed of 25 miles an hour are contemplated.

The Metropolitan has liberal franchises, which permit expansion to meet any requirements in the growth of its business. One valuable provision it possesses is the right to build another tunnel below the present one.

SELF RULE FAVORED.

General Chaffee In Full Sympathy With Philippine Plans.

MANILA, June 7.—A private conference between Generals Chaffee and MacArthur has just taken place. General Chaffee said that while he was not sure of the orientals' general capacity for self government he favored the establishment at the earliest practicable moment of civil control.

He was full of sympathy for the commission's plans for native education and business advancement because the United States interests and native interests lie in the same line.

It seems certain that under a plain division of the civil and military authority Judge Taft and General Chaffee will collaborate admirably.

Captain Algalogo and his aid have been killed by Wray's command at Dousol, Albay province.

Reilly's battery has sailed for the United States on the transport Packling.

Commissioners Taft, Wright and Ide are at Cavite establishing a provincial government. They were formally welcomed by Colonel Goodrell and the local dignitaries in the town hall.

Judge Taft spoke, outlining the commission's provincial plans.

Civil Government For Philippines.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The new civil government to be established in the Philippines is receiving the consideration of the president and the secretary of war. It will differ very little from what was first intended, as there will be a governor for the archipelago and a legislative council and other officers. This government will have control of all civil affairs, but it will be under the war power to the extent of being directed by the secretary of war.

Lincoln's Remains In Danger.

CHICAGO, June 7.—The Inter Ocean prints a story saying that the recent reinterment of the remains of Abraham Lincoln at Springfield has been done in such a manner as to leave them in a measure at the mercy of body snatchers and that steps are to be taken at once, at the instance of Robert T. Lincoln, to have the body placed as in the former monument, under a huge block of cement, where it will be out of the reach of any attempt at molestation. Mr. Lincoln some time ago gained the idea that the remains of his father were not properly secured against possible desecration by body snatchers and determined to make an investigation on his own account. He went to Springfield in the disguise of a workingman and spent much time in and around the new monument. He came to the conclusion that the present location of the body left it in a measure at the mercy of anybody who should desire to carry it away, particularly as there is no watchman around the monument at night. He will take steps at once to have the matter remedied and have the body placed so that it will hereafter be secure from any interference whatever.

Indians Sue Government Officials.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Suit has been begun in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by Lone Wolf and other Indians representing the Kiowa, Commanche and Apache tribes, asking the court to enjoin Secretary Hitchcock, Commissioner Herman of the general land office and Commissioner Jones of the Indian office from carrying into effect the law providing for the opening of parts of the lands of those Indians located in Oklahoma Territory to settlement. They also ask that the law authorizing the opening of the lands be declared void on the ground that the cession by the Indians professing to represent the tribes was unauthorized.

Mrs. Stallion Confessed.

AURORA, Mo., June 7.—A telephone message from Galena, Stone county, 25 miles off the railroad, says that Mrs. John Stallion and her two sons by a former marriage, James and Will Crabtree, have confessed to the murder of Alice Stallion, the pretty 16-year-old stepdaughter of the woman. According to the confession, the boys held Alice while the mother broke her skull with a poker. There is great excitement as a result of the confessions, and a lynching may result. The girl was to have been married soon. Mrs. Stallion was, it is said, jealous of her stepdaughter because of her beauty and popularity.

A Sensible Movement.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., June 7.—In order to prevent a recurrence of petty strikes which have been frequent since the general tie up of last year an executive committee was chosen by the employees of the Cameron colliery to hereafter settle grievances with the employers, so that pending negotiations the operatives will not be idle. A like committee will be elected at every colliery in the ninth United Mine Workers' district as soon as possible.

Settlement of Chilean Claims.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The Chilean claims commission will adjourn sine die on the 18th inst., leaving behind it not a single unadjudicated claim. It was the failure of the first commission to dispose of more than a moiety of the claims presented that led to the creation of a new commission. The famous Itata claim, founded upon the capture of that vessel by the Charleston, comes up for final argument tomorrow.

Hunting a Negro.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 7.—Two hundred infuriated farmers are scouring the timber 20 miles northeast of this city in an effort to capture an unknown negro who waylaid the 14-year-old daughter of George Dixon, a farmer, bound and gagged her and carried her into the woods. Other school children spread the alarm, and farmers were soon in pursuit. The negro became alarmed and fled.

Snow In North Dakota.

JAMESTOWN, N. D., June 7.—Snow fell heavily yesterday throughout the central and northern portions of North Dakota. At Jamestown snow fell for two hours. A similar state of affairs is reported in towns on the Jamestown Northern railroad. The snow quickly melted. The oldest settlers cannot recall a similar occurrence in June.

Government Printing Brisk.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Beginning on July 1 the bureau of engraving and printing will work its force an additional hour each day in order to bring up the reserve stock of printed notes and certificates to a satisfactory condition.

President Pardons Five.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The president yesterday acted upon 14 applications for pardons. He commuted four sentences and granted five pardons.

NO DEVIATION.

Secretary Root Made No Concessions to Cuban Delegates.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—In view of the several representations made in Havana regarding the interpretation by the secretary of war to the Cuban commissioners of the Platt amendment it can be stated authoritatively that the secretary did not deviate from the declaration that the president and himself had no power to change an act of congress. It is said here that the amendments which the Cuban convention made to the Platt law and the incorporation of conversations with Secretary Root did not represent his views of the amendment nor was he correctly quoted in the alleged statements.

Among the reports given out in Havana is the translation of a letter of Senator Platt written to the secretary of war and furnished as a confidential document to the Cuban commissioners when they were here. This letter briefly gives the views of the Connecticut senator upon some features of the law which bears his name. Surprise was expressed that the letter should appear in print in Havana.

General Wood telegraphed the department inquiring as to the whereabouts of the letter of Secretary Root explaining in detail the objections to the action of the constitutional convention. It is expected that the letter will reach Havana within a very short time. It has been delayed in the mail.

American Locomotives In England.

LONDON, June 7.—The Midland Railway company since the latter part of 1899 has been using 40 American locomotives. Samuel W. Johnson, superintendent of the locomotive department of the company, says in The Daily Mail today that the results of six months' comparative tests made with standard Midland goods engines in the same conditions showed the extra working cost of the American locomotive over the British to be from 20 to 25 per cent in fuel, 50 per cent in oil and 60 per cent in repairs. "It must be said that the American engines worked the trains satisfactorily," Mr. Johnson says, "but their inferiority in the three points named is incontestable." The American locomotives in question cost £400 less than the British. They were delivered in the course of a few months, while the locomotives ordered of British firms in February, 1897, were not delivered until February, 1900, largely on account of the strike.

After Philadelphia Franchises.

PHILADELPHIA, June 7.—The first move in the prospective struggle for street railway franchises in this city since the Focht and Emery bills were introduced in the state legislature was made yesterday, when George D. Widener, president of the West Philadelphia Passenger Railway company, applied to the city councils for permission to lay tracks on all the main streets in West Philadelphia, the section of the city west of the Schuylkill river not occupied by car lines. The application bears the date of June 6 and recites that the privilege is asked for under the act of April 8, 1858, and that the proposed extensions mentioned in the application are to be built under and subject to the city ordinance of April 1, 1891. The application was referred to the committee on street railways without comment.

Ten Injured In Railway Collision.

VICKSBURG, Miss., June 7.—Ten persons were injured, three seriously, in a head end collision between two Mississippi Valley passenger trains north of Vicksburg. The trains met on a sharp curve, and but for the prompt action of Engineer Jones of the north bound train in reversing his engine the wreck would have been more complete. The south bound train was six and a half hours late and was running at a high speed. At Clarksdale, five hours earlier, the south bound train crashed into a caboose, and Engineer Dana received injuries which may prove fatal.

What Next?

LONDON, June 7.—"There is considerable alarm in Switzerland," says the Geneva correspondent of The Daily Express, "over a report that J. Pierpont Morgan contemplates the formation of a watch combine to kill off importation of Swiss watches and materials. It is said that the combination will include the Philadelphia Watch Case company of Riverside, N. J., and the Standard Watch company of Lafayette, N. J., as well as other concerns. The Swiss manufacturers intend to fight the contemplated trust."

BIG LINER WRECKED.

Steamship Assyrian on the Rocks Off Cape Race.

CREW AND PASSENGERS SAVED.

Stem of the Ship Telescoped on the Cliffs, and She Now Has Fourteen Feet of Water In the Holds.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 7.—It now seems likely that the voyages of the Assyrian have ended. She was running at full speed through the fog when she struck Cape Race, and she now lies an almost hopeless hulk on the coast. For three days Captain Dingle had been navigating by the log, and he had calculated upon a course rounding Cape Race 30 miles south of land. This plan, however, was frustrated by northerly currents. No fishing boats operate off Cape Race, owing to the danger of being run down by such vessels. Consequently Captain Dingle had no warning.

The very latest intelligence from the wreck of the Assyrian is that the tug Favorite has arrived there with a diver, who will go under water and will begin to discharge the cargo in the fore holds. Other wrecking tugs will reach the scene during the night. The entire cargo will probably be unloaded, so the agents say, as this will enable a more convenient handling of the ship, there being then no dead weight to pull off.

A dense fog enveloped the whole coast, and it was midnight when the big Leyland line steamship Assyrian plunged on the rocks at Cape Race and buried one-third of her length upon the ledge as she telescoped her stem against the frowning cliffs. She tore out her underbody, and her fore and second holds showed 14 feet of water within a few minutes.

The shock dislocated the engines, wrecked the machinery, forced the artificers from the stokeholes and threw all the men in the berths in a tangled heap on the forecastle floor. The sailors were all Dutchmen. They rushed for the deck in a panic, cut the lifeboats clear and resisted all the efforts of the English officers to calm them and restore discipline. Only by threats did the officers restore peace and prevent a hurried lowering of the boats and a probable tragedy in the boiling surf.

Huge seas swept the rocks and covered the decks and made too perilous an attempt to scale the cliffs and seek aid.

The men were afraid for a time that the ship had rammed the cliffs and would presently back off and sink in deep water, carrying them down with her, but after a while it was seen that she was firmly held by the rocks which had pierced her bottom and that she was in no danger of collapse.

The lifeboats were then launched, provisioned and manned. One boat was dispatched to find a fishing hamlet. The others lay by the wreck until daylight. In the early morning the sea rose and the gale increased. The boats were unable to make to seaward and narrowly escaped swamping. The crew had to leave them, take to the rocks and climb half way up the cliffs, where they remained until rescued by the coast folk after daybreak.

Flag Day at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, June 7.—The tentative programme for the Flag day exercises at the Pan-American exposition grounds has been announced. They will take place in the Temple of Music on Friday, June 14. General Miles will be present and deliver an address. Richmond Pearson Hobson will speak. Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks, president of the D. A. R., will deliver an address on "American Patriotism." President John G. Milburn of the exposition will welcome the patriotic societies represented in the gathering. The musical part of the programme will be in the hands of Sousa, whose entire band will be present. The last pound of exhibit material was placed in position in the commercial ordnance building yesterday. A force of men got the 35 ton piece of harveyized steel into the building after a week of solid work in moving it from the car to the building.

To Investigate Explosion.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—A naval board of inquiry will be assembled at San Francisco to investigate the explosion which occurred Thursday in the naval powder magazine at the Mare Island navy yard. Admiral O'Neil, chief of the bureau of ordnance, has not yet been officially advised of the explosion. The magazine at San Francisco is the only one on the Pacific coast and has a large capacity in order to supply the ships in Pacific waters. Fortunately, however, all projectiles and ammunition are kept in detached buildings, so that the damage to the powder is not expected to result in a total loss of ammunition.

Governor Sees Children March.

NEW YORK, June 7.—More than 22,000 children and teachers paraded in Williamsburg in commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of the Eastern District Sabbath School association. The parade was larger than any one held by the organization in the past. Former State Commissioner of Fisheries Eugene G. Blackford was grand marshal. Governor Benjamin Odell reviewed the parade from the grand stand in front of the Hanover club on Bedford avenue.

Indians Claim Chicago Land.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Three representatives of the Pottawatomie tribe of Indians arrived from Benton Harbor, Mich., to confer with attorneys as to the alleged rights of the tribe to the filled in land along the lake front in Chicago. The Pottawatomies claim the land under an old government grant, and in the present case their claims in a measure overlap those of Captain Streeter, who also has attempted to take possession through right of discovery.

New Jersey G. A. R. Encampment.

NEW YORK, June 7.—John Lawrence of New Brunswick, N. J., was elected department commander of the New Jersey G. A. R. at the encampment at Asbury Park, defeating Oscar F. Gifford of Newark. Silas W. Volk of Camden had a clear field for senior vice commander. Henry Chayene of Salem was elected assistant surgeon general.

Only a Coaling Station.

BERLIN, June 7.—The foreign office asserts that the only element of truth in the report that Germany has been negotiating with the Turkish government as to the Farsan islands is the fact that the government has acquired a coaling station in one of the islands for the China transport service.

Take Action Tonight.

More than the usual interest is attached to the happenings at the meeting of the Borough Council this evening. Every man, woman and child in North Plainfield has occasion to make use of the street signs and there is not one of them but feels the necessity of seeing the borough properly equipped in that way. Mayor Smalley has said that the subject of street signs will be brought up at this evening's meeting.

No one questions the statement that the borough needs street signs and needs them badly. There are a few scattered around, but most of these have been so twisted around that it is difficult to know which street they really do refer to. The new signs on this side of the brook have shown up with unusual emphasis the needs of North Plainfield in that direction.

It was said by some that Mayor Smalley might not favor them at present as the Somerset street widening would require considerable of the borough funds. But Mayor Smalley has announced that he does favor the signs and their immediate introduction. This evening His Honor will have the opportunity of publicly showing how he stands on the subject.

The street signs are needed now and it is to be hoped that the Borough Council will make immediate provision for them, leaving to the judgment of the street committee the details as was done by the Plainfield Council. If action is taken tonight it will be possible to have the signs in position before the summer is over, and North Plainfield will then be on an equality with Plainfield as far as street signs are concerned. At present the difference is very noticeable.

A correspondent from Hartford writes to call attention to a slight error made in The Daily Press concerning the settlement of the strike in certain Hartford machine shops. He explains that the strike in that city was settled by the manufacturers conceding ten hours' pay for nine hours' work, but that the unions were not recognized by the manufacturers. It was the latter point in which the error was made.

It is evident that Street Commissioner Gavett's efforts have not been in vain for there has been a decided improvement in the sprinkling of the city streets during the last few days. The wholesale flooding of the streets has been done away with. While on some occasions more water is used than seems actually necessary, the improvement is marked and duly appreciated by horsemen and wheelmen.

It has only been during the last few years that the class day exercises have formed a regular part of the commencement proceedings at the local High Schools. Now, however, they are being conducted on a more elaborate scale each year and are looked forward by the members of the graduating class and their friends with much interest.

The commencement season is about here. In two weeks more the graduating classes of city and borough High schools will have completed their courses and receive their diplomas. At the exercises of both schools this year, admittance will be only by ticket and the tickets are likely to be much in demand.

Plainfielders would be sorry, indeed, to see the Blue Line trains taken from the service of the Jersey Central Railroad and transferred to the Pennsylvania as rumor says. This rumor has been denied, thankful to say, by one high in authority.

There isn't any doubt now but that summer has finally arrived. When the mercury hovered about the ninety degree mark yesterday afternoon, even the most sceptical were convinced.

All the efforts to secure a satisfactory arrangement of the affairs of the Newark Plank Road have not yet succeeded in opening that thoroughfare for traffic again.

The last game of the local scholastic baseball season is scheduled for this afternoon.

VAN ARSDALE'S SHOE STORE

Our Special Shoe for Women has room for the joints, making the shoe comfortable, and is at the same time stylish, and holds the shape, thus reducing the appearance of the joints to a minimum. In the ordinary shoe, the joints, in trying to make room for themselves, stretch the shoe out of shape, and it becomes shapeless and ugly. We carry them in Vici Kid, Goodyear Welts, Lace. Price $3.50.

ABOUT MUNICIPAL WORKS.

HOW THEY ARE REGARDED IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Municipal Ownership Published By The Review.

The last number of The Review, a commercial, financial and literary publication in New York, contains an article on municipal ownership which may be of interest to many Plainfield people.

It is as follows:

"Private capital has become considerably excited in England by the extent to which municipalities have gone into gas works, model tenements and a few other enterprises of a somewhat similar character. The companies and capitalists that feel their field of operations to have been invaded succeeded last year in getting a parliamentary committee appointed to investigate the subject, and this committee has reported a great deal of argument, some testimony and no recommendations.

"The supply of water by private enterprise is commoner in England than in this country, at least among cities of some size and importance; but there was practically no opposition at the hearings of the cammittee to this form of municipal enterprise. It was almost the unanimous opinion that the cities should supply themselves with water. As to gas, street cars and model tenements, the opposition came from persons or corporations which desired to do the work themselves. The private corporations and dealers in materials which oppose this sort of thing think it important for their own interests that municipalities that carry on 'public utilities' should not make money out of them to be applied to the reduction of taxation. It is not easy to see what difference it makes to the opponents, except that if taxes could be reduced by the profits from municipal gas works or street car lines more cities might be induced to undertake public ownership.

"The practice in British cities in this matter varies. Liverpool is barred from using the profits of its street railways for the reduction of taxation before 1912; Scottish boroughs taking over gas works under the general law are barred from using the profit for any purpose other than improving the service or reducing the price. Glasgow is permitted to use such profits for galleries, parks, etc, which would probably not exist if they had to be supported by taxation. Manchester last year used $260,000 of profits made in its gas works for the reduction of taxation, and Birmingham many years ago undertook its own gas supply in order to secure profits for sanitary and other improvements.

"The English and Scotch cities generally make a very good showing with their public utilities. Municipal councils are generally made up of the best men in the city, who serve from motives of public spirit instead of being composed of saloon keepers and men without occupation, who are in politics for what they can make for themselves. The reformed civil service system prevails there, and the patronage system prevails in our cities.

'One of the objections urged in municipal ownership in Great Britain is the increase of local debt. In twenty-five years the increase of debt has been very great, about $850,000,000, but more than half of this was incurred for purposes for which municipalities are beyond dispute bound to provide. For the acquisition of public utilities and municipal corporations of England and Wales incurred an indebtedness of more than $490,000,000, but nearly $55,000,000 of this has been discharged and the existing debt is believed to be considerably exceeded by the value of the municipal property acquired by the expenditure, and the sinking funds are reducing the debt."

A Terrible Explosion

"Of a gasoline stove burned a lady here frightfully," writes N.E. Palmer, of Kirkman, Ia. "The best doctors couldn't heal the running sore that followed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve entirely cured her." Infallible for Cuts, Corns, Sores, Boils, Bruises, Skin Diseases and Piles. 25c. at L. AT RECREATION GROUNDS.

ANNUAL PICNIC OF TWILIGHT SOCIAL CLUB WAS OPENING EVENT.

Affair Was Well Attended and the Large Crowd Found the Attractions Very Satisfactory.

Recreation Grounds was opened under the most favorable auspices last evening. The Twilight Social Club's ninth picnic being the attraction which drew a large crowd to the pleasure grounds.

The committee in charge of the affair had little difficulty in affording amusement to the patrons, who found delight in dancing; listening to the excellent music, rendered by Rogers' orchestra; taking jaunts about the romantic looking park and riding on the merry-go-round. The refreshment stand came in for a good share of patronage.

It was a successful dance in every respect, and it was only at a very late hour that those who enjoyed the evening's recreation could be induced to leave for home, although the ride back to the city by trolley was very delightful.

The grounds is under the management of Maze Edwards for the season. It has been greatly improved in anticipation of a prosperous season. The new dance hall is commodious, airy and is equipped with all the conveniences.

MISS HOWELL'S RECITAL.

GIVEN AT HOME OF MISS MINNIE S. MARSH YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Miss Saidee Mae Howell Was Assisted By Mrs. Lucie Boice Wood, Soprano, From Brooklyn.

A delightful piano recital was given by Miss Saidee Mae Howell, a pupil of Miss Minnie S. Marsh, 915 Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the home of Miss Marsh. There were over one hundred guests present to enjoy the very select programme of classical selections. Miss Bertha vanNuise Willis, soprano, was to have assisted Miss Howell, but illness prevented. Her place was filled very acceptably by Mrs. Lucie Boice Wood, a talented soprano from Brooklyn.

Miss Howell gave twelve numbers, and the audience was so well pleased with her work that she was obliged to respond to an encore at the close of the programme. Her rendition was artistic and beautiful, playing the many difficult selections entirely from memory. She exhibited wonderful sympathy in her work and her touch was marvelous. Her selections were by Schumann, MacDowell, Godard, Sinding, Webber, Coombs, Chopin, Tschaikowsky and Chaminade. Miss Howell has never had any other instructor other than Miss Marsh, and both were the recipients of many words of praise.

Among the selections given by Mrs. Wood were "Cavatina," from the "Queen of Sheba," by Gounod; a Japanese lullaby, "I Love Thee," and "Supposing," and her rich sweet voice was heard to the best advantage. Miss Howell accompanied Mrs. Wood.

Stanton looked up, thought for a moment, and answered: "No." Then he looked up at the clock. It was after two. With a start he turned away and went back to New York and to his office.

It was a relief to the night man to have him out of the waiting-room. It was a relief to Stanton to be in that great empty building.

He had fought a battle and won a victory. His accounts with Richard Raymond were settled. There was no more anxiety, no more anger. He was free to think of the past, the present, and the future, and all centered in Esther Thorndike, the affianced bride of Richard Raymond, his wife. He remembered each of those sentiments and sensations, and in memory they became, or seemed to become, more real, deep, and intense. But the more he thought, the more the mystery grew, and the morning sun streaming into his office window found him as helplessly entangled as ever.

He recalled her warnings of horrors he would have to face, when the first of them appeared in the person of the office boy. He was too full of curiosity to contain himself, and ventured a question distantly relating to a wife. For the first time in Robert Stanton's office an office-boy received an almost savage rebuke.

The next came in the form of a press reporter asking for an interview. Being abruptly refused, he proceeded very calmly to lay before the lawyer an array of facts and fancies relative to the subject, which were simply bewildering to one who thought the secret was all his own.

With a broadening smile of satisfaction, the scribe closed his note-book, remarking:

"There's stuff for a racy half-page there, and a rousing card for me for an exclusive. I didn't want to take up your valuable time, of course, but you're sure to be interviewed by every reporter in town before to-morrow, and it may save you something to give me your side at once. At any rate, a man of your prominence ought to have an opportunity to speak in a matter like this, and I thought I'd just run in and see if you want to say anything, before making it up for the noon edition."

For a time Stanton had been writing. Now he blotted two papers, took them up, wheeled his chair about, and sat facing the scribe. The smile quivered like a lamp-flame in a breeze. Stanton sat silently watching him for a moment, and with a twitch about the lips the smile went out. Then, speaking very slowly, the lawyer said:

"There are some mistakes in what you have rehearsed, and also some distorted facts, which were obviously given you by a man named Raymond, with the evident intention of injuring a woman. It would prove a serious matter to the journal which published them. Personally, the truth is at the service of the world if any journal wishes to retail it, and for what I have actually done I am ready to take the consequences. For what you and your paper do you must accept the same. If you wish to publish your story and to add an interview with me, there you have it. It is all I have to say. But for the woman in question I have a word for you which is not an interview. It would be possible to keep within the bounds of the law in such an article as you propose, and yet do an incalculable injury to a woman whom no one but Richard Raymond could wish to harm. Here is my check, to bearer, for $5,000. Use it as you see fit. One year from to-day I shall be here in this office, if I am alive. If in the meantime there has not a word appeared in any New York or Brooklyn paper connecting the woman you mention with the story you have rehearsed, come to me on that day and I will honor this other paper, which calls for $10,000 more."

The interview was at an end, but the scribe hesitated. First he tore from his notebook a dozen pages, remarking: "I'm sure it's an exclusive so far, sir, and that's all I have." Then he laid the second paper on the notes, adding: "If I succeed you will not forget. That paper might fall into other hands and make you trouble in some way. I hope I shall be back in a year."

With that he went out; but he was hardly gone when the trustees appeared, as full of curiosity as the office boy. They were handled almost as roughly, however, and quickly subsided to the business in hand.

Dr. Borden had hurried to Judge Russell with the official news, and the two had notified the trustees, only to find that Raymond, too, had discovered the facts and had been there before them. He had withdrawn his claim and applied for the $10,000 under the terms of the will.

It was easily arranged for them to retain their charge of the property for another year, as Stanton briefly informed them that he should be away. They left with much better feelings toward the young lawyer than they had possessed for years, for charity and John Olmstead's millions were old associates.

It was late in the evening when Stanton returned to his home for the first time in two days that seemed longer than a lifetime.

Dr. Borden had been zealously spreading the news of the marriage, as anyone but Stanton would have anticipated. The card table at the door was covered with congratulations and inquiries. The good doctor had made an earnest search for information concerning Esther Thorndike, too, and, finding her one of the best unknown individuals in all Brooklyn, he had left a note for Stanton ominously requesting a call from him at his earliest convenience.

Thus everything warned the poor fellow of the increasing horrors he must face. He reached his home longing for nothing so much as rest, but in less than an hour he was on his way to a hotel in New York, having left instructions with Sam and his wife to pack for him such things as would be necessary for a journey and forward them to his office, then to discharge the servants, close the house and remain in charge of it till his return.

The dearest associations of his life still clung as tenderly as ever to the grand old-fashioned mansion, but it had suddenly lost all sense of home. A new longing had taken possession of him, filling the great house with emptiness, in spite of logic to the contrary. He could not solve it, and only realized that it drove him, disappointed and desperate, from everything that had satisfied him; while every expression of that longing centered in thoughts of the veiled face, the music of that voice and the touch of that warm, soft hand, with its diamond set in pearls.

These new thoughts brought no comfort, however, for they always came to the same conclusion—a shuddering realization of the chains of the condition which bound him, never to recognize or communicate with his wife.

With all the rest, his office and profession became intolerable. The sooner he could abandon them and get away the better. He secured the services of a young friend in the profession to occupy his office; and to enable him to forward any mail he hastily prepared an itinerary for a journey of one year, bringing it to a close then simply because he had agreed to meet the reporter in that office on the 7th of December, 1893. At the time he could not realize that the hour would ever come when he should wish of himself to return.

Many a time he found cause for gratitude to that cold list of dates and places, binding him, as it did, to something or other, restraining him from ignominious retreat and surrender to—nothing.

Had he desired, he could easily have learned as much as he wished of Esther

"Earnestly your friend, Esther Thorndike."

Thorndike. Indeed, it was difficult to hold gratuitous information away; but with a keen native sense of honor, greatly overstrained and intensified as it was by the strange circumstances, he felt that it would be the height of disloyalty for him to permit himself to know anything beyond what Esther Thorndike had herself communicated.

The day of her departure found him as ignorant as ever, and only so many days deeper in the new sentiments and their attendant morbid desperation.

Shortly after the hour for the sailing of the day's steamers a messenger boy brought him a card bearing the words: "May the best of life be yours, always. Earnestly your friend, Esther Thorndike."

A member of the New York Seventh Regiment on going to the State Camp at Peekskill, N. Y., took along some Ripans Tabules, believing the change of water and diet would be liable to produce some unpleasant results. The soldiers were awakened at 4.55 A. M., had five minutes to dress in, reporting to the officer in command at 5 o'clock. They were served with bread and coffee and went to drill until 7 o'clock, when a breakfast was served consisting of oatmeal, milk, beefsteak and boiled potatoes. The radical change in his way of living soon affected our friend and his experience was shared by his tent-mate, and they both thereupon had recourse to Ripans Tabules, our friend acting as physician for his companion. The effect the Tabules produced in curing the tendency to constipation and costiveness, and in brightening them up, was so marked that they continued using them regularly thereafter until the supply was exhausted, and then the other soldier telegraphed to New York for more. It was not unusual with them to take three or even four Tabules a day, and it was a regular habit to take at least one every night before going to bed. "I know," said our friend, "that Ripans Tabules were good for those headaches of mine, and were especially valuable of a morning after having spent a night at a party where dancing was kept up very late, but the way they acted on me and my comrade in Camp was positively surprising. Ripans Tabules are now at least two warm advocates in the New York Seventh Regiment. They were our safety valve."

WANTED—A case of bad health that RIPANS will not benefit. They lengthen life and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word RIPANS on the package, and accept no substitute. RIPANS, 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one hundred testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 9, "How to Enter Christ's Family"—Text, Math. xii, 46-50.

"Whosoever shall do the will of My Father which is in heaven."

Ties of kinship do not always secure likeness in nature or friendship. The most nearly related by blood and lineage not infrequently differ widely in views and purposes. Strangers sometimes are more friendly than relatives.

Christianity is more than clannishness and rests on surer foundations than common ancestry and name. The firmest fellowship of earth are those which arise from oneness of opinions, desires and choice. So long as people believe alike they will associate as friends. So long as they have desires in common they will sympathize together. So long as there is a single aim they will walk and live in harmony, defend one another, give and take as members of one true family.

On Children's day much stress will be laid on the value of Christian education and the influence of our institutions of learning. All this is beneficial.

Little children will be dedicated to God in baptism. All this is very appropriate.

But underlying all this is the true nature of the Christian family, the Christ spirit. It should never be lost to sight that no culture of mind, no grace of manners or beauty of feature and form can for an instant supply the place of the true Christian character which resides deep in soul life and constitutes nobility and oneness with the family of Christ.

Not birth, not desires, however strong; not even resolutions of the brightest, can entitle one to membership in the circle of Christ. Not baptism in the most orthodox of denominations, with water from the river Jordan, administered by most eloquent and devout of ecclesiastics, opens the door to the house of God and admits to fellowship with Jesus.

"Whosoever shall do the will of My Father which is in heaven the same is My brother and sister and mother" clearly shows the terms on which we can enter the inner company of familiar friends. "Not he that nameth the name, but he that doeth the will."

It is in active use of all our powers in the way to help our fellow men and please God that we enter the realm of the heavenly realities. It is here and now that heaven abides and God is. The Master made no promise or prophecy of honors after death and rewards to those to whom He was at this time speaking. It was a present day fellowship and an existing family relation. We are now brothers of Jesus Christ and sons of the Almighty if we do the will of the Father. The future may hold in store for us deeper knowledge, higher attainments, but no new doorway to the presence of the Lord, no friendship or fellowship different in kind from that we now have, we who have received the first fruits of the Spirit and whose wills are one with the divine will.

This lesson needs particular emphasis at the present time. Forms of service and outward ceremonies, however æsthetic or ecstatic, can never be substituted for humble heart allegiance and faithful obedience to duty. If you wish to belong to God's family, do God's will. That key unlocks heaven.

The Value of Temptation.

Temptation tests and proves us. If our hearts are fully set to obey God, it will but drive us closer to Him, and He is faithful and will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, but will, with the temptation, also make a way of escape. As we put forth our strength to resist He will energize us and help us to come off conquerors. When we fall, it is commonly because of a divided heart. Our purpose to fellow God is lacking in integrity or wholeness.—Lutheran Observer.

Resisting Little Temptations.

It is while you are patiently toiling at the little tasks of life that the meaning and shape of the great whole of life dawn upon you; it is while you are resisting little temptations that you are growing strong.—Phillips Brooks.

Knowledge.

A handful of knowledge is worth more than an auditorium full of ignorance. One solitary thing that you know enough to die for is worth ignorance enough to jostle the stars in their courses.—Dr. McKenzie.

Christian Progress.

With this new century let the tide rise steadily until all the old high water marks of Christian progress are deep buried under the inrolling tides of consecrated lives and possessions.

Tribute Money.

They pressed about the Master,
Crying, "Tell us, shall we bring
Our tribute money to him
Claiming Cæsar as our king?"

"Shew me a coin," He answered
In accents sweet and clear;
"Tell me whose superscription
And image doth it bear?"

"Both Cæsar's!" "Then to Cæsar Render back his own!" He said.
The test is still unerring
Through the years that since have fled.

We, like the coin, are graven
With the image and the name
Of Him we hail as Sovereign,
And tribute He will claim.

If Christ has set His impress
Upon our lives, then we Are sealed to Him forever
Through all eternity.

But if we yield allegiance
To the sovereignty of sin,
Shall we not claim the tribute
His own, whose own we've been?

I ask you, fellow being,
"Whose image do you bring—
The stamp of carnal Cæsar
Or the seal of Christ, our King?"
—Christian Herald.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 9—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How to enter Christ's family.—Math. xii, 46-50.

That we may enter Christ's family is the glorious revelation of the word of God. The family of Christ is the family of God, and God has repeatedly promised in His word that He will be the Father of His people and that they shall be His children. Paul declares that "the Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God." Christ in this passage, stretching forth His hand to His disciples, said, "Behold My mother and My brethren." The disciples of Christ are His spiritual relatives, and this is even a clearer and a stronger tie than the ties of nature which bind men together in this life.

Membership in the family of Christ is the result of discipleship. The disciple is one who is taught of Christ and who follows His teaching. The disciple hears from Christ the will of God and does it. This brings him into the family of Christ, "for whosoever shall do the will of My Father which is in heaven, the same is My brother and sister and mother." The hearing of God's will from Christ does not bring us into relationship with Christ, nor does professing to do the will of God accomplish this blessed result. It is the doing alone that admits us into the family of God. "Ye are My friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." By believing in Christ and doing the will of God because of our faith in Christ, we are adopted into the family of God, the most desirable and blessed relationship possible in this life.

Membership in the family of Christ brings to us all the privileges of the children of God. By this relationship we become children of God, "and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ." Adopted into the family of God, we enjoy the right to all the privileges of the sons of God. We derive the divine nature, bear the divine image, receive the Father's name, are the special objects of His love and care, and God Himself makes provision for us both for this life and the life to come.

Membership in the family of Christ brings with it a great responsibility. Great privileges are always accompanied by great responsibilities. The children of a king have great privileges, but also great responsibilities. The king's honor, the king's name must be kept unsullied by them. Much more is this true of the children of the King of kings. The children of God must say nothing, must do nothing that will bring their Father's name into disrepute or cast reflection upon His cause. Let us meet this great responsibility not in our own strength, but in the strength of our Father and our elder Brother, for thus only can we be kept faithful.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

Have a voluntary service in which each one participates as led by the Spirit.

BIBLE READINGS.

John i, 11-13; xx, 11-17; Rom. viii, 14-17; II Cor. vi, 14-18; Gal. iv, 1-7; Eph. i, 3-6; Heb. xii, 1-10; Jas. i, 17, 18; I John iii, 1-3; v, 1-3; Rev. xxi, 1-3.

Humiliation.

If we cannot at need even humiliate ourselves to win our brother, it is difficult to see where our religion comes in, especially when we think what humiliation Christ suffered that He might reconcile us to God and make us friends again with our heavenly Father and renew our broken love. Whatever be our faith and works and however correct be our creed and conduct, if we are giving place to anger, if we are stiffening ourselves in strife and disdain, we are none of His, who was meek and lowly of heart. Misunderstandings and estrangements will arise, occasions will come when it seems as if not even love and forbearance can avoid a quarrel, but surely Christ has died in vain if His grace cannot save us from continuance of strife.—Hugh Black.

The Power of Conscience.

A man strives to know the everlasting right, to keep a conscience void of all offense. His inward eye is pure and single; all is true to the eternal right. His moral powers continually expand, and by so much more does he hold communion with his God. As far as it can see his finite conscience reads in the book the eternal right of God. A man's power of conscience is the measure of his moral communion with the Infinite.—Theodore Parker.

Moral Progress.

He who asks of life nothing but the improvement of his own nature and a continual moral progress toward inward contentment and religious submission is less liable than any other to miss and waste his life.—Christian Work.

Retrospection.

O life, I turn on thee a backward gaze,
Before my sun has set!
I mark the windings of a tangled maze
Of paths I'd fain forget.

I see my footprints in the telltale sand,
Nor time nor death can hide;
I see where straightest I my pathway planned;
There most I turned aside.

And sharpest sting of my regretful pain—
What deepest I deplore—
The path I made must ever so remain;
I'll pass that way no more.

I dare not 'gainst a straying brother cry
Nor his intent malign,
Lest, looking backward, there I may descry
His path more straight than mine.

I may not over him in judgment stand
Nor ask how he has striven;
I only clasp in peace his proffered hand
As I would be forgiven.

May there not be hid, by his smiling face,
A troubled heart and sore?
I humbly whisper, Jesus, give us grace;
I'll pass that way no more.

—Christian at Work.

KILLED BLACK HAWK

Some Strange Claims Made by an Old Army Scout.

Robert W. Patten Says He Saved Fremont from Starving to Death—Life Full of Adventure, War and Romance.

Few careers have been more adventurous than that of Robert W. Patten, pathfinder and army scout, who recently settled at Seattle, Wash., to end his days.

On the streets of Seattle Patten has become familiar as "the man with the umbrella hat," on account of the peculiar headgear he affects. The rigors of a constant outdoor life made it necessary for him to prevent sunstrokes in summer and frozen ears in winter by protecting his head with a broad-brimmed hat, provided with flaps for winter wear.

Scout Patten says he rescued John C. Fremont, the frontier pioneer, when Fremont lost his way in the Rocky mountains. That he was in the Black Hawk war with Kit Carson and ended the chief's existence with his own hand 70 years ago.

His age he gives as 90. Notwithstanding this handicap, he wrote to President McKinley when the Spanish-American war became imminent and offered his services as a scout. He was then 87 years old. He says he was United States chief of scouts in the civil war, and resigned at the close of the conflict in favor of Buffalo Bill.

Patten's own story of his life is to the effect that he was born February 24, 1811, in New York state, and ran away from home when nine years old, because of friction with his stepmother. With the assistance of his grandmother he made his way to where Chicago now stands.

For some time he lived with a French trader, but was later adopted by Big John, chief of the Winnebago Indians.

Later, when he was about 16 years old, he accompanied the tribe to the northern part of Wisconsin.

Here bloody war was waged between the Winnebagos and the Chippewas, and Patten bears a scar on his head which he claims was received from a tomahawk in one of their affrays.

For saving a settlement from annihilation by giving timely warning

ROBERT W. PATTEN.
(Famous Old Army Scout and His Peculiar Sunshade Hat.)

to a garrison of soldiers, he was made a second lieutenant in the regular army a few years later, being detached as a scout.

When he was 20 years old he was ordered to report to Kit Carson, at the place where Sioux Falls, S. D., now stands, and with him proceeded westward to the Rockies. On the way they met a trader known as "Old California Joe," and the trio hunted and traded for many long years.

They fought in the Black Hawk war, in the early thirties. Patten, as stated, claims to have killed Black Hawk, and exhibits a scar on his wrist as the last wound ever inflicted by the chief.

A decade of wandering followed. Once Patten was bound to the stake with several others by the Sioux Indians, and would have been burned to death but for the timely arrival of help. The side of his face still bears the mark of flames.

The three men returned finally to the Rockies again, and trapped in the winter months. Once they were caught in a snowstorm on a hill. Patten remained on top and the other two proceeded down to the valley. While he was gazing in an opposite direction from that taken by his companions he saw a column moving slowly through the storm. He was unable to determine whether it consisted of men or buffalo, and, as he tells the story, he called Kit Carson back.

"Kit came up the hill," he says, "and I showed him the column. He had a pair of field glasses with him, and was able to make out that it was a column of men."

They hastened to the strangers and found that they were a company of soldiers in command of Fremont.

He had been lost in the mountains for some time, and was short of provisions.

Finally Patten settled in Wisconsin and was married. Hardly a month later the civil war broke out, and he enlisted in the Third Wisconsin and served until the close of the war, being, he states, chief of the United States scouts when the south gave up the struggle.

For years he afterward led a wandering life, as trapper and prospector.

The umbrella hat, which excites so much curiosity, he invented while in Mexico.

FASHION ITEMS.

Details Concerning the Fashionable Wardrobe.

Toques of plaited and gathered taffeta, of mousseline de soie and of spangled tulle are serious rivals to straws and neapolitan braids. Straws are so beautifully woven now that they are almost as soft and flexible as fine felt and are draped and twisted easily into all sorts of forms.

The newest way of arranging a lace flounce is to hang it over a full flounce or plaiting of silk.

Sleeves are quite flat and tight at the top, but are full and much trimmed below the elbow, reversing the order of things which obtained five or six years ago.

The girl's gown illustrated is of challie having a printed floral design. The skirt has two flat circular ruffles at the foot, bordered with colored stitching and divided at the back and front. The bodice is laid in large horizontal plaits, the edges in front being bordered with stitching and held in place by ornamental buttons. The collar and plastrons are of embroidered batiste. The sleeves have double, stitched cuffs, with buttons, below which are puffs of embroidered batiste. The hat of plaited silk is trimmed with flowered ribbon and plain velvet. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SUMMER MODES.

Prevailing Methods of Fashionable Ornamentation.

Stitched bands, straps, tucks, stitching, applications of embroidery, ribbons of black velvet or satin, galloon and mohair braid continue all to be in great favor. The flat band system of decoration owes its most fashionable effects to the ingenious designs in which it is applied to the surface. All sorts of motifs are employed to give variety, and the result is sometimes very striking.

An odd decoration on a peau de soie skirt consists of tiny ruches of mousseline de soie of the same color, which are arranged upon the tablier to trace a moire design.

The illustration given today shows a bodice having a short bolero of blue cloth. This is stitched at the edges and ornamented by stitched straps of the cloth. It has an aiglon collar and one revers and closes with one large ornamental button. Beneath this is a second bolero of cream silk with a blue design closed by three little straps with gold buttons. The wide, wrinkled corselet is of blue panne. The cloth sleeves have stitched straps and large, stitched cuffs, below which are puffs with a stitched band and circular ruffle. JUDIC CHOLLET.

GOLF.

G. H. Bowly, one of the famous whist four of the Jersey City Club, broke the record for the Jersey City Golf Club course Wednesday with a net score of 76 for eighteen holes.

In view of the fact that the golf committee of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club has allowed the change from 18 to 15 in the handicap of Mrs N. Pendleton Rogers to stand, this makes a change in the standing for the cup. Mrs. Rogers was credited with seven and one-half points and she has been reduced to six points, with which she still leads. Olaf Saugstad receives two points instead of one and one-half and D. H. Rowland receives one point. This makes the standing for the cup at present as follows:

	Points.
Mrs. N. P. Rogers	6
Townsend Bushmore	3
Howard C. Tracy	3
C. C. Burke, Jr.	3
W. L. Glenny	2½
Olaf Saugstad	2
H. R. Stockton	2
Howard Wright	1½
A. G. Henderson	1½
Howard Huntington	1½
E. A. Stevenson	1½
D. H. Barrows	1½
D. H. Rowland	1

The following persons have been elected as members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club: W. R. Cock, George W. Ryder, L. H. Biglow, Jr., and Leslie M. Daniel. Also the following as junior associate members: Mrs. Theo. B. Wilson, Miss Wharton, Mrs. T. J. Mumford, Miss Elizabeth Cock, Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., Miss Daniel and Messrs. Daniel and Harmon. Lewis E. Waring has been made chairman of a committee to arrange for a Fourth of July celebration, and it is proposed to have fireworks in the evening. There will be play all day on the course and many special features in the evening.

YOUNG WOMEN WORKED WELL FOR MISSIONS

Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed Church Concluded Meetings for Summer.

EXPECTED REV. DR. SCUDDER

HE WAS NOT ABLE TO BE PRESENT SO THERE WAS NO ADDRESS.

Band Will Co-operate With Endeavor Society in Supplying Flowers for the Church on Sundays—Work Done by the Band.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church held its last meeting for the season in the lecture room of the church last evening. It was expected that Rev. Dr. Scudder, of India, would be present to make an address. He failed to attend and the many members and friends present were greatly disappointed.

The president of the band, Miss Lillian A. Force, presided. After the usual opening exercises the business, concluding the year's work, was transacted. There were reports from the various committees, and each one showed the band to be in an excellent condition spiritually, financially and, in fact, in every department there has been marked progress.

The treasurer, Miss Searing, reported a balance of nearly $26, and Mrs. Will F. Williams, chairman of the emergency fund, reported $8 45 as the proceeds from the last cake sale. Miss Mae E. Anthony, of the flower committee, stated that eighty bouquets were sent last month to the Italian Mission, New York, where Mrs. Pendleton is in charge. An acknowledgement was received from flowers sent to St. Elizabeth Hospital, New York. The report of the birthday box committee was also encouraging to the members, as were the reports of all other committees.

The members decided to assist the Christian Endeavor Society in keeping the pulpit supplied with flowers every Sunday, and it was agreed that the band should attend to this matter every other month commencing with July.

Miss Nevius stated that it was the intention of the members of her committee to make petticoats and aprons during the summer months to be sent to various fields, and she asked the support of all members in this direction.

Miss Abbie E. VanCleef, who was one of the delegates from the band to the meeting of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions held in the Marble Collegiate church, New York, recently, gave a report of that meeting. It was a most complete and interesting report, given in a clear and concise way. It told of the many enjoyable features of the meeting and it comprised interesting sketches of the several helpful addresses made by prominent workers, who told of the work of the Reformed church.

After the consideration of several other matters of more or less importance, during which a vote of thanks was extended to A. B. Summers, the expressman, for carting barrels that were sent away, the meeting adjourned, following which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Tried to Walk Tight Rope.

Wm. Britten, a thirteen-year-old boy living on Washington street, started yesterday to walk along the top wire of a neighbor's fence. He had proceeded but a short distance when he slipped and fell. The fleshy part of his left leg just below the knee caught in the sharp point of an iron post, inflicting a deep gash several inches long. Dr. Clawson, who was called, took five stitches in the wound.

Among the numerous soloists who will appear will be Al Sweet, who made such a favorable impression at last summer concerts.

It is Mr LaVere's intention to shortly take steps toward obtaining funds for rendering concerts throughout the summer months, similar to those held last season.

BANQUET TO LEAL'S NINE.

CLOSE OF THE SEASON WAS MARKED WITH A DINNER.

Held at Hillside Club House—Informal Toasts Were Responded to—Those Who Were Present.

As a fitting climax to a successful baseball season the Leal's School Athletic Association tendered a banquet to the team at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club's house last evening.

The occasion was a merry one. Throughout the evening cheer after cheer resounded through the dining hall and the mere mention of the name of a player on the nine was followed by demonstrations of applause. The menu was an elaborate one and everyone of the guests did justice to the numerous courses.

Several toasts were responded to in an informal way. Vaughn McGee, the newly elected captain, toasted next year's nine. Other toasts were: "The Football Team," Donald A. McGee; "The Ladies," Wm. Schoonmaker and "The Athletic Association," Robert Tilney.

Among those who attended the banquet were: Aaron Thompson, the coach; Robert Abbott, scorer; Charles King, treasurer of the association; Herbert S. Rogers, manager; D. Clinton Hall, assistant manager and the nine, including Tilney, Brown, V. McGee, Dupee, Griggs, R. Schoonmaker, W. Schoonmaker, D. McGee, Corwin, and the "subs."

NORTH PLAINFIELD TO HAVE STREET SIGNS.

Borough Council Appropriated $150 For That Object At Last Evening's Council Meeting.

SEWAGE COMMITTEE NAMED.

APPROPRIATION MADE TO INVESTIGATE MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Much Talk On Borough Water Works—Special Election Required To Get Right To Issue Bonds—Lots Of Business Done.

The proposition advocated by The Daily Press that suitable street signs be placed at the intersections of the various thoroughfares of North Plainfield was unamicously adopted in the form of a resolution passed at the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council last evening. It was the most important matter, which occupied the attention of the Councilmen, although there was a considerable amount of business transacted. The committee on municipal ownership received an appropriation to carry on its investigations, and the fire department received an appropriation for the Fourth of July service. A committee on sewage was appointed and the various reports read.

There were no absentees and the Council went through the routine business with dispatch. Two petitions for street improvements were presented. One requested that Westervelt avenue, between Grandview and Mountain avenues, be macadamized. Residents along the thoroughfare have subscribed $50 for the purpose. This petition was referred to the proper committee as was also a petition asking that necessary repairs be made to Howard, Dupont and part of Duer streets as well as Steiner place. The places where the repairs are requested, it was stated, have not been overhauled since they were graded twenty years ago.

The annual election, held by Warren Engine Company, was confirmed and the recommendation that Joseph Newman, a fireman who has served from 1894 until the present time, be given papers as an exempt fireman, was approved. After the reading of the claims against the borough consisting of bills for salaries, road expenses and minor items, the Mayor announced that in pursuance of the resolution passed by the Councilmanic body he had appointed a committee of citizens to investigate the subject of underground sewage and to report the probable cost and other important details. The committee of five selected is composed of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., George P. Dupee, W. W. Howland, David T. Kenney and Elston M. French.

On the advice of the borough counsel, Senator Charles A. Reed, the amount of tax, illegally assessed and collected on certain bank stock belonging to Mrs. A. C. Randolph, was refunded. Mrs. Randolph had paid a tax on the stock in Fanwood, where she resided when it was assessed.

The report for May of Borough Tax Collector George F. Brown was approved. The receipts were: Taxes and interest, $469.32; Board of Health, $5.00, special school, $172.25; liquor license, $1,852 50; N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company, $150; (Frank Rowley, clerk.) macadam $81; licenses, $115; fines, $54; dog registration, $2.20; balance on hand May 1, $1,550.23. Total receipts, $4,451.59. Disbursements, $2 678 97. Balance on hand June 1, $1,772.62, represented as follows: Borough fund, $1,162.37, and Watchung avenue, $610 25.

The report of Councilman Clark showed that the expenses of the street committee for the month of May were as follows: Labor on streets, $127.10; Somerset street widening, $690.75; incidental expenses, $43 41; sprinkling, $64.69. Total, $925 95. Additional items were: J. W. Manhattan, $85.87; J. H. Wilson, $21 33; incidental to Somerset street, $59.57; C. Frank French, $1, making a grand total of $1 093 74.

The subject of street signs was first mentioned by the Mayor. Councilman Clark arose to speak on the subject and during his remarks he offered a resolution calling for the appropriation of $150 for the purpose. Mr. Clark stated that he had given some attention to the subject and as a result had ascertained that the cost of each sign when in place would be less than a dollar. The city, said he, had purchased its signs for sixty cents apiece and the cost of placing them in position was twenty-one cents each. The signs erected in the city were approved of by him as well Mayor Smalley, who declared that the signs now doing service in the borough looked like toys. The resolution passed.

His Honor suggested that public notice be given requesting property owners to trim the trees along the sidewalks. A bill against the water company for repairs made to Somerset street between Summit and Mountain avenues a long time ago, which were necessary by reason of the water company digging up the thoroughfare, was placed in the hands of the borough counsel for collection.

Councilman Lee, chairman of the municipal ownership committee, reported progress. Senator Reed said that inasmuch as the construction of a municipal water plant would necessitate the issuing of bonds, the matter would have to be passed upon by the people at an election. The procedure would be the presentation of a petition signed by one-fourth of the property owners, praying for a special election. The decision of the voters at the polls, if favorable, warrants the Council in issuing bonds. Thorough consideration of the subject by the committee before any action is taken by the Council was advised by Chairman Lee, who declared that properly the question should be presented to the people at the spring election.

Councilman Northrop suggested that the committee visit a certain municipality in this State and examine that city's water plant. He declared that the municipality he had in mind furnishes pure water at an extremely low figure. For obvious reasons the Councilman would not name the city to which he referred. The suggestion was favorably received and for this purpose, as well as others, $100 was appropriated to the committee.

Councilman Swackhamer introduced a resolution advocating that all uncollectible taxes on the duplicate list for 1899 and 1900 be stricken off, and his resolution was carried.

An appropriation of $200 for expense of the rental of an office and incidental expenses incurred by the tax collector was passed as was also an appropriation of $75 for the expenses of the fire department on July 4. It was decided to borrow $2,000 for six months to defray current expenses.

Auspiciously Begun At Washington Hall Last Evening—Will Be Continued Tonight.

The members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Ancient Order of Hibernians are holding a strawberry and ice cream festival in Washington Hall. The affair began last evening and will continue this evening. It is being held for the benefit of the treasury and thus far success has attended the efforts of the women.

The lamp contest last evening was won by Miss Margaret Corrigan. The contest for the pillow and shoes will be decided this evening.

Zingarra, the palmist, was present last evening and many had their fortunes told by her. She will be present this evening. During the evening there was dancing, music for which was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly.

The committee in charge of the affair consists of Mrs. Kate Mowen, chairman; Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, Miss Kate Flatley, Miss Lizzie Fitzgerald, Miss D. Flatley and Miss Joanna Smiddy. The floor manager is P. Corrigan. E. McCue has charge of the soda-water stand and Peter Connolly was on the door. James Ennis assisted at the ticket office.

The Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School closed yesterday for the summer and the time set for re-opening is Sept. 25. TROUBLE FOR BECKER DOES NOT COME SINGLY

Held For The Grand Jury And Bound Over To Keep The Peace In One Day.

IN JUSTICE WARDEN'S COURT

E. S. HOOLEY CLAIMS THAT BECKER THREATENED DAUGHTER WITH GUN.

Trouble Was Over Encounter Between Hooley's Bull Dog And Becker's Calf—Frank Burke Claimed That Becker Had Been Troubling Him.

In Justice Warden's Court, at Dunellen, two complaints were made yesterday. One was that of E. S. Hooley against George Becker on a charge of assault, and the other was that of Frank Burke against George Becker, in which the plaintiff asked to have the defendant bound over to keep the peace.

The first complaint is a result of the experience that Miss Mabel Hooley had a few days ago with Becker, when the former's bull dog met a calf belonging to the defendant. The latter claimed that his calf was severely injured by the dog. On the other hand, the plaintiff claims that a gun was brought into play by Becker in a threatening manner. In this complaint the papers were issued yesterday and Becker was notified to appear for a hearing at 5 o'clock. Lawyer William Newcorn was engaged by the defendant to represent him, and waived examination. Becker was placed under $200 bail to appear before the Grand Jury which meets in September, and he was given until 6 o'clock this evening to furnish bonds.

The next case was that in which Frank Burke, who lives near Becker's place on Park avenue, claimed that he had been troubled with the defendant and he asked to have him put under bonds. Justice Warden fixed the bail at $100.

Last Monday the three Burke brothers and Becker met and had some trouble, and the latter claims that the boys broke his gun, threw him down and assaulted him. The boys were naled before Justice Weaver, of South Plainfield, on the complaint of Becker, but cleared themselves. Now it is understood that Becker wants to have the Barkes arrested again. The termination of all the trouble will be watched with much interest.

N. C. MAGUE'S FUNERAL.

Impressive Services Held at the Home And at the Grave Yesterday Afternoon.

Red Men from every part of the state, members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and Winfield Scott Post and a host of friends, gathered at the late residence of N. C. Mague, on McDowell street, yesterday, where funeral services over his remains were held. They were in charge of Rev. L. E. Livermore, of New Market, who gave an impressive discourse in which he spoke of the upright life of the deceased, his four years' service to his country and his deep fraternal spirit.

At the close of the house obsequies the mourners went by special car to Hillside cemetery, where the ritual of the Independent Order of Red Men was carried out in charge of Great Chief of Records Daniel M. Stevens, of Camden, who acted as great sachem, and Great Prophet William Newcorn of this city. Those who acted as pall bearers were C. H. Randolph and W. H. Brokaw, of Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., Albert Perry and Henry Frazee, of Winfield Scott Post and C. M. Ulrich and William A. Westphal, of the Red Men.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Observed With Special Exercises at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church This Morning.

The Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held its Children's Day exercises this morning. They were in charge of Mrs. F. J. Hubbard, Mrs. R. West, Miss Ida Spicer, Miss Mabel Maxson and Miss Mabel Mitchell.

The programme consisted of songs by the children and selections by the choir, an exercise by Miss Eva St. John and Charles Titsworth, another by the Misses Ethel and Helen Rogers and Philip Mosher, and anthems by the juniors.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and at the close an interesting address was made by Rev. Mr. Smith, of Somerville.

—Have you tried Leggett's witch hazel soap? None better sold in the city.

TOO WET.

Benevolent Band Of King's Daughters Was Forced To Hold Its Lawn Festival Inside.

The heavy shower yesterday afternoon interfered somewhat with the plans of the Benevolent Band of King's Daughters, which was to have held a lawn festival at Cedar Brook farm for the benefit of the nurse fund. The preparations had all been made, however, and it was decided to conduct the sale of cake and cream in the parlors of Miss Anna Martine's residence.

Considering the attendance the result was quite successful. The entire band assisted at the sale, but the preliminaries were arranged by a committee in charge of Mrs. William Myers.

FESTIVAL AT HOPE CHAPEL.

LADIES AID SOCIETY GAVE ITS ANNUAL AFFAIR LAST NIGHT.

Cool Weather Did Not Affect The Support Given The Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival.

Although the weather last evening was somewhat cool and partially threatening, it did not have the slightest effect upon the attendance at the annual strawberry and ice cream festival of the Ladies Aid Society, of Hope chapel. A goodly number was present all evening and a successful affair, both socially and otherwise, was the result.

While delicious ice cream and strawberries were the chief condiments on sale at the various pretty booths grouped about the chapel, there were other articles to be purchased by those in attendance. Each was sold at a prettily decorated table presided over by a corps of efficient waitresses.

Chief among them was a candy table in charge of Mrs. William Gray, Mrs. William Firstbrook and Mrs. Thomas Hendry; a flower booth, where pretty bouquets could be purchased for a trifle from Mrs. O. F. Pearson and Mrs. J. H. Johnson, and a cake table in charge of Mrs. Robert Gow and J. B. Higgins. The ice cream was disposed of under the supervision of a committee consisting of Mr. Margaret Sweeney, chairman; Mrs. William Wright, Mrs. Susan Ball, Mrs. David Bowden, Mrs. Daniel Mowinkle, Mrs. George Radford, Mrs. Charles Farlee and Mrs. Z. T. Kinzey. Mrs. Harry Corlees and Mrs. George Wallace saw to it that everyone was provided with strawberries.

By way of entertainment the Misses Florence and Mabel Symons rendered a number of pleasing piano selections and also sang several humorous songs, and Miss Katie Slade recited in a manner which called for several encores. This part of the programme was provided by Mrs. William Firstbrook, Mrs. David Bowden and Mrs. F. A. Weber.

PHOTOGRAPHED A CHILD IN QUARRANTINED ROOM

Henry W. Maynard Arrested for Wilfully Violating Rules of City Health Board.

SENTENCE WAS SUSPENDED.

EXPLAINED THAT HE DIDN'T INTEND TO VIOLATE ANY LAW.

Went to Take Picture of Dead Child for Frank Runyon—Inspector Addis Was Complainant—Corporation Counsel Marsh Appeared for Board.

An interesting case, involving an infraction of the health code, was tried before City Judge Runyon this morning. Health Inspector Addis had complained that Henry W. Maynard, a local photographer, wilfully entered the home of Frank Runyon, on West Second street, which was under quarrantine, for the purpose of taking a picture of Mr. Runyon's daughter, Maud, who had died of diphtheria. Although technically guilty of the charge of imperilling the health of the city, the court was favorably impressed with Mr. Maynard's version of the affair and sentence was suspended. The fine prescribed by law for such an offense is placed at $25.

According to the health inspector's statement, the child was taken with diphtheric symptoms on May 18. Dr. Jenkins, who was called, notified the health department to that effect and the Runyon flat in Washington hall was quarantined and the customary card placed on the outer door, known as 116 West Second street. On going to the place the next morning, Addis learned that Maynard had entered the apartments and taken a photograph of the dead child, with the understanding, it is alleged, that death had been caused by a contagious disease. When he interviewed Maynard, the latter readily admitted taking the picture but disclaimed doing so with any intent of trespassing the law.

In his own defense, Mr. Maynard stated that a messenger had called him to the apartments, saying that the child had died of diphtheria, but that the rooms had been quarantined and there was no danger; also that he entered by 122 West Second street and a card, which he would see on the door of 116, was for another family in the building. He obeyed instructions, and owing to the winding halls in the building, was unaware that he had passed back from 122 to 116. He had been misinformed in the matter, he said, or he would not have entered the building.

Corporation Counsel Marsh, appearing for the Health Board, asked for an adjournment of the case in order that Mr. Runyon, who is an express messenger, might be summoned to court. Judge Runyon decided otherwise and in suspending Maynard, advised the the complainant that if anyone was to be punished, it should be the person who sent for the photographer, knowing the apartments were quarantined.

MISSION WORK.

Women Of Crescent Avenue Church Planned Work For The Future In Home Mission Field.

The quarterly meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church was held yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the church. Owing to the weather the attendance was small. An interesting address was made by Mrs. Gildersleeve, of Westfield, who is the new president of the Presbyterial Society of the Elizabeth District.

Several letters were read from missionaries in fields where the society has been sending barrels of useful articles and clothing. Plans were also made for the work next year. The society is supporting a missionary at Mt. Pleasant, Utah, and it contributes to the day school at Big Laurel, North Carolina. Mrs. George P. Mellick, who has always taken considerable interest in this school work, was again appointed chairman to take charge, and she will select her own committee.

Women Organized.

The members of the Getsemany church met Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. John Gjetelson, of East Front street. A Ladies' Aid Society was then formed with the following officers: President, Miss Hulda Nybion; secretary, Miss Nega Thulin; treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Anderson; financial secretary, Mrs. Charles Johnson.

Aid For Strikers.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., has presented $10 to the local members of the International Order of Machinists to assist them as the officers direct.

A LYNCHING AVERTED

Georgia Sheriff Saves Prisoner From Angry Mob.

GOVERNOR ORDERS OUT MILITIA.

A Negro Sentenced to Be Hanged, but Kept From Gallows by Stay on an Appeal, Has a Narrow Escape From Death.

CARROLLTON, Ga., June 8.—The nerve of an obscure Georgia sheriff whose name is Joseph Merrill upheld the law of the state and saved the life of a negro from a mob. In protecting the negro, who was saved from the gallows only a few hours before through the efforts of his lawyers, one life was lost and two men were wounded. The arrival of the state militia averted threatened trouble last night, and at 9 o'clock a special train bearing the negro, whose crime was the murder of a little white boy whom he found fishing alone, and his guard was speeding toward Atlanta. The man killed in attacking the jail was George Bennett of Carrollton, and the wounded men are Thomas Smith, also of Carrollton, and an unknown man, presumably a farmer. Thomas S. Word, father of the murdered boy, who was in the front rank of the would be lynchers, strange to say, was not hit. After Bennett fell Mr. Word jumped upon the window and exclaimed dramatically:

"Shoot me, Mr. Sheriff! I would as soon die now as any time!"

Only nine shots were fired, and the walls of the jail show the marks of the bullets. None of the sheriff's posse was hit.

Williams, the negro, was tried and found guilty of murdering Otis Word Jan. 1 and sentenced to be hanged yesterday, being refused a new trial by Judge Harris in the morning.

His attorneys, Reese, Smith & Boykin filed a bill of exceptions and carried the case to the supreme court.

A large number of people had come to town to witness the hanging, and when it was learned that an appeal had been taken to the supreme court, delaying execution, there was much talk, which crystallized in the formation of a mob.

At noon the mob made an assault on the jail. They battered down the outside iron door despite the warning of the sheriff and entered the building. They made a demand on the sheriff for the key to the negro's cell, but were refused. With the refusal they began their advance upon the sheriff and the few deputies which he had been able to summon to his aid. They were told to stop or they would be fired on, but the order was not obeyed.

As they advanced down the corridor toward the sheriff the order was given to fire.

The unexpected fight of the sheriff and his posse frightened the mob, and they retreated outside the jail. Here they broke and ran and were soon divided into little groups, discussing the event.

Sheriff Merrill at once consulted Judge Harris of the county court, and it was decided to call upon Governor Candler for aid. The governor was communicated with by telephone and said he would send two companies from Atlanta as soon as they could be assembled.

During the afternoon the mob telephoned the situation to friends in the adjoining towns of Villa Rica and Temple and made an appeal for more men to effect the capture of the negro. This was communicated also to Governor Candler, and the governor soon wired a proclamation to the people of the county. It was read from the steps of the courthouse at 4 o'clock by the mayor. The governor commanded the people to disperse and said the entire military and civil forces of the state would be used to enforce order if necessary. The reading of the proclamation apparently had a good effect, as many people were seen to mount their horses and leave the town.

Two Killed In a Texas Quarrel.

HOUSTON, June 8.—As the result of an indictment charging hog theft a shooting affray occurred here in which Thomas Payne and L. D. Echols were killed, J. B. Perkins was fatally and Dave Echols badly wounded. Payne's son was on trial, and the Echols had been summoned as witnesses. The men met down town, and after a few words the shooting began. Perkins was a brother-in-law of Payne, and he and Echols fired at about the same time. Echols' bullet struck Payne, and in the same second Perkins shot and killed Echols. Dave Echols opened fire on Perkins and on young Payne. Two bullets struck Perkins, and a wound in the groin will probably prove fatal. Perkins wounded Dave Echols in the arm, and amputation will be necessary. The younger Payne was not hurt. The street was crowded at the time of the shooting, but no one save those directly involved was hurt.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 8.—Fire started in a cooper's shop here yesterday afternoon, and the flames spread rapidly. The fire department was called out, but was powerless to cope with the flames. Help was summoned from nearby cities, and the fire was got under control as soon as aid had arrived. The fire was the worst that has been known here. Thirty residences, a shop and a hotel were destroyed. Ten families were rendered homeless. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

Englishmen Take It Hard.

LONDON, June 8.—The victories of Americans on the British turf are the theme of much newspaper comment. The Daily Telegraph says: "Is England going to the dogs? Has the dawn of the century given the signal for extinguishing the supremacy of the English thoroughbred and made these islands an appanage of the United States? We must possess our souls in patience and endeavor to learn lessons from the staggering object lesson here provided."

BEYOND LAW'S REACH

Convicted Bank Robber Commits Suicide.

A SECOND TRAGEDY AT TORONTO.

Of the Trio Arrested For the Aurora Burglary Only One Remains to Serve Out a Twenty-one Years' Sentence.

TORONTO, June 8.—Of the three men, Fred Lee Rice, Thomas Jones and Frank Rutledge, extradited from Chicago to stand trial for the robbery of a bank in Aurora, Ont., Rice is the only living survivor of the trio to serve out the 21 years' imprisonment to which he was sentenced yesterday morning. Two tragedies have put Jones and Rutledge beyond the reach of the law. Jones died from bullet wounds received in a desperate attempt to escape from the officers who were transferring the prisoners from the courthouse to the jail last Tuesday, and Rutledge committed suicide yesterday by jumping from the gallery in the jail to the stone court 30 feet below.

The first tragedy which startled the citizens of this city was the daring attempt made by the three prisoners to escape from the constables on Tuesday night. While the carriage containing Rice, Jones and Rutledge and two constables was proceeding from the courthouse to the jail an accomplice threw three revolvers through the cab window. The desperadoes evidently were expecting outside help, for they acted promptly. Securing possession of the revolvers, the three men opened fire upon the constables. County Constable Boyd was shot and killed. The officers returned the fire, and Jones was wounded in the groin and arm. He died at the hospital. A street car conductor, whose car the burglars attempted to board, struck Rutledge over the head with a piece of iron, knocking him senseless. Rice surrendered. Rice and Rutledge were sentenced to 21 years' imprisonment in Kingston penitentiary for robbing the Aurora bank.

The second tragedy occurred yesterday afternoon. Rutledge was being taken, with another prisoner, in charge of one of the jail guards to dinner about 3 o'clock. Suddenly he made a dash and, springing up the stairway, mounted to the gallery running around inside of the jail 30 feet from the floor. Climbing over the railing, Rutledge jumped. He fell headforemost on the stone floor; fracturing his skull. He was immediately taken to the hospital, where he died at 5 o'clock without regaining consciousness.

American Filly Won the Oaks.

LONDON, June 8.—Speaking of yesterday's turf victory, Mr. Foxhall Keene said: "I am very proud to be the first American to win the Oaks. I bred the filly myself in Kentucky, so she was American bred, owned and ridden." Mr. Keene said he was not much of a gambler, but in this race he had put a big stake on Cap and Bells II and had told all his friends to do the same. "There was not an American at the course whom I have heard of that did not put his money on Cap and Bells II." Mr. Croker, although he had a horse in the race, backed Cap and Bells II, and numerous commissions were cabled from New York. Mr. Keene is believed to have won £10,000 in wagers. He announced that half of the £4,500 purse would go to London hospitals and the rest to hospitals in the United States.

Chicago Steamer Safely Crosses.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The steamer Northwestern, the pioneer vessel of Chicago's ocean going merchant marine, has succeeded in reaching the other side of the Atlantic safely, having been seen yesterday off the Irish coast, after a voyage of 44 days out of the port of Chicago bound for Liverpool. The honor of being the first vessel of Chicago's new enterprise to cross the Atlantic, although the Northwestern is the pioneer vessel, belongs to her sister ship, the Northman, which arrived at Hamburg on Tuesday last, after a voyage of 35 days. The Northwestern sailed from Chicago six days previous to the departure of the Northman, but the former grounded while passing down the St. Lawrence and remained fast for three days.

Kiowa Reservation Quiet.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The commissioner of Indian affairs has received a telegram from Colonel Randlett, Indian agent on the Kiowa reservation, saying that notwithstanding the agitation there all is quiet. Indian Inspector Nesler, who has charge of the allotment of lands among the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache Indians, yesterday notified the secretary of the interior by wire that he had completed and mailed his final schedule. There are about 3,000 of the allotments. This is the last step before the issuance of the president's proclamation in the matter of opening the Indian lands to settlement.

Charged With Smuggling.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 8.—The schooner Let Me Pass, the property of a resident of the island of Vieques, off the east coast of Porto Rico, has been seized and two merchants have been arrested on the charge of smuggling liquors and provisions from St. Thomas. Some counterfeit silver currency is in circulation here. The exports for May totaled $1,175,562, and the duties on imports aggregated $60,428.

West Point Examinations Concluded

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 8.—The exhibition drills before the board of visitors came practically to an end yesterday. The fourth class was examined in drill regulations, and that ended the examinations. The result will not be announced before next Monday, and until then the cadets will be in suspense regarding their class standing.

The Oregon Expected Soon.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A big lumber combination that will take in all the lumber firms in the eastern part of Long Island is said to be forming in Suffolk county. According to the reported plans the new company will be capitalized at $1,250,000, the shares to have a par value of $100.

NEW NAVAL ORDERS.

The Navy Reclassified According to Ship Tonnage.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The president has signed an order reclassifying the vessels of the navy according to their tonnage to take the place of the old classification used based on the number of guns carried. Under the new system there will be four classes, as follows:

First rate, men-of-war of 8,000 tons and over; second rate, men-of-war of 4,000 tons and under 8,000 tons and auxiliary vessels of 6,000 tons and over except colliers, hospital ships and other vessels used for special purposes; third rate, men-of-war from 1,000 to 4,000 tons and auxiliary vessels from 1,000 to 6,000 tons and colliers, refrigerator ships, hospital ships, etc., of 4,000 tons and over; fourth rate, all other vessels.

The order further gives the assignment to command afloat. These give an admiral command of a fleet, rear admiral command of a fleet or squadron, captain command of a division or ship of the first or second rate, commander command of a division or ship of the second or third rate, lieutenant commander command of a ship of the third or fourth rate, lieutenant command of a ship of the fourth rate, a destroyer, torpedo boat, tug or tender; lieutenant, junior grade, command of a torpedo boat, tug or tender; ensign command of a torpedo boat or tug.

The Sign of Health

LAXAKOLA — TRADE MARK — DR. DAVIS

Dizziness and headaches cannot be cured in any other manner than by getting at the root of the trouble and curing the cause.

The cause is almost invariably a disordered digestive system, or else a bad stomach and clogged bowels are responsible. Laxakola, the great Tonic Laxative, is an unfailing cure.

It works gently and painlessly and at the same time acts as a tonic to the bowels, stomach, liver and kidneys and builds up the system instead of weakening and irritating it as other laxatives do.

Its remarkable properties reach every organ—the liver, kidneys and stomach, nerve, heart and brain—and removes the cause of your debilitated condition. This is the only way to secure an absolute and permanent cure. Laxakola is the only medicine for babies, is purely vegetable and its action is gentle, speedy and effective. For coated tongue, simple fevers, colds, chills and languid feeling it is the ideal medicine.

It tastes good. ☞ Children like it and ask for it.

LAXAKOLA FOR WOMEN. It is a gentle and safe remedy to use during all conditions of health of the gentler sex whenever their peculiar and delicate constitutions require a mild and efficient laxative and tonic, and is invaluable in assisting to relieve obstructions which otherwise would lead to more or less severe pain or illness.
It improves the complexion, brightens the eyes, sharpens the appetite, quickens the circulation, removes muddy and blotched condition of the skin and cures sick headache to a certainty by removing the cause.
To women suffering from chronic constipation, headaches, biliousness, dizziness, sallowness of the skin and dyspepsia, Laxakola will invariably bring relief. At druggists, 25c. and 50c., or send for free sample to THE LAXAKOLA CO., 132 Nassau Street, N. Y., or 356 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

THE BANKRUPTCY LAW.

Semiannual Report of Transactions Under Federal Act.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The summary of the semiannual report of the operation of the bankruptcy law for the period ending March 31, 1901, recently submitted to the attorney general by E. C. Brandenburg, in charge of bankruptcy matters in the department of justice, shows that during this period 9,516 voluntary petitions were filed as against 8,000 for the preceding six months, 12,120 for the six months ending March 31, 1900, 10,124 for the six months ending Sept. 30, 1899, and 9,052 for the six months ending March 31, 1899, thus showing no appreciable variation from the average number of petitions filed since the law went into operation, though it is over 2,600 less than for the corresponding period of last year. For the same period 1,076 petitions in involuntary bankruptcy were filed, this being slightly in excess of the average for the past two years and a half.

The report shows that a large percentage of those taking advantage of the voluntary feature of the law are old insolvents seeking this means of resuscitating themselves in the business world.

Mr. Brandenburg says that it may be safely said that with one or two exceptions, for which congress doubtless will make provision at an early date, the law is meeting almost universal approbation. As time passes its superiority over many of the state insolvency and assignment laws in reducing the expense of administration to a minimum with the resultant of maximum dividends, together with the disappearance of preferences, either through legal proceedings or fraud, he says, is redounding to the advantage of the business world.

BIG GAME BAGGED.

Justice Jerome Captures Three In New York Poolroom Raid.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Society For the Prevention of Crime descended on an alleged poolroom at 36 Beaver street. Three prisoners were made from the 30 men in the room, and a lot of gambling apparatus was secured.

Justice Jerome, with Assistant Superintendent McClintock of the society, conducted the raid with detectives of the society and one policeman from the court of general sessions. Doors were broken down in order to get in and other barriers overcome. The room was on the second floor.

The prisoners were taken at once to the court of special sessions to be arraigned before Justice Jerome.

The justice stated later that it was the most gratifying and successful raid of any he had led. He intimated that he had caught one of the biggest of the gambling fraternity in New York. When asked to say who and what the man was, the justice refused, saying:

"I will not malign any public official."

About Aguinaldo.

NEW YORK, June 8.—General Frederick Dent Grant was given a reception last night by the U. S. Grant post, No. 327, G. A. R. In a brief address General Grant said: "Aguinaldo was not as much of a capture in the Philippines as he seems to have been here. To tell the truth, he had lost about all his influence. We do not treat him as if we considered him of some importance. We cannot kill him, of course, but we want to make him feel that he stands on the same footing with any other Filipino. If we should fine him $10 and send him to jail for 30 days and set him to breaking rock, it would be better for him and for ourselves. If when he comes over here we treat him with contempt, he will be treated with contempt by the natives when he goes home, but if over there they get the idea we have a high idea of Aguinaldo's importance when he gets back he will have a following which may make us trouble."

Naval Cadets Graduate.

ANNAPOLIS, June 8.—Rain interfered with the pomp of the graduation of the naval cadets and made it necessary to hold the ceremonies in the chapel instead of on the grounds, as planned. Chaplain Clarke made the opening invocation. Commander Wainwright spoke well of the graduating class. General Edward S. Bragg of Wisconsin addressed the graduates. Assistant Secretary Hackett of the navy presented the diplomas. Before the presentation he delivered to the cadets the good wishes of the president and the secretary of the navy. The six star members of the class were given their diplomas according to the order in which they stand, Cadets Furer, Fogarty, Conway, King, Henry and Yates. After that the diplomas were presented with regard to scholastic standing.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 8.—Governor William J. Sanford, who is ill at Tuscaloosa, is resting easy, but his condition continues to be very serious, and his family is at his bedside. He is suffering from enlargement of the heart and at times has great difficulty in getting his breath. Close friends of the governor are said to be very apprehensive that he will not recover.

Tin Plate Company to Enlarge.

JOLIET, Ills., June 8.—It is unofficially announced that the American Tin Plate company, which has four mill plants here, will enlarge its works to 16 or 20 mill plants, establishing a business that will employ 1,500 men and have a pay roll of $15,000 weekly. The American is part of the United States Steel corporation, which owns steel and wire mills here and the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad. The new plant, if built, will be on this road.

CUBANS ARE BLAMED

Delegates Accused of Betraying Confidence.

WASHINGTON OFFICIALS INDIGNANT.

Secretary Root Placed In an Unpleasant Position by Publication of a Letter Marked "Confidential."

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Accusations of a betrayal of confidence are made by officers here against the delegates of the Cuban constitutional convention who came to Washington as a special commission for the purpose of discussing the Platt amendment. It is shown by official papers that the delegates failed in nearly every particular to keep faith with the administration in reference to the explanations made by the secretary of war.

In the first place the secretary of war made the positive statement to the commission that he had no authority whatever to change the Platt amendment. He could only explain to them his personal understanding of its terms as a preliminary step toward its acceptance. No explanation was made for the purpose of having it reduced to writing, and all efforts on the part of the commission to secure written interpretations from Secretary Root were discouraged. The interviews were to be regarded as strictly confidential by both parties, the delegates agreeing to observe this understanding.

What is regarded, however, as the most flagrant breach of faith is charged against Senor Capote, president of the convention. The delegates begged Secretary Root for some statement in writing, but he persistently refused to grant their request. They tried in many ways to secure by deception some declaration that could be used as official, but in the presence of ex-Attorney General Griggs the secretary of war declared emphatically that whatever he might say must not be regarded as in any way altering the Platt amendment or changing its meaning, nor must his explanations be regarded as coming from the American government. He did, however, consent to let Senor Capote have a copy of a letter from Senator Platt of Connecticut stating briefly his views in regard to the amendment.

Senor Capote promised that the letter would not be used officially, but would be regarded as strictly personal and confidential. To insure such an understanding the secretary of war wrote on its face the words "personal and confidential." The wrath of the officers was aroused when a copy of Senator Platt's letter was found in a well known Cuban paper as a part of a report by the commission on the subject of its visit. This was but one incident, however, in the tale of alleged false dealing.

Convention to Meet Monday.

HAVANA, June 8.—The Cuban constitutional convention will hold a meeting next Monday to discuss the instructions received from Washington regarding the Platt amendment. The 15 delegates who voted in favor of the amendment have held several meetings and are unanimous in thinking that the amendment must be accepted in a manner satisfactory to the United States government, and they are determined to force the radical element to accept the amendment under a threat of dissolving the convention. The radicals strongly oppose dissolution, and some of the extremists admitted that it would be better to comply with the Washington instructions.

Good Pay For Pickling a Leg.

CONCORD, N. H., June 8.—A novel lawsuit was heard in the superior court yesterday, wherein a jury gave a verdict of $1,979.16 to a druggist for preserving in alcohol the amputated limb of a once prominent man. In 1887 John H. Pearson, a millionaire railroad manager resident of this city, lost a leg by amputation. This member he preserved in alcohol and stored in a safe place in a local drug store. When Mr. Pearson died in 1899, the leg was by his direction taken from its jar and interred with the rest of his body. Shortly after A. Ferley Fitch, the local druggist who had cared for the leg, sent to the trustees of the estate a bill for $3,450 for services rendered in connection with the amputated limb. This bill the trustees refused to pay, and Mr. Fitch brought suit.

"Governor" Taft Soon.

WASHINGTON, June 8. — When Judge Taft of the Philippine commission becomes the head of the civil government in the Philippine Islands, he will have the title of governor. While it is expected that he will become governor of the Philippines about July 1, there may be some delay, as the civil governmental machinery may not be ready at that date. Both Judge Taft and General MacArthur have informed the secretary of war that July 1 was as early as the proposed civil government could be put in operation, and as neither have made any modification of their views it is presumed that they still are of that opinion.

Paying the Hawaiian Debt.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Mr. W. W. Ludlow, one of the treasury officials who went to Honolulu in company with W. F. MacLennan, chief of the warrant and bookkeeping division, to pay off the public debt of the Hawaiian Islands, has returned to this city. Payments were begun on May 7, and on May 23 $2,135,000 had been paid off in Honolulu and about $900,000 in San Francisco, leaving about $120,000 yet to be paid in Honolulu and about $1,000,000 of the debt which is held in London. The London holders will be paid Jan. 1, 1902.

To Welcome Waldersee.

BERLIN, June 8.—Emperor William it is understood, has given orders that Count von Waldersee shall be received on his return from China with unusual eclat. The military and naval attaches of the various embassies and legations, including the American, intend to join officially in the reception if their governments authorize them to do so. Countess von Waldersee has received a telegram from her husband telling her to expect him about the end of July.

A Fine Showing.

For the first time since the cadet battalion at the Plainfield High School was formed, the year's work of the organization closed with a competitive and exhibition drill. Owing to the lack of room in Washington Hall, where the cadets have been drilling, only the girls of the High School and a few invited guests were enabled to watch the maneuvres of the school boys.

The showing made by the battalion was particularly good. Considering the fact that the High School boys have but an hour a week and that many of them were entirely new to the work last fall, the exhibition of yesterday morning was deserving of unstinted praise. The careful, conscientious work done by the smaller boys was particularly noticeable. All the cadets took an interest in the drill and their work was of uniform excellence.

The drill showed the remarkable development of that feature of the High School life since it has been under the control of Albert B. Meredith, assistant principal of the school. It also demonstrated that much good is to be gained from the introduction to a moderate extent of instruction in military tactics in the High School. The smart, erect bearing of many of the young men and the excellence of the discipline maintained were evidences of it.

There is no doubt but that an increased interest in the cadet battalion, both among the boys of the High School and their friends outside, will be the result of this first semi-public exhibition of their work. The offering of the two prizes by Charles E. Brooks and Alex. Gilbert, of this city, gave added interest to the drill. While it would have been possible without them, they certainly tended greatly to make the affair the success it was. It is to be hoped that prizes of that nature will be made a yearly feature at the High School and that the High School boys will thus be encouraged to perfect the efficiency of their battalion. Another year will probably see the drill where more of the public may witness it.

Notice the difference between Plainfield and Somerville. It took Somerville over a decade after a militia company was organized in that town before a movement for an armory for the company was fairly under way. Plainfield's militia company has scarcely come into existence when there is immediate talk of an armory and steps are taken toward securing the desired end. Plainfield certainly lacks a proper place for its soldier boys to drill. It is a question, however, whether the movement will be able to gain the support at this time that it might under different circumstances. Much of the support will come from local business men and they are now beginning to feel the depression attendant on the big strike of the machinists. When the strikers are all at work again and business resumes its wonted activity, the project to build an armory in Plainfield is likely to win much support.

Several accidents have occurred of late to wheelmen who have collided with carriages. There is nothing strange in it, however, considering the great amount of reckless riding that is done these days. The only wonder is that more accidents have not occurred and that these have not had more serious results. There are many wheelmen in this city, notably the young men, who are riding about the streets with striking dieregard for their own lives and the lives of others. If they would only consent to ride a little slower and watch where they are going, there would be fewer accidents. The wheelman is entitled to the same rights as the occupant of any other vehicle but he is not a privileged character as some bicyclists seem to believe. Let there be a moderation in the speed and the danger zone will be greatly decreased.

The "drop in" socials at the Y. M. C. A., Saturday evenings, have become very pleasant features in the social life of that organization. While no elaborate programmes are given, some very pleasant evenings are passed by the young men who gather at these informal functions.

At last the troubles of the Newark Plank road have ended and that thoroughfare, which connects Newark with Jersey City, is opened once more to the public. It took considerable time, however, to reach a settlement of the troubles which caused its closing.

ONE OF A SERIES.

Large Audience Was Well Entertained at Bethel Chapel Last Evening.

An appreciative audience was entertained at Bethel chapel last evening by an excellent literary and musical programme, followed by an interesting debate. It was one of a series of similar affairs which are held in the chapel each month.

The programme rendered consisted of violin and piano selections, by Charles VanHorne and Miss Kate Lane; vocal selections, by Miss V. N. Erby; select reading, by Miss Anna Brodnax; recitation, "Woman's Rights," Miss Kate Lane; essay, "Importance of Bible Study," E. A. Lightfoot; essay, "The Progress of the Negro," Miss Ella Robinson.

The subject debated upon was "Should the Philippines be Allowed Separate Government?" The affirmative was ably defended by Dr. J. C. Anderson, while Rev. B. A. Miller spoke in the negative. The debate lasted for half an hour, during which many interesting facts were brought out. Dr. Anderson was thoroughly conversant with the subject and at the close the audience agreed with him that the Filipinos should govern themselves.

Wanted To Knock His Head Off.

Miss Anna Saunders was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, this morning, charged by Patrolman Vanderweg with calling him unappropriate names and threatening to knock his head off witht a bottle, because he objected to her riding her wheel without a lamp. The defendant denied riding the wheel, but admitted making the statements as she had provocation. The patrolman's story was corroborated by two witnesses and Miss Saunders was fined $3.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, June 8—Every night the boys and young men play ball on the road in front of A. G. Nelson's store. The are enough young men in New Market to organize a fine baseball team. It is hoped that they will do so in the near future.

Black birds are troubling the farmers a good deal this year. They go in the field and destroy corn despite all the scare crows put up.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence.)

Scotch Plains, June 8.—A number of New York capitalists have purchased the copper mine property known as the John Gault estate, and are having the wood thereon cut up into railroad ties and are shipping them away to New York. Years ago the mine on the property was worked by an old English company, but from lack of knowledge of mining methods and crude machinery the mine did not pan out well. The Guaranty Title and Trust Company has been the executor of the estate and Joseph T. Vail, of Plainfield, recently succeeded in selling the property.

It is to be regretted that the Y. M. C. A. building, which was fitted up by Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, is allowed to stand idle. Not since Rev. Mr. Breaker was pastor of the Baptist church has the building been used to any extent. It is well adapted for Y. M. C. A. work and in view of the interest taken in the work by Dr. Coles it seems that the young men of the town should also become interested.

The children from the Murray Hill public school, in charge of Principal Carpenter, spent yesterday at Washington Rock, where they had an enjoyable time, despite the rain. Fred K. Clark took the children to the rock and brought them back in William Hand's large stage. It was nearly five o'clock in the afternoon when the party returned, and all voted that they had thoroughly enjoyed themselves

Children's Day exercises will be held at the Methodist church tomorrow evening, consisting of special music, recitations and responsive readings. The Sunday-school, under the direction of Pastor Beacom, will be in charge and the service promises to be an interesting one. The last rehearsal will be held this evening.

Charles Sheelen, who recently resigned his position as coachman for Mrs. Warren Ackerman, intends leaving town in a short time.

Wm. Klemser, of Murray Hill, who has been critically ill, does not improve and fears are entertained for his recovery.

The regular baseball team has arranged to play a game next Saturday with the Foreat Hill team at Forest Hill.

Principal John Morey, of the public schools, was called out of town yesterday on important business.

Nothing but routine business was transacted at the Township Committee meeting last evening.

Delightful Reception.

Mrs. Anna E. Case, of Church street, gave a delightful reception at her home Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Case's little daughter, Miss Ella Case, afforded much entertainment by her clever recital of a number of selections exhibiting ample evidence of natural elocutionary talent. She is a pupil of Miss Addie Parker Jackson. Dainty refreshments were served. There were twenty guests present to enjoy the affair.

One who has watched on a stormy night and seen the full moon burst suddenly from an unlooked-for rift, transfiguring everything, filling all nature with life, grandeur and wonderful beauty, may understand, perhaps, the effect of that immaterial message coming into the troubled heart of Robert Stanton. But he who has watched longer, till black clouds filled the break, and with a sigh, a groan, nature sank back again into the stormy night more desolate even for the glorious glimpse, may feel, in analogy, the overwhelming force of the realization which followed, that the moon which shone with such refreshment for a moment was even then hidden by the black waves of the Atlantic, and that every fleeting sound was bearing her farther and farther away, to set beyond the clouds, beyond the possibility of even one more passing glimpse.

The memory of one week before came back to haunt him as night gathered. Involuntarily he was living it all over again. Step by step he seemed forced to follow it, and every step was bereft of all but bitterness—bitterness and utter loneliness.

Even the discovery that it had been such strength and comfort to him to know that she was as near as Brooklyn filled him with dismay. The wild, uncontrollable, almost incoherent ramblings of his mind startled him. His plans were methodically laid for his departure the following day, but inaction was unendurable. It was very unlike John Olmstead's nephew, but it only made matters so much the worse that he fully realized the fact. In a struggle to escape he started that night for California.

By degrees the strange week sank into something like the memory of an ugly dream. Often he seemed to himself to be still dreaming. As the train rumbled on he sometimes tried to rouse himself, with a vague sense that if he succeeded he should discover that it was only a dream. Yet as often as he made the attempt he shuddered lest he might succeed; for in it there was something more real than reality as he knew it, and even at that moment he would not have had it all a dream.

The man on one side of the two-line advertisement and the man on the other side were two painfully distinct and different creatures. The change was not agreeable. It resulted in no end of misery, and nothing else; yet in the midst of the misery there was something so agreeable and beautiful that nothing in the old life could compare with it.

If the turning of his hand would have taken him back again to the time before that advertisement appeared, he would not have turned his hand.

If he could only have understood himself it would have been very different. But he did not understand. However much or little Robert Stanton knew, he certainly did not know that the new sentiment possessing him was love.

CHAPTER VII.

Now Thaddeus Braddon, the rejected lover of Stanton's mother, and John Olmstead's best friend, was a very rich man in the far west, even when Mary Olmstead married her farmer; and he kept on piling up a fortune there till 1870.

He lived chiefly with a married sister, the wife of the famous Capt. Thorndike, in Albecco. He was living with his sister when the daring captain was shot, on the plains, in 1868.

If ever a woman died of a broken heart, it was Capt. Thorndike's wife. If ever an orphan girl was well disposed of, it was Capt. Thorndike's baby Esther when the dying mother consigned her to the care of her brother Thaddeus.

He knew very well that he ought to have a wife to help him along with the baby; but that was one step he would not have taken if all the orphans in the world had been left on his hands.

As a girl, as a maiden, as another's wife, and now over in the spirit land, he had loved one and only one, and he proposed to continue to the end. In default of this, however, he lavished every thought and precaution possible upon his niece.

She called him "Papa" from the first lisping words she spoke, and loved him even more, perhaps, than she could have loved a natural father and mother combined.

No legal steps were ever taken. Thaddeus Braddon was prone to be a law unto himself. He simply accepted her as his daughter, and that settled it. There was no attempt at concealment, but the world at large soon forgot that she was not actually his daughter, and by the time they came east again and settled in Brooklyn they had very nearly forgotten it themselves. To her best friends she was Esther. To everyone else she was simply Miss Braddon, daughter of Braddon, of Braddon & Burridge, one of the strongest banking houses of New York.

Braddon started the bank, originally, simply as an occupation for an active mind, but it soon became one of the most important factors of Wall street. To him that had was given, and Braddon's wealth and influence constantly increased.

Esther developed into one of the rare and beautiful victories which the east and west combined have sometimes won, and took a position in society fully up to her proud father's ideal.

She was so important in her home and so enthusiastic in reform and philanthropic societies that she might never have thought of marrying at all had not her father occasionally dropped some suggestion about the necessity of some one to lift the cares of home and business gradually from his aging shoulders.

He spoke carelessly, at the best, with a vague thought, in a general way, of John Olmstead's nephew; but his words made such an impression on his loving daughter that in time she came to consider the selection of a husband as the most imperative necessity of her life.

Under such circumstances the selection was no easy matter. Human nature repelled her from each offer as it would not have done had she been free. She had become vindictive with herself for being so critical and keeping her father so long without the helping hand which he had asked her to provide, when, by the luck which seems to follow some men, Richard Raymond appeared upon the scene.

He came out of the west to watch the last months of that time-limit safely expire. He smelled the bait of wealth behind the heiress, and for incidental occupation he plotted what he or anyone would doubtless have pronounced a fated game.

He had nothing to lose, and, with the barest possibility, why should he not have ventured? It was beyond doubt that this time he was free to take a wife, and it was a game at which he was well trained. Nevertheless it is quite probable that Richard Raymond was the most surprised of any when he found himself accepted and the prospective heir to Thaddeus Braddon's wealth, to add to what now amounted almost to the certainty of John Olmstead's millions.

Miss Braddon was not a little surprised, herself, and not especially well satisfied. It had been a rather desperate leap with her eyes shut. The gallantry, intelligence and tincture of the west about the man pleased her. The rest was a sacrifice for her father.

To Braddon it was a thoroughly disagreeable surprise. He could read men too well to be deceived, though he tried hard to convince himself that it was only prejudice.

"It's all an old man's jealousy," he frequently said to himself. "If Esther loves him, what right have I to stand in her way with any of my whims?"

He knew better than to hint at this distrust to Esther, and silently sacrificed his own wishes to hers.

All three would have been doubly surprised had the reality of each heart been readable.

In the secret of his closet Braddon berated himself mercilessly that the right man had not been introduced.

"It's all my fault, yes, all of it," he muttered; for he and John Olmstead had instantly renewed their boyhood friendship. They were like school chums again for awhile, and only they two knew why it was that after Robert returned from college Braddon never entered Olmstead's house again till he came to the funeral.

"I couldn't stand it, Jack. I'd make a fool of myself if I met him. He's the very picture of his mother," Braddon said, and Olmstead understood. The result was that Stanton knew Thaddeus Braddon only as everyone else knew the brilliant, white-haired financier, as "Braddon of Braddon & Burridge," and had never spoken to him.

The old man knew the young lawyer through and through, however. He had sacrificed a lifetime to his love for the boy's mother, and the boy was as like her as two drops of water from the same spring. His interest in him was something phenomenal, and when Stanton began his rapid strides towards fame there was no mortal half so proud of him as Braddon of Braddon & Burridge.

When alone with Esther he sometimes dropped a word about John Olmstead's nephew, and for long she knew him by no other name. He did it with studied carelessness, but in woman's eyes there is a microscopic lens for mental and sentimental work passing all understanding.

PARK AVE. AND RAILROAD

My little girl, eleven years old, has had all her life a very serious and stubborn constipation. I had given everything I could think of, and still once in about two or three weeks she would wake at night crying painfully with pain, and for two or three hours would suffer intensely until finally relieved by frequent enemas. All this was very wearing. My brother insisted I should try Ripans Tabules and finally he got them for me. I tried them, giving her two every night for a while, then two every other night, then she took them herself when she felt like it. It is now about three months since she has had any trouble, and her bowels are in a very healthy condition. Her color is good and she is gaining flesh. As I have given her no other medicine I ascribe her improved condition wholly to Ripans Tabules.

What Ripans is. A cure of bad health in a box. RIPANS will not relapse. They banish pain and prolong life. The ... RIPANS. ... Recommended by the Ripans Institute. RIPANS ... testimonials will be mailed to ... address of Druggists for Marked to the Ripans Chemical Co., ... New York.

A Convenient Kitchen

"AND the kitchen?" I asked. My friend had been showing me all over her house.

"The kitchen? Oh, well, it's just like all other kitchens—uninteresting," she answered. And that is where she made a great mistake. The kitchen should not be uninteresting. It is not so to the good housekeeper. She takes more pride in its perfect appointments than she does in those of any other room in the house. Two results are inevitable—one, well cooked meals; the other, a contented servant, and, as a contented servant stays years in the same family, this is a result worth striving for. No servant likes to work in a place where nothing is convenient. "'Deed I's done hustle from mawning till night, and dis ole place, hit jes' won't stay fixed!" my old colored servant complained after we had moved into our new house. I was astonished because the new kitchen is much larger than the old. Upon investigating, however, I found that no definite place had been provided for anything and that the cupboard and chest of drawers had been placed where they were most inconvenient to reach.

I first turned my attention to the sink. The space under it had been utilized for a closet, which was filled with a motley collection of old rags, blacking bottles, etc. I had the entire wooden structure torn away, leaving an open space where the sunlight and air could penetrate freely. The pipes were then painted the same color as the walls—a serviceable and cool shade of grayish green. Next I sent for a carpenter, and he built four cupboards. One he placed over the sink. Its shelves held ammonia, soap, washing soda, rubbing cloths, etc. The next two were over the stove. One contained pepper, salt, sugar, herbs, soup flavorings, etc., and the other the smaller utensils used in the actual cooking, such as basting fork and spoon, skewers and strainers. The fourth cupboard held the finer cooking dishes—the porcelain ware, for instance. Of course the commoner kitchen pots and pans found room in the lower half of the general closet, and the kitchen china, which was of the heavy blue and white kind, was placed in the upper half of the original cupboard, which had been fitted with a glass door. The lower half held the kitchen linen.

As it happened, the sink was placed right in the corner next to the pantry. I had a small window made in the partition so that the maid could pass the dishes through as soon as they were washed. This saves her many weary steps. A draining board was also fitted between the sink and this window. The pantry had been generously treated in the matter of closets, so there was little which could be improved. However, I placed there a duplicate of many of the commoner baking utensils, which was again a saving of time and steps. These little things count greatly in the long end. Right under the kitchen window, where the sun fell upon it, I placed a rack for wet cloths. Fresh air and sunshine are the two best disinfectants. It is a rule in my kitchen that the sink cloths shall never be allowed to hang over the faucets or to dry in dark corners.

In conclusion I want to say that my kitchen is considered a joy to the eye as well as a model of convenience. The sunlight streams through the blue and white sash curtains and dances over the spotless hard wood floor. A pot of red geraniums lends color to the smaller window, and a plump white cat dozes comfortably on the little blue and white rug in front of the table. In one corner stands a comfortable wicker rocker, where Debby can rest while she watches her baking.

Why shouldn't we consider the comfort of our servants when they work hard for us all day long?

HELEN CLIFTON.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

May Failures Unusually Small—Pig Iron Extremely Dull.

NEW YORK, June 8.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Commercial failures during May were 873 in number and $7,996,423 in amount, of which 207 were in manufacturing for $2,393,726, while in other commercial lines there were 57 defaults for $2,095,731. Banking failures were ten in number and $800,130 in amount. In the same month last year there were 947 bankruptcies, and liabilities aggregated $23,771,151. Even after deducting the one large brokerage failure last year, which provided 55 per cent of the liabilities, the total indebtedness was $2,780,728, or about a third larger than in May, 1901.

Pig iron is extremely dull, not a sale of Bessemer being reported during the week at Pittsburg, and quotations are nominal. Large contracts for rails sustain billets, and finished steel deliveries continue heavy. Shipments of farm machinery attract much attention, while bridge building, new vessels and track elevation prevent dullness in structural material.

Efforts to secure advances in grain by exaggerated reports of damage to the growing crop have given place to more rational statements, and the outlook is generally conceded to be full of promise. Speculative operations for a decline, however, are far from aggressive, the severe losses of the short interest thus far this season making traders extremely cautious.

A slight flurry in July wheat at Chicago caused hasty covering and a sharp advance, which was of short duration, as moderate profits were quickly taken. Abundant production in the United States does not necessarily mean weak prices, for European crops are falling below expectations, and foreign purchases continue heavy.

Shipments of boots and shoes from Boston continue very large, for the last week exceeding the same week of 1900 by 20,000 cases, and since the year opened forwardings have been over 2,000,000 cases, far surpassing any previous record.

Railway Charters For Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—Congressman Robert Foerderer, accompanied by several others, who are believed to be interested in the incorporation of new railway companies under the acts of the general assembly passed this week, have gone to Harrisburg. It is said on good authority that the governor will today sign both the Focht bill providing for the incorporation of underground and elevated railways and the Emery bill amending the present railway laws and that Mr. Foerderer will immediately take out five charters. The names of the new companies will be the Northern Rapid Transit company, Eastern Rapid Transit company, Western Rapid Transit company, Southern Rapid Transit company and the Central Rapid Transit company. Each company will be separate and distinct from the other. The total mileage of streets which the five companies will cover aggregate 120 miles, and the capitalization will be $100,000 a mile, or $12,000,000 for the five companies.

Canada Urged to Prepare For War.

HALIFAX, June 8.—In the course of an article headed "Defenseless Canada" The Chronicle says: What we need in the Dominion is a population taught to shoot, to ride and to march and instructed in the rudiments of military drill and maneuvering. We have a few volunteer battalions, upon whose uniforms we expend most of our money, who can keep step with one another more or less indifferently and go through a few evolutions such as were useful at Waterloo, but not a battalion which in its present form is fit for a civil service of any effective sort. The South African war has made it clear that with sufficient arms and rudimentary training Canada under modern conditions might almost defend itself against the world. The time to prepare for war is during peace. The way to secure peace is to be prepared for war. God forbid that the sword should ever be drawn between us and our brethren of the United States, but while it is possible that it may we should be ready.

Assyrian May Be Floated.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 8.—According to the latest advices from the wreck, the discharging of the Assyrian continues, and the steamer Algerine is taking the cargo. The divers report as the result of their investigations during the afternoon that the rocks pierced the bottom of the ship. The water is gaining in the forehold, but the captain is more hopeful of refloating the Assyrian as the work of unloading the cargo proceeds. The wrecking tug Petrel, with powerful pumps, is due to arrive at the scene, when active work is likely to be begun.

A Strike Settled.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., June 8.—The machinists and blacksmiths at the Keystone Driller works at this place who struck ten days ago for nine hours' work and ten hours' pay are at work again, a compromise having been effected with the firm by which the men work 9½ hours and get 10 hours' pay.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The regular baseball team has arranged a game for today with the Clinton avenue team of Plainfield. It will be played on the Westervelt avenue grounds.

The St. Mary ball team will have as opponents, today, the Clayborne A. C., of New York. It will be played on the Fourth street grounds, commencing at 3:30. It will be the first regular game the local team has played in several weeks.

On account of the rainy weather the game between the Pingry High School and Leal's School nine, scheduled to take place on Pittis' field yesterday afternoon, was postponed. The Elizabeth team came to this city prepared to play, but under the conditions it was impossible to do so.

The Athletic Association of Leal's School met yesterday afternoon and elected a captain for next season's baseball team. Vaughn McGee, the star centre fielder on the nine, was chosen. The new captain has distinguished himself by good all around work during the season just closed and it is safe to say that he will answer the requirements of the position alloted to him.

In the National League baseball game Thursday, between Brooklyn and Pittsburg, William Keeler, of the Brooklyn's, played third base, and it was mainly through his playing that his team won the game. Keeler has always played in the field since he has been in the big league, although prior to that time when he played on the Crescent team his position was shortstop and third base, and it was in these positions he won much of his reputation. A photograph of him appears in yesterday morning's New York Tribune.

GOLF.

The first play for the Mellick cup, women's handicap competition, took place this morning on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course. The competition was on the point system.

There will be general play today on the course at the Westfield Golf Club, and no doubt many will visit the course Sunday. The recent pleasant weather has improved the greens very much.

Undoubtedly a number of Hillside members will play today under reduced handicaps. The contestants have been playing good golf and with fat handicaps, have been able to make good net scores. In a short time the committee will be able to determine the proper handicap for each player and no further changes will be made.

The only event scheduled for the Hillside course this afternoon is the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup. The contest is now very close and as the committee has reduced the handicap of Mrs. Rogers to 15, much interest will be manifested in her play today. She still leads in the contest, with several members tied for second place with three points each.

ENDING OF CELEBRATION.

CONCLUDING SERVICES HELD AT MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH.

In Honor Of Third Year Of Pastorate Of Rev. E E. Jackson—Several Addresses Made.

The exercises commemorative of the third anniversary of Rev. E. E. Jackson, as pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, closed last evening. The attendance was the largest of the week. The programme was in charge of the Baptist Young People's Union. The members of the colored Y. M. C. A. were present in a body. The music was in charge of the Columbia Orchestra, under the direction of Harry Kingslow and Harry Mitchell, and a very acceptable programme was rendered.

The opening exercises were conducted by Rev T. N. Burton, after which there was a short address by the superintendent of the Sunday-school, M. C. Dobbins. He spoke words of commendation concerning the pastorate of Mr. Jackson and complimented him for his earnest labor and said that it was gratifying to all that during his pastorate harmony had prevailed and the members and friends of the church had the greatest respect for the pastor. He brought greetings from the Sunday-school to the pastor and said he hoped the work would continue successfully.

Rev. Dr. A. S. Young, of New Brunswick, was the next speaker, and he paid glowing tribute to Pastor Jackson, whom he characterized as a "Booker T. Washington" among his people. This was followed with an address of welcome from the various departments of the church by Miss Maude Green. The last speaker was Rev. James Brooks, president of the Y. M. C. A., who urged the young men to greater effort in leading Christian lives. At the close of the exercises all retired to the basement where refreshments were served.

Scrappers in Court.

Peter Fleming, William Drake and Michael Mottley, three of the four young men who engaged in a fistic encounter on Park avenue, last Monday night, were fined $3 each in the city court this morning. Harry Molleson, the remaining member of the quartette told a straightforward story, and was allowed to depart with a suspended sentence.

Arranging For Excursion.

The teachers of the First Baptist Sunday-school met Thursday evening and perfected arrangements for the Sunday-school excursion to be held July 12. Several amendments to the constitution of the teachers' organization were adopted.

GREAT PROGRAMME OF OUTDOOR SPORT MARKED FINEST SATURDAY OF SEASON.

Interesting Events At Both Local Golf Clubs Attracted Large Crowds Of Players—Courses In Fine Condition.

GOOD TROTTING AT GENTLEMEN'S DRIVING PARK.

ST. MARY'S NINE WON EASILY WHILE HOPE CHAPEL WAS SIMPLY SWAMPED AT GARWOOD.

Great Game At Scotch Plains—Honors At Hillside Won By Miss Margaret Goddard And Dr. F. C. Ard—Chas. B. Morse Won First at Park Club—Weather Was Delightful.

The delightful weather of Saturday gave the lovers of outdoor sport plenty of opportunity to enjoy their favorite games. The day at both of the local golf clubs was marked by the largest attendance of a Saturday this season while both courses were in particularly fine condition. A number of competitions furnished plenty of entertainment for the local golfers. While the school baseball teams have ended their season, both the Hope Chapel and St. Mary's teams played games Saturday afternoon. The Hope boys were swamped at Garwood 22 to 1. St. Mary's had an easy thing with the Clayborne A. C, of Brooklyn, defeating them 30 to 14. Then there were baseball games of minor importance. The day was also marked by a successful afternoon at the Gentlemen's Driving Park.

BIG DAY AT HILLSIDE CLUB.

Three Events Served to Attract a Large Number of Entries to That Course.

The members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club turned out in large numbers Saturday to take part in the various events scheduled for that day. It was a great day for the popular game and the largest attendance of the season was recorded. Although the wind was a trifle strong, it was an ideal day for golf and those on the course thoroughly enjoyed the sport. The recent fine weather improved the course much and made low scores possible, even on the part of those who are classed among the novices.

In the morning there was the initial play for the Mellick cup, women's handicap competition, which will hereafter be a feature every Saturday morning. This competition is conducted on the point system, and while the entry list Saturday was not large there is sure to be a lively interest and many competitors before the season is concluded. Miss Margaret Goddard won the first play with a net score of 103, while Miss vanHerwerden and Miss Adelaide Ball tied for second honors with a net score of 114. The standing for this cup now stands as follows:

	Points.
Miss Margaret Goddard	3
Miss vanHerwerden	1½
Miss Adelaide Ball	1½

The scores turned in for the Mellick cup follow:

	Gross	Han'p	Net
Miss Margaret Goddard	115	12	103
Miss vanHerwerden	114	0	114
Miss AdelaideBall	124	10	114
Miss Fleming	129	10	119
Miss M. VanBoskerck	122	2	120
Miss May Evans	133	9	124
Miss E. C. Hebert	168	25	143

Early in the afternoon a ball sweepstake was arranged among several members, the winner to take one-half of the number of balls deposited, the second and third one-quarter each. Dr. F. C. Ard won the event and received five as his share of the golf balls, while Roger F. Murray and Howard Wright each received three The scores made in the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup counted in the sweepstake play. There were ten contestants, as follows: Dr. F. C. Ard, Roger F. Murray, Howard deP. Wright, George T. Van Boskerck, Morris J. Dumont, Howard Huntington, D. S. Rowland, W. L. Glenny, C. A. King and Thomas R. Van Boskerck.

The next event, one in which the greatest interest centered, was the play for the Golf Committee cup. Recent happenings, by the way of reducing the handicap of Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers from 18 to 15, and the fact that she would play Saturday under her new handicap, served to make the event of unusual interest.

Mrs. Rogers did not commence to play until late, and it was a matter of much curiosity to all to see how she would fare under the new handicap. She had Dr. Endicott for a partner, and although she put up a good game, she did not beat her score of a week ago, which was 87, and she failed to get a point to add to the six now to her credit. There were eight contestants that finished ahead of her.

Dr. Ard was the winner of the event with a net score of 79, this being the winning score a week ago, when C. C. Burke, Jr., made it with a handicap of 27, which has since been reduced to 24. Dr. Ard's handicap was 8 and, considering the conditions, the score is considered an excellent one. This places the doctor in the race for the first time with three points to his credit, and he is tie with Townsend Rushmore, Howard C. Tracy, C. C. Burke, Jr., for second place, with Mrs. Rogers leading with six points. J. W. Sandford, who finished second, with a net score of 82, and Roger F. Murray, who tied with Howard Wright for third honors, with a net score of 83, also secure positions in the race for the first time. The standing for the cup at present is as follows:

Mrs. N. P. Rogers	6
Townsend Rushmore	3
Howard C. Tracy	3
C. C Burke, Jr	3
F. C. Ard	3
W. L Glenny	2½
J. W Sandford, Jr	2

HONORS AT PARK GOLF CLUB.

Carried Off By Players Who Have Not Scored Heretofore For The President's Cup.

Three new candidates for honors captured the three leading places in the weekly competition for the President's cup at the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon. But for a high wind, the day was an ideal one for golf and the course was in excellent condition. There were, however, no remarkably low scores made. No change of importance was made in the standing of the competitors for the President's cup.

The low net score for the day was made by Charles B. Morse with the aid of a fat handicap. He made a 109 gross. The lowest gross score was 100, made by W. de la R Anderson, but his handicap was so small that it failed to land him better than seventh. Fred. P. Taylor scored 101 gross, while Morgen T. Townsend did not play. Second honors went to William R. Faber with 77 net. S. St. John McCutchen showed a decided improvement in his game and landed third honor, thanks to a handicap of 40. Samuel Townsend was only one stroke behind.

An exciting four ball match was played between Senator Charles A Reed and Fred P. Taylor, of the Park Golf Club, and "Swan" Hartwell and Jack Barcalow, of the Somerset County Country Club. The Park Club team won two up.

Charles W. McCutchen and Morgan T. Townsend still remain tied in the race for the President's cup. Senator Reed is third and Charles B. Morse is now tied for fourth with H. D. Hibbard and Allan B. Laing. Neither Faber nor McCutchen had scored any points before. The standing for the cup is now as follows:

Charles W. McCutchen	5
Morgan T. Townsend	5
Charles A. Reed	4½
H. D. Hibbard	3
Charles B. Morse	3
Allan B. Laing	3
Arthur H. Serrell	2½
William J. Buttfield	2
William R. Faber	2
Fred P. Taylor	1
S. St John McCutchen	1
W. de la R. Anderson	½
Herbert S. Rogers	½

The scores below the 100 mark turned in for the President's cup were as follows:

Charles B. Morse	109	34	75
William R Faber	113	36	77

DIDN'T TRY TO WIN GAME.

Clayborne A. C. Gave Up Making Any Effort to Beat St. Mary's After Fifth Inning.

In an uninteresting game on the Fourth street grounds Saturday afternoon the St. Mary's team defeated the Clayborne A. C., of New York by a score of 30 to 14. The visitors were much heavier than the local boys, but their playing was far below the average. At no time was there any chance of their winning, and at the end of the fifth inning they became discouraged and gave up trying. The basemen sat down while the fielders allowed balls to pass within a few feet without trying to stop them. The Clayborne pitcher was the easiest mark the St. Mary's team has had in some time, and he was batted all over the field.

On the St. Mary's side the playing was fair, although they had no chance to show what they were capable of. O'Keefe and Barry kept up their reputation, while a phenomenal catch by Madden on second and a difficult stop by Winn on first, were the most interesting parts of the entire game.

Following is the batting order:

St. Mary.	Clayborne A. C.
Mack, ss	Buth, cf
Angleman, cf	A Rickter, cf
Keene, 3b	Kircher, 2b
Winn, 1b	Weber, ss
Madden, 2b	Hogenam, 3b
Taylor, lf	O. Rickter, lf
Doyle, rf	Aronson, 1b
Barry, c	Cox, c
O'Keefe, p	Brill, p

Clayborne A. C...4 2 0 0 0 3 4 1 0—14
St. Mary.....6 3 2 0 5 5 1 8 0—30

Struck out—O'Keefe, 8; Brill, 7. Base on ball—O'Keefe, 5; Brill, 13; Safe hits—St. Mary, 11; C. A. C., 7. Two-base hits—St. Mary, 6; C. A. C., 2. Three-base hits—St. Mary, 2; C. A. C., 2. Double plays—Doyle and Winn; Barry, Keene and Madden.

HOPE CHAPEL BADLY BEATEN.

Garwood A. C. Simply Buried Plainfielders, While the Errors Couldn't be Kept by Scorer.

The Hope chapel baseball nine met with a Waterloo in the game with the Garwood A. C. team on the latter's diamond Saturday afternoon.

It was the poorest exhibition this season by the Plainfielders. The Garwood boys were in fine fettle and by their good work succeeded in shutting the Hope lads out until the ninth inning.

Hand was put in the box for the Plainfield team, but as eleven runs

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH AT LOCAL PARISHES.

Was Present At Holy Cross Church In Morning And Confirmed Twenty-two.

SPOKE TO CONGREGATION.

TWELVE CANDIDATES CONFIRMED AT ST. STEPHEN'S IN AFTERNOON.

Bishop Was At Grace Church In The Evening And There Received a Class Of Twenty-two—Also Preached a Sermon.

The Bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey, Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, yesterday made his annual visitation to the parishes of the Episcopal churhes in this city.

In the morning he attended the service at the Church of the Holy Cross and there preached the sermon and administered the rite of confirmation to twenty-two candidates presented by the rector, Rev. W. Montgomery Downey. During the service the rector called attention to the fact that the occasion of the Bishop's visitation marked the thirty-second anniversary of the organization of the parish.

Before commencing his sermon, the bishop congratulated the congregation on the growth of the parish, and paid a tribute to the pastor, who is looking after the spiritual welfare of the congregation, and predicted a bright future for the parish. He highly complimented the choir for its reverend bearing during the services.

Taking for his text Matthrew IV, 25: "And there followed Him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis and from Jersualem, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan"—the Bishop dwelt on the aim and need of the Church. After the confirmation he made a short address on the meaning of the vow which the candidates had taken upon themselves. During the offertory the vested choir sang as an anthem "He That Soweth Little, Shall Reap Little."

St. Stephen's, Netherwood, was visited in the afternoon. There twelve candidatas were confirmed. Instead of a sermon, the Bishop addressed the members of the parish. He praised the congregation for the good work being accomplished under the guidance of its rector, Rev. Stephen P. Simpson. The growth of the parish was also referred to by him. As usual the service was an exceeding impressive one.

Grace church was visited in the evening. The rector, Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, presented a class of twenty-two members for confirmation. The Bishop preached, taking for his text I Corinthians III, 13, 14

Before the sermon, the Bishop referred to the parish, which has prospered notably during the able pastrate of the present efficient rector. The customary address was made by the Bishop to those confirmed. "Remember Now Thy Creator" was the offertory anthem sung by the well trained vested choir. The service was choral.

Report of National Conference

A special meeting of the Organized Aid Association will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Tuesday evening, for the purpose of listening to an address from Miss VanBoskerck, who was the official representative of the association at the recent session of the national conference of charities and correction held at Washington during the second week of May. A motion will also be made to amend part of the constitution of the association relating to the time of meeting.

Entertained the Children.

Following an annual custom, the primary department of the Crescent Avenue church Sunday school was entertained Saturday afternoon by Superintendent Wm. D. Murray, at his home on Ninth street. There were nearly 125 children present, and Mr. Murray was assisted by Mrs. Murray and the teachers in entertaining them. The afternoon was enjoyably spent in playing all kinds of games.

Woman Jailed For Drunkenness.

Borough Recorder Thomas Doud gave a hearing to Mrs. Elizabeth O'Keefe, charged with drunkenness, Saturday evening. In default of paying a fine of $5, the woman is serving a sentence of five days in the borough lockup.

Opened Repair Shop.

JUDGE RUNYON HURT.

Slipped and Fell on Muddy Baseball Field—Strained Tendon in Left Leg.

City Judge Wm N. Runyon sustained a painful injury while acting as umpire in a baseball game at Garwood Saturday afternoon. The game was between the Hope chapel nine, in which the Judge takes much interest, and the Garwood A. C.

While umpiring bases Judge Runyon was following a runner, who was attempting to reach third base. In endeavoring to stop suddenly his left foot slid on the muddy field bending the knee joint backward instead of forward. He fell heavily with his face downward.

At first it was thought the injury was serious. As soon as the Judge could be moved he was carried to the trolley road with the intention of bringing him home in a car. Mrs. Pope, who was driving by at the time, kindly offered to drive him to Plainfield.

Dr. Endicott was subsequently summoned and he pronounced the injury to be a straining of the cords of the leg.

Judge Runyon went to Trenton this morning on crutches to take his oral examination as counselor-at-law.

GOOD MUSIC.

Large Crowds Attracted to Recreation Grounds Yesterday Afternoon and Evening.

Recreation Grounds, the new summer resort on the trolley line between this city and Westfield, was well patronized yesterday afternoon and evening, and those present were highly entertained by the excellent concerts which were features of the occasion. Manager Maze Edwards has now assumed personal charge and direction of affairs, and will use his best endeavors to merit patronage. There will be concerts daily at 2:30 and 8:30 o'clock. Admission to the grounds is free, but there is a small charge for admission to the pavillion wherein the concerts are given.

Dancing begins immediately after the evening concerts on week days, but no dancing is allowed Sundays. No liquor of any description is sold on the premises. All kinds of games and diversions can be enjoyed, and strict order is maintained. It is the intention of the management to make the place a first-class family resort, and from the well-known reputation of Mr. Edwards, visitors may be assured of perfect detail.

The National Turner Society members came over from Newark on their wheels.

LITTLE FOLK REIGNED AT THE CHURCHES WHILE FLOWERS WERE AT EVERY HAND.

Elaborate Children's Day Exercises Were Held At Most Of The Local Protestant Churches Yesterday.

MUSICAL SELECTIONS WERE IMPORTANT FEATURE.

LITTLE ONES OF PRIMARY DEPARTMENTS GAVE RECITATIONS AND READINGS AND SANG SONGS.

Most Of The Exercises Were Held In The Morning And All Were Well Attended—Out-of-Town Speakers At Several Of The Churches — Programmes At The Different Churches.

Yesterday was Children's Day and special exercises appropriate to the time were held at most of the protestant churches. As is the custom the little folk took the most prominent part in the exercises. There were flowers in profusion and the decorations were unusually elaborate. With many Sunday-schools the day marked the change of the hour of meeting from afternoon to morning. The delightful weather tended to attract many to the services and all were largely attended.

WARREN CHAPEL.

Appropriate addresses were the feature of the Children's Day exercises at Warren chapel yesterday afternoon. Including the pupils of the Sunday-school there were 450 persons present, and this number well taxed the seating capacity of the little chapel.

The pastor, Rev. J O McKelvey, spoke to the children on the text, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," particularly dwelling upon the duty of a young person doing good unto others. In the same strain, Eric Moraller, a member of the congregation, also made an address. Mr. Moraller explained the scope and intent of the divine command, "Suffer little children to come unto Me." Everyone, said he, is a child in the sight of God. Leander Lovell, of the Crescent Avenue church, former superintendent of the Sunday-school, offered prayer and also made a few remarks to the children of the primary department. He told the little ones that they had many years before them, and they should ever endeavor to shape their lives so that they would be acceptable unto God.

The remainder of the programme of the service was participated in largely by the pupils. The members of the Sunday-school sang among other hymns, "Tell the Blessed Story;" "Hosanna, Hosanna, the Children are Singing," and "Drive Away All Care and Sadness." "We Will Follow Thee" was sung by the little tots in the primary department. F. H. Andrews, the superintendent of the Sunday-school, though present, was unable to make an address on account of a severe cold.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH

The Children's Day service at Trinity Reformed church was held in the morning and the edifice was thronged with children and members of the church. The decorations consisted of daisies and other wild flowers. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor, was in charge of the opening exercises, after which Superintendent E. E. Anthony assumed charge of the children's exercises. In presenting the special service "The Summer Message," the children were under the direction of Mrs. J. M. Tier, who drilled them.

"The Message" was divided into several parts, almost entirely recitations. The introduction was given by Nettie Nischwitz, Helen Woolley, Clifford Cole, Emeline Manning, Morris Smith, Helen Leitheusser, Elsie Bodine, Harold Schenck, Ralph Martin, George Cole, Ella Case, Rowland Reighton, Nettie Robinson. The flowers were represented by Myra Dunavan, Helen Roberts, Gertrude Enander, Emily Templin, Grace Schuyler, Margaret Neal, Lulu Trewin, Margaret VanDeventer, Rosmun Rogers. The bird's message was given by Florence Wilson, Laura Bodine, Myra Dunavan, Bessie Schuyler, and the bee's message by Elsie Bodine, Harold Storr, Anna Vail, Elson Day, May Titus, Adelaide Cole, Anna Lee. Elsie Tier gave a short sermon, after which June and her friends were represented by Edna Cole, Ethel Vail, Gertrude Schleif, Lola Sutton, Jeanette Neal, Hermina Leitheusser. Edna Oliver gave the robin's advice, and the oak tree's message was given by Helen Smith. Two songs, "Little Blossom," and the offering song were given by the children.

During the service an impressive sight was witnessed when Pastor Schenck baptized twelve children. They were present with their parents and formed a circle in front of the pulpit platform. There was also special music during the service by the quartette choir under the direction of A. L. Titsworth, organist.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Children's Day exercises were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church in the Sunday-school room. There was a very large attendance of members and friends of the school. A programme entitled "The Good Shepherd, was presented. This consisted of attractive songs by the intermediate and primary departments and recitations.

The decorations, consisting of daisies, palms, potted plants, etc., contributed by the members, were arranged about the platform, and draped overhead were two large American flags. These flowers were afterwards distributed among the sick members of the church.

The programme was in charge of Mrs. J. A. Powlison, superintendent of the primary department. There were recitations by Lawrence French and a number of girls from the primary department, and another recitation by Jessie Clawson, of the intermediate department. The programme, while very simple, was interesting to all.

MONROE AVE. M. E. CHURCH.

The Children's Day programme at the Monroe Avenue church was rendered by the members of the primary department, assisted by several pupils from the main school. Miss Edith Schwartz made an address of welcome and afterward in company with Theodore Martin sang a duet. Recitations were given by Miss Jessie Jones and Miss Mabel Gilbert, an exercise by Gertie Gray, Jennie Gray, Clara Brown, Flossie Gilbert and Herbert Rittenhouse, another by Agnes Brower and Daisy Gilbert and anthems by the school. A short address was given by Superintendent Walter M. McGee and at the close, Pastor McMurray gave a talk on "Lessons From Flowers."

The decorations were very pretty and consisted of a bank of daisies in front of the pulpit, while palms, ferns and cut flowers were grouped about the ends.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Children's Day exercises at the Congregational church were held at the usual hour of morning service, 10:30. The members of the Sunday-school were seated together in the body of the church, the little folk of the primary department being in the immediate front.

The floral decorations were very

AT THE THEATRES.

Something About the Attractions Which Plainfield Theatre-Goers May Care to Witness.

Mr. Keith will endeavor to make his New York theatre at Union Square the "coolest place in town" this summer. This week the interior of the theatre donned its summer suit of draperies and furnishings. On the roof Mr. Keith has had placed the largest suction fan in New York city, and as the hot air rises and is sucked out through the dome, hundreds of small revolving electric fans will force iced air into the theatre from every direction. Every detail of the arrangement has been figured out by experts, and the patrons of the theatre will not be exposed to the danger of catching cold, as the direction of each air current has been gauged accurately. The theatre will prove a popular place to retreat from the piercing rays of the sun these hot summer afternoons.

FIVE WERE KILLED.

Wreck on the D., L. and W. Railway Caused Great Destruction.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 10.—Five men were killed and seven injured in the terrible wreck at Vestal. The dead are: John P. Kelly, head brakeman of wildcat train; S. R. Polhamus, conductor of train No. 61; Elmer Polhamus, trainman of train No. 61; John Coulter, fireman first engine of the wildcat freight. Fred Witherby, fireman second engine of wildcat freight.

Many of those who were at first thought to be fatally hurt recovered from the concussion and now figure in the list of slightly hurt.

All through the early morning hours the rescuers toiled about and among the burning freight cars at the scene of the explosion, but it was not until late yesterday afternoon that portions of the last dismembered body to be accounted for were discovered a quarter of a mile from where the explosion occurred, while the tracks of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad were completely blocked until far past midday. Both trains were completely wrecked, and the engines of the wildcat freight which ran into the rear of train No. 61, which was taking water at the time and which carried the fatal car of dynamite, were reduced to scrap iron, pieces of which have been picked up at a distance of half a mile away.

Aside from the damage to railroad property much minor damage is reported. Nearly every house in the villages of Vestal and Union, which is across the Susquehanna from the wreck, lost more or less of its window glass, while farmers' houses and barns near the scene were badly shattered. None of the inmates, however, was injured.

A Survivor's Story.

ELMIRA, N. Y., June 10.—The remains of the Elmira railroad men killed in the wreck on the Lackawanna railroad at Vestal, N. Y., have been brought here. John Lonergan, the engineer of the second engine of the wildcat train, says he noticed the train ahead and thought it was moving. The air to the brakes had to be applied from the head engine, but when this was done Lonergan, seeing that it was too late to avoid a collision, jumped from his engine and landed in a pool of water in a ditch at the foot of the embankment. A second later he saw a flash, which was followed by a terrific report, and for a time he lay partly stunned. As soon as he sufficiently recovered he assisted in the work of rescue until, overcome by weakness, he collapsed and was taken to the Binghamton hospital. One of his shoes was torn from his foot, and a nail from the shoe was driven into the foot. He was deaf for a time, and examination disclosed that one of his ear drums had been broken.

THOSE TROLLEY CHARTERS.

Five Granted Under the New Pennsylvania Law.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 10.—Five of the charters granted in Harrisburg Saturday under the new trolley acts are for companies which propose to operate electric street car lines in and about Scranton and Wilkesbarre.

Three of the companies will serve Scranton, another will network Wilkesbarre and have its trunk extending from Avoca to Nanticoke, and another will run from Nanticoke through Kingston to Pittston. The Scranton companies will have 70 miles of tracks, the Wilkesbarre company 54 miles and the Nanticoke-Pittston company 19 miles.

The five companies are capitalized at $800,000. Congressman William Connell is president of all and a director in each. The other directors are Theodore D. Connell and Dr. A. J. Connell of Scranton, George A. Lee of Philadelphia and State Senator Focht of Lewisburg.

Many of those interested in the new companies are identified with the big trunk line rapid transit road now in process of construction between Carbondale and Wilkesbarre. This latter road is to be 36 miles long and run over a private right of way when outside of the four cities it taps, Carbondale, Scranton, Pittston and Wilkesbarre. Iron bridges, rock ballast, double tracks and 40 ton Pullman cars will be used, and every hour it will run a car each way at the rate of 60 miles an hour.

Senator Quay, Attorney General Elkins, Congressman Connell, Senator Focht, State Treasurer Barnett and Representative Beacom are among the well known politicians interested in the trunk line. A party of Boston and Philadelphia capitalists are also interested.

A Heavy Stake List.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 10.—The stakes for the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Kentucky Breeders' Trotting association here in October closed with a heavy list of entries. Six hundred and forty-eight horses, comprising 473 entries, having been received. The Transylvania stakes received 20 subscriptions and, while the list of starters, to be named Sept. 17, is more of a mystery than usual, owing to the large proportion of nominators hitherto unknown, the famous stake will undoubtedly retain its position as the greatest annual trotting race of the all aged division.

Three Girls Drowned.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—A party of six persons, three men and three girls while sailing on the Delaware river off North Essington, a few miles below this city, were thrown into the water by the swamping of their skiff during a squall and the three girls were drowned. The party were guests of the Federal Boat club. Other members of the club heard the cries of the unfortunates and immediately set about rescuing them. The three men were quickly hauled into other boats but the girls sank before they could be reached.

A Mob In Belfast.

BELFAST, June 10.—A mob hooted the Corpus Christi procession of 8,000 persons here yesterday afternoon. Several rushes were made, and finally the police were compelled to charge the crowd, a number of persons being injured. Many were placed under arrest. The excitement continued for several hours.

American Locomotives Not Liked.

LONDON, June 10.—The Orleans railway, according to the Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail, is dissatisfied with American locomotives because they are "too costly, need too much repairing and are not adapted to French gradients."

The Thirty-first at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—The transport Hancock arrived from Manila last night, with 31 officers and 1,642 enlisted men of the Thirty-first volunteer infantry.

Condition of Mrs. McKinley Shows Slight Improvement.

CASE STILL ONE OF EXTREME GRAVITY

Use of Powerful Stimulants and Her Long Debilitating Illness Have Left the Patient Very Weak.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The slight improvement in Mrs. McKinley's health which manifested itself the latter part of the week continues, and hope begins to be felt that she may, after all, recover from the present attack. The improvement, however, is so slight as not to change materially the extreme gravity of the case.

The fact that Mrs. McKinley has more than held her own and that no unfavorable turn has occurred is considered in every way encouraging, but as this result is due partly to the constant use of powerful medicines the physicians fear the effect of reducing the stimulants and likewise have to cope with the effect on her system of the constant administration of the only means of prolonging her life and making ultimate recovery at least a possibility. These stimulants and the complaint from which she suffered in California, which is now under better control, have so weakened her powers of resistance that apprehension is ever present that a sinking spell may occur suddenly from which she cannot be rallied.

Dr. Rixey regularly makes three visits each day, one in the morning, when there is a consultation of physicians; another in the afternoon and a third in the evening. He called yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock, and, finding Mrs. McKinley comfortable and progressing as well as could be expected, he and the president went out for a long drive, lasting more than an hour and a half, both going to the sickroom at once upon returning. Subsequently the doctor said that no material change had occurred since the morning bulletin.

Mrs. McKinley will be taken to Canton whenever she is in condition to bear the journey. Extensive improvements have been made at the McKinley home in Canton, including the building of a porte cochere and the remodeling of portions of the house, and it was planned last autumn that she and the president should go to Canton about July 1 of this summer. In case Mrs. McKinley recovers this plan will be carried out, though it is not expected she would be strong enough to leave here the 1st of July, even if improvement should continue steadily.

Christian Endeavor Convention.

CINCINNATI, June 10.—Elaborate arrangements have been made for the twentieth international convention of the Christian Endeavor here July 6 to 10. As many were unable to attend the convention in London last year a larger attendance than usual is expected, especially since the conventions hereafter will be held only once in two years. The choir of 1,500 trained voices will be a feature at Music hall. Other large choruses have trained for the Exposition and other halls, while all the churches and their choirs have been engaged for the occasion. Bands will discourse sacred music in Washington park, adjoining Music hall, for the open air meetings. Governor Nash, Mayor Fleischmann and local committeemen will deliver welcoming addresses Saturday afternoon, July 6. Dr. Clark will deliver his annual address, and Secretary Baer will make his annual report Saturday evening.

To Cross the Atlantic Again.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., June 10.—In his 25 foot sloop, the Great Republic, Captain Howard Blackburn of this city yesterday afternoon started on his second transatlantic voyage, his present destination being Lisbon, Portugal, which he expects to reach in 45 days. His previous voyage, in 1899, was to London, which trip took 61 days. The start was made amid the plaudits of over 1,000 people, including Mayor W. A. French, ex-Commodore A. A. McCurdy and Captain Antoine Augusto, president of the Africa Relief association. He was presented with a beautiful silk pennant. Shortly after 2 o'clock the Great Republic, escorted by a large fleet of boats, started on her ocean voyage. She received a succession of salutes until she was nearly off Thatchers island, when the last of the escorts left her.

Body of a Man Found.

ANSONIA, Conn., June 10.—Two men gathering wood along the Power canal at an early hour yesterday morning discovered the dead body of William H. Moore, a prominent New Haven real estate man, and a two ounce bottle near by which had contained carbolic acid, indicating suicide. The spot where the body was found is but a stone's throw from South Cliff street, a fashionable part of the city, and the home of Moore's father who is a member of the Farrell Foundry and Machine company. Moore was formerly in the employ of that concern, but for seven years has been in business in New Haven. He leaves a widow and one child in that city. No reason can be learned either here or in New Haven for his act.

Small Hope For the Assyrian.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 10.—The outlook for the Leyland steamer Assyrian, which is ashore off Cape Race, is less favorable. A south wind is blowing and a dense fog increasing. Steamers lying near the wreck had to make for the offing, fearing damage. The coast folk however, kept on loading their skiffs until sundown, when they ceased for the night. Divers have been unloading the foreholds and taking out all the cargo The wrecking tug Petrel has arrived.

The Longest Cable.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The state department is in receipt of interesting information concerning work on the British Pacific telegraph cable which is to connect the Dominion of Canada with the Australian federation. The new cable is to be 5,834½ miles in length, the longest ever constructed, and will be transported and laid by one ship, now being built for that purpose.

Scandal Too Much For Thieves.

CHAMBERY, France, June 10.—An American named Constantin Scandal was robbed on the railway while asleep by three fellow travelers between Modane and St. Michel. Recognizing the thieves at Saint Jean de Maurienne, he pursued them across the country, and they jumped into the river Arc, where all were drowned.

THE BRITISH SCORED

Boer Minister Comes to America to Raise Relief Funds.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN BAD PLIGHT

Held In Detention Camps Established by English Troops—Dr. Brockhuizen Says the Afrikanders Will Not Be Conquered.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Rev. H. D. von Brockhuizen of Pretoria, South Africa, the minister who closed the volksraad with prayer after President Kruger's ultimatum had been read to that body, is in this city. His brother, Dr. H. J. von Brockhuizen of the Orange Free State, who served in the Boer army, accompanies him. Their mission in this country is to raise money for the Boer women and children now in refuge camps. Rev. Dr. von Brockhuizen said in an interview:

"Our women and children, who are at present concentrated in camps established by the British, are in a horrible condition. It was bad enough when I left South Africa, but I know from letters that I have received, one only the other day from my sister, that it is a hundred times worse now."

When the doctor left South Africa, he says he was virtually banished by order of General Maxwell, military governor of Pretoria. General Maxwell wrote him that he had better leave the country and provided a second cabin passage to Europe on the ground that inasmuch as he would not take the oath he was dangerous to the British cause.

Dr. von Brockhuizen said further of the camps:

"In an official report made by Dr. Ronald P. McKenzie of the British army on Feb. 18 of this year the British government is notified that the conditions are horrible, the death rate appalling and the food furnished wholly unfit to eat. Nothing I or any one else has ever said has been half as caustic as this arraignment of his own people by Dr. McKenzie."

The Afrikanders, Rev. Dr. von Brockhuizen avers, will never be overcome, and all reports to the contrary are false. The Boer army numbers 15,000 to 17,000 men and is constantly being augmented by Cape Colony Boers. The Boer forces are now armed with Lee-Metford rifles, he says, and they have tons of ammunition buried, which they can use at any time against the British.

The Stallion Hearing In a Grove.

GALENA, Mo., June 10.—An unusual scene is presented here at the preliminary hearing of Mrs. John Stallion, her father, James Crabtree, and his two sons, Frank and Charles Crabtree, for the murder of Alice Stallion, the woman's 16-year-old stepdaughter. The hearing is being held in a grove, the two justices sitting at a table under a tree, and 2,000 people, attracted from points for miles around, forming a circle about the court and defendants. Notwithstanding no overt act has as yet been attempted, threats have been made against the Crabtrees by many of the strangers in town, and the county officials are taking all the precaution at their command to protect the prisoners. Galena is off a railroad, and the fact that 2,000 people would care to come miles to attend the hearing is considered significant. It has been decided to exhume the body of the girl that it may be examined to investigate a theory of the county prosecutor that a criminal assault was made upon her by one or both of the Crabtree boys and that they killed her to hide the crime.

Chinese Reformer Arrested.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Su Shih Chin, against whose landing Minister Wu and Consul General Ho Yow had filed a protest on the ground that Su had obtained by fraud the passport and other credentials upon which he was allowed to land, has been arrested on an order from Washington and placed in detention at the Mail dock. Consul Ho Yow said that Su was landed as an accredited official of the Chinese empire when in fact he was one of the leaders of the revolutionary party which asserts that its purpose is to replace the Emperor Kwang Su on the throne. He obtained his passport by representing himself to be an official of the Chinese government. He must now prove his right to be landed as a tourist or a student.

The War Over Tubbs.

SALINA, Kan., June 10.—A committee representing the students of the Kansas Wesleyan university, who are a unit in defense of Dr. Frank D. Tubbs, professor of natural science, dismissed last week on account of alleged heresy, has issued a manifesto denouncing the board of trustees for "duplicity and unfairness." The board has agreed to allow Dr. Tubbs a hearing next week, but still positively refuses to reinstate him. The incoming junior and senior classes still seem determined to carry out their threat to leave the university if the trustees shall not accede to their demands.

What Cardinal Gibbons Has Done.

ROME, June 10.—It is asserted in reliable quarters that Cardinal Gibbons in the course of his frequent conferences with Cardinal Rampolla, papal secretary of state; Mgr. Nozaleda, archbishop of Manila, and other high ecclesiastics, in addition to effecting a settlement of the question of the properties of the religious orders in the Philippines, is negotiating for an extension to Cuba and the Philippines of the jurisdiction of the apostolic delegation at Washington.

Shriners In Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, June 10.—Nearly 6,000 Shriners are in Kansas City today at the opening of the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the imperial council of the Mystic Shrine. Great preparations have been made for their reception during the four days of the gathering, and Kansas City has been decorated for the occasion.

The Paris Steeplechase.

PARIS, June 10.—The Grand Steeplechase de Paris, four miles and a half furlong, run yesterday at Auteuil, was won by Calabrais, with Caraiman second and Vlau third. Thirteen ran. President Loubet was enthusiastically cheered by immense crowds on his arrival at the race course and on his departure.

Harvest Prospects Bright.

LONDON, June 10.—"Plentiful rains have fallen in south Russia," says the Odessa correspondent of The Standard "and a splendid harvest is assured."

ONLY A DELUSION.

Professor Moore Doubts Reported Control of Elements In France.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The extensive reports of United States Consul Covert, at Lyons, France, relative to the success of cannon firing in France as a means of protecting orchards and vineyards from hailstorms and also for the purpose of mitigating or nullifying the effects of frost upon vegetation have prompted numerous inquiries by horticulturists in this country as to when, if at all, our government would adopt similar methods of protection.

Professor Willis L. Moore, the chief of the weather bureau, acting under the direction of Secretary Wilson, therefore has issued to the press the following statement:

"After an examination of all that has been published during the past two years my conviction is that we have here to do with a popular delusion as remarkable as is the belief in the effect of the moon on the weather. The uneducated peasantry of Europe seem to be looking for something miraculous. They would rather believe in cannonading as a means of protection and spend on it an abundance of money, time and labor than adopt the very simple expedient of mutual insurance against the losses that must inevitably occur.

"The great processes going on in the atmosphere are conducted on too large a scale to warrant any man or nation in attempting to control them. The energy expended by nature in the production of a hailstorm, tornado or a rainstorm exceeds the combined energy of all the steam engines and explosives in the world. It is useless for mankind to combat nature on this scale.

"After the experience that this country has had during the past ten years with rainmakers I am loath to believe that the bombardment of hailstorms will ever be practiced or even attempted in the United States, much less encouraged by the intelligent portion of the community. Every effort should be made to counteract the spread of the delusion which has been imported into this country by Consul Covert."

SURGEON DALY A SUICIDE.

A Member of General Miles' Staff and Well Known.

PITTSBURG, June 10.—Major W. H. Daly, surgeon general on the staff of Lieutenant General Miles in Porto Rico, committed suicide at his home here yesterday by shooting himself in the right temple. The body of the doctor was found in the bathroom by Miss Mary Short, the housekeeper, lying in a pool of blood, with a .38 caliber revolver lying on the floor. Dr. Fokter, who was summoned at once, found the bullethole in the temple and announced that death had taken place several hours before. Miss Short then remembered hearing a sharp report at about 7:30 a. m., but thought it was the quick closing of a window by some one.

No cause is known for Dr. Daly's deed, unless it be that insomnia drove him to temporary insanity. The doctor was a widower and leaves no immediate family. He was 59 years of age and for many years had been prominent in medical circles. He gained international prominence during the Cuban war, as it was his report to the commanding general of the army that started the "embalmed beef" investigation.

General Miles Not Surprised.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Lieutenant General Miles said that he was not surprised at the suicide of Dr. Daly in view of the great personal bereavement that the doctor had suffered recently and the undermining of his health by a severe attack of grip last winter. General Miles esteemed Dr. Daly very highly, and the two were intimate friends. His death came as a severe blow to the general. Dr. Daly was in the city last March, when he came to be present at the second inauguration of President McKinley. If General Miles can arrange matters, he will attend the funeral of his old friend.

Rose Feast Celebrated.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 10.—The unique and beautiful ceremony of the "feast of roses" was celebrated yesterday at Manheim. This annual feast of roses was inaugurated in 1892. In that year the congregation of Zion Lutheran church of Manheim placed a memorial window back of the pulpit, in which the principal object of decoration was a large red rose. This was symbolical of the indebtedness of the church to Baron Henry William Stiegel, the founder of Manheim and the first glass and iron manufacturer of note in the United States, who in December, 1772, conveyed to the trustees of the Lutheran congregation a plot of ground on which to erect a church. This ground, deeded forever to the congregation by indenture, still preserved in the church archives, was to be paid for by the annual presentation to Baron Stiegel and his heirs of a single red rose. The rose was paid by William D. Weaver of the Lancaster Historical society, representing the congregation, to Miss Annie Boyer of Harrisburg, a descendant of Baron Stiegel. Rev. C. Rollin Sherck of Harrisburg preached the memorial sermon, and Judge William N. Ashman of Philadelphia was the principal orator. The ceremonies attracted fully 5,000 people.

Wheatfields Ruined.

WICHITA, Kan., June 10.—A correspondent who arrived here from the scene of devastation in Kay county, O. T., says that the storm of Friday night ruined the wheat crop of 400 farms west and northwest of Blackwell. These farms are all in one body of territory. The farmers, who had purchased twine and harvest machinery, are asking the local dealers to take them back, and the dealers have referred the matter to the factories.

A Steamship Concession Likely.

LONDON, June 10.—United States Senator Beveridge, according to the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Mail, will not find much difficulty in securing from the Russian government a concession for a steamship line from the United States to Vladivostok or Port Arthur.

Headless Body Found.

LOWELL, Mass., June 10.—The headless body of a woman, apparently 20 years old, was found in a lonely spot about two miles from Chelsford Center by Elmer E. Hildreth, superintendent of the town farm, and William Baker, also of Chelsford. A search for the head was not successful.

EDITORS AT BUFFALO.

June 12 to Be Given Up to Newspaper Men and Women at the Fair.

BUFFALO, June 10.—On account of the large number of visiting newspaper men and women expected at the Pan-American exposition this week, Wednesday, June 12, is announced by Director General Buchanan as editors and publishers' day. The meeting of the National Editorial association and several state associations will bring to the exposition this week the largest number of editors ever gathered together in one place at the same time. It is expected that a total of not less than 1,500 will be here. They will hold their meetings at the Temple of Music at the exposition and will be entertained by Sousa's band, which has just arrived at the exposition for a month's stay; the Mexican Artillery band, sent by President Diaz of Mexico as a compliment to the American people, and other bands and musicians. They will be given excursions by the railways and steamship lines, and the freedom of the exposition and the Midway has been accorded them.

Hon. Elihu Root, secretary of war, arrived in this city at 7:40 o'clock last evening in a special car over the Pennsylvania railroad. He was met at the station by Director General William I. Buchanan of the Pan-American exposition and Captain P. C. Hains of the United States army. The other members of Secretary Root's party are Major General Corbin, Major General Young, Colonel and Mrs. Johnston and Miss Edythe Patten. Mrs. Root and her daughter will arrive here today.

Secretary Root saw the grand illumination at night. He will make a thorough examination of the interior of the exposition.

The detachments of the United States army now quartered within the exposition inclosure are making preparations to receive the secretary of war with honors befitting his position.

CUBA WILL ACCEPT.

Conservatives Confident In Regard to the Platt Amendment.

HAVANA, June 10.—The conservative members of the constitutional convention are absolutely confident that the Platt amendment will be accepted and that several radicals will join with the 15 delegates who have heretofore voted in favor of acceptance. The last few days seem to have brought about a decided change in the attitude of delegates who had been bitterly arraigning the Washington government for rejecting the convention's interpretation of the amendment.

The strong pressure from the outside brought to bear upon the convention to finish its business and to place the country on a settled basis has had an excellent effect upon the radicals, inducing them to accept the inevitable, and some of them now argue that it would be perhaps better to accept the amendment, hoping for some form of independence, than to prolong the military occupation of the island.

The convention will meet in secret session today. It is expected that several days will elapse before a vote is taken.

THE COURT'S RETURN.

Chinese Told It Will Be In Peking In September.

PEKING, June 10.—The Chinese express great satisfaction at the announcement of the intention of the court to return to Peking in September. All the foreign troops, with the exception of the legation guards, are expected to withdraw ere the middle of that month, the only troops not already under orders of withdrawal being the Japanese, whose government is sending reliefs. It is said, however, at the Japanese legation that when Japan is absolutely certain that the other powers are evacuating her own troops can be withdrawn on two days' notice.

General Voyron, the French commander, has instructions to leave one brigade for service in China, and the French transports are en route. The British will have completed their departure by the end of September, ten transports making two journeys to India.

Church Cornerstone Laid.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Cardinal Martinelli yesterday afternoon laid the cornerstone of the new Church of the Sacred Heart at the corner of Fourteenth and Whitney avenue, in the suburbs of this city. A large crowd was present. The sermon was preached by Rev. D. Conaty, the rector of the Catholic university. A significant portion of his address was the following: "We are living in an age when men are reckoned not as men made in the image of Christ, but as producers of wealth. Money is the thought that holds sway, and many seem to forget the beautiful doctrine of brotherly love preached by Christ, who died on the cross for the redemption of men. If the shock ever comes to our republic, if turmoil and disturbance should threaten our beloved land of liberty, it will be found that the teachings of the Roman Catholic church and the gospels she has ever preached will be the great bulwark against anarchy, corruption and treason. While millions of our citizens, like those who are here today, believe in her teachings there is no fear for the republic."

Syracuse Youth Accused.

NEW YORK, June 10.—John Gallagher, 20 years old, who was a bell boy at the Yates House in Syracuse, was arraigned before Magistrate Flammer in police court on a charge of having misappropriated a check for $60. Gallagher was arrested on Friday night last at the home of his father, John Gallagher, in Fordham. A letter addressed to John Gallagher at the Yates House was given to him on May 13 by the clerk. Believing it to be intended for him, the young man opened it. He found the check. He says that, thinking some one had tried to play a joke upon him, he destroyed it. Subsequently it was learned that the check was intended for John Gallagher, a traveling salesman. Young Gallagher will be taken back to Syracuse.

Poor Chance For Immigrants.

BERLIN, June 10.—Among the reports recently published here of German consuls in American cities is one from the consul in Cincinnati, who, treating of the prospects of the German immigrant to the United States, says, "The time is past when immigrants to the United States had a chance to acquire riches in this country owing to the density of the population and the overcrowded condition of all trades and occupations."

CIVIL RULERS NAMED

Another Province In Luzon Visited by Commission.

TAFT TALKS OF FREE TRADE.

Says Opening Up of United States Markets Would Greatly Increase Land Values—Northern Tour Has Been Postponed.

MANILA, June 10.—The Philippine commission returned to Manila yesterday from the province of Nueva Ecija, Luzon, having organized provincial government at San Isidro, capital of the province, with Captain Jacob F. Kreps of the Twenty-second infantry regiment as governor, Lieutenant Richard C. Day of the Thirty-fourth volunteer infantry as treasurer and Lieutenant De Witt C. Lyles of the same regiment as supervisor.

Judge Taft told the people that if no power were given to levy customs the expenses of the central government would be provided by additional internal taxes.

He pointed out also that if the decision of the authorities at Washington should result in free trade with the United States, opening up such a great market, the increase in land values would enable the people to respond to the increased internal taxes.

The northern tour has been postponed.

The American astronomical commission has returned from Sumatra and will sail for home shortly.

Lieutenant Wray's command has had six engagements with the insurgents in the province of Sorsogon, Luzon, killing six. Twenty-three insurgents were captured at and near Atimonan, province of Tayabas, and several minor captures are reported from other parts of southern Luzon, where the insurgents are still active.

The report circulated in the United States that General Cailles has surrendered is unfounded.

Will Not Dismiss Receiver.

KANSAS CITY, June 10.—Judge Gibson in the circuit court has refused to dismiss Utley Wedge, receiver of the Siegel-Sanders Live Stock Commission company, whose removal was requested by minor stockholders in the company. Wedge was appointed a month ago on the application of Frank Rockefeller of Cleveland, principal stockholder in the company, and some of the other stockholders alleged that the receiver favored Rockefeller in adjusting the firm's affairs. Since the failure President Siegel has been arrested, charged with misapplication of more than $100,000. Rockefeller had helped to reorganize the firm and on the stand testified to having signed for Siegel's use in straightening out its affairs guarantees in blank that afterward turned up for $750,000.

Miss Burt Is Deranged.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 10.—Two prominent physicians in this section of the state have reported that Miss Mabel L. Burt of Bridgeton, N. J., a former Smith college student, who is under arrest in the county jail on the charge of larceny of money, watches and jewelry to the value of $3,000 in the rooms of the students of Smith college, is suffering from mental derangement and should receive treatment. Mr. Burt spoke of the nervous and impulsive character of his daughter and said she could not be in her right mind and commit the crime she is accused of. He said her life had been an exemplary one while at home. She was a bright scholar and was valedictorian of her class when she graduated from the high school.

The Amount Slightly Exaggerated.

NEW HAVEN, June 10.—It now appears that the fortune reported to have been discovered by William Warner of New Haven amounted to $8,400 instead of $298,000, as previously reported, and that Arthur Warner of University place, this city, manager of a local plumbing establishment, was the finder. Mr. Warner last night stated that he made the discovery among some old papers belonging to his father, a broker, but that he had not as yet learned the value of the securities. Mr. F. R. Bradley, the Hartford broker in whose hands the bonds were placed, states that they are in fact four $1,000 bonds of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, an issue of 1887, and payable in 1895, with a face value, including interest, of $8,400.

Branch Schools In Europe.

CHICAGO, June 10.—President Harper of the University of Chicago announces that the university has begun to establish affiliated preparatory schools in different parts of Europe. These schools will be branches of academies which are affiliated with the university in this country. The purpose of this plan is to give an opportunity to children of college age whose parents are traveling abroad during the year to have the benefits of foreign residence without obstructing the progress of their studies. Paris will be invaded first, and the American home school for girls will be opened at 20 Rue de Longchamps on Oct. 15. Berlin, according to President Harper's plans, is next in line of march after Paris.

Stolen Gold Recovered.

MINERAL POINT, Wis., June 10.—Thirteen thousand dollars more of the gold coin stolen from the First National bank of this place on May 24 has been recovered. It was found in the vault of an outhouse of the City hotel, about a block from the looted bank, at which the prisoner, Steward Jelleff, boarded. It is believed that the detectives obtained information as to the hiding place of the coin from the prisoner. The gold when found was in five bags, one containing $9,000 and the others $1,000 each. This find and the $8,000 previously recovered comprises all the gold missing from the bank. The balance, $5,800, is in currency, and the detectives hope to recover it later.

Captain Kountz Dead.

TOLEDO, June 10.—Captain Fred J. Kountz, son of General J. S. Kountz, ex-commander in chief of the G. A. R., died very suddenly yesterday of acute pneumonia. He was a captain of volunteers in the Spanish war and served on the staff of General Frederick D. Grant. At the time of his demise he was awaiting an appointment to the regular army.

Berry Growers Discouraged.

SYRACUSE, June 10.—The heavy rains have disheartened Oswego county berry growers, and if the weather does not improve the crop will be a failure. Discouraging reports have been sent to Boston and New York buyers.

Street Signs Assured.

Mayor N. B. Smalley has kept his promise and street signs are assured for the borough of North Plainfield. At the June meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening, an appropriation of $150 was made for that object. It is a question whether that sum will provide for the complete equipment of the borough. It will go a long way toward it, however, and greatly relieve present situation.

The Mayor himself introduced the subject at the Council meeting but Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., chairman of the street committee, introduced the resolution which made the appropriation. Mr. Clark has long been in favor of new signs for the borough and can be counted on to act without delay in procuring them, now that the necessary funds have been provided.

North Plainfield will follow the example of this city in its signs. The new signs which have recently been put up here seem to answer all requirements, and the borough authorities are glad to take advantage of the city's experiment. It is probable that the same method used in locating the signs on the electric light poles will be followed in North Plainfield.

It is estimated that the $150 will purchase 185 signs and pay for putting them up. That number will not be enough to cover all the borough. It is to be hoped, however, that as soon as those are put up the demands of the residents of the sections not favored will be sufficient to lead the Borough Council to make a further appropriation for the same object. This appropriation is, however, an excellent thing and will give the borough something which has long been needed there.

The first open air band concert of the season is planned for Wednesday evening. It is the intention of Mr. LaVere to shortly make an attempt to secure funds to hold a series of such concerts all through the summer. It is greatly to be hoped that Mr. LaVere will be successful in his attempt. There is no doubt but that weekly open air concerts are a very popular feature with the Plainfield public. Thousands of people turned out for every one held last summer and stood patiently on the sidewalk for several hours listening to the music. There ought to be enough public spirited citizens in town who are willing to contribute funds sufficient to hold these concerts every week during the summer. Not only do they furnish the people with a pleasant evening of music but they have a decided influence on the business of many of the local merchants.

A local photographer was arrested for entering a quarantined room to take a photograph of a child who had just died with diphtheria. The arrest was made at the complaint of the Board of Health. The object of the quarantine is to prevent the spread of contagious disease and its object is defeated if people are allowed to violate it with impunity. According to the testimony of the photographer, however, he did not know that he was entering a quarantined room. City Judge Runyon found him guilty but suspended sentence. The Judge said that the man who should have been arrested was the one who deliberately took the photographer into a room which he knew to be under quarantine.

The trouble between E. S. Hooley's bull dog and George Becker's calf has been greatly exaggerated by the New York newspapers which have published highly colored accounts which are far from the real facts. Even the more conservative of the New York papers have told wild tales about the case which are far from agreeable to the leading participants and the truth-loving public. It is to be regretted that some newspapermen, in their great anxiety to write a readable story, cannot hold closer to the facts of the case.

There was no report from the committee on municipal ownership at the Borough Council Friday night. There was, however, an appropriation of $100 made to allow the committee to pursue its investigations on a more elaborate scale. If the current of the remarks made at that meeting is any indication of the feeling of the members of the Council, they are serious in their attempt to provide a system of water works for that municipality.

The publicity, which the Automobile Club of America won by its run to Morristown when several of its members were arrested for fast riding, has not been conducive to advance that delightful sport. The Morristown newspapers have been publishing what they term a "roll of dishonor,' which included the names of those who were arrested for speeding their automobiles through that city.

The Gesang and Turn Verein is one of the most prosperous of Plainfield's societies. An evidence of that fact may be seen in the plan of the organization to build an addition to Saengerbund Hall. That building has outgrown the demands of the society and larger quarters are necessary. The members of the society are to be congratulated on being in such a prosperous condition that they are enabled to build without delay.

The coming campaign has prospects of being a trifle warm. So far, however, no other candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination has appeared in the field beside Franklin Murphy, despite the energetic efforts of many newspaper writers to discover a formidable rival. In the Democratic ranks, however, it is an open race so far with a host of well-known men mentioned.

The first distinctively amusement enterprise of the local trolley system has been opened to the public. The only wonder is that the local company did not follow the example of the companies in other cities long ago and establish a park for the entertainment of its patrons and the incidental increase of business.

There will be one prominent feature miseing at this year's commencement of the Plainfield High School. The Board of Education has decided that it will be best, considering the circumstances, to omit the customary sending of flowers to the members of the graduating class at the exercises.

The scholastic baseball teams have ended their season but there are still four local teams in the field which put up good games and furnish plenty of entertainment for the lovers of the National game.

By way of variety Sunday proved to be one of the most delightful of June days, and the Children's Day services at many of the local churches were largely attended in consequence.

Both of the local lodges of Knights of Pythias have shown their sympathy for the striking machinists by forwarding donations of cash to the treasury of the strikers.

The boys from Hope chapel had their troubles when they encountered the baseball team of the Garwood A. C., Saturday afternoon.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Tarrytown-on-Hudson, June 10.—The marriage of Miss Minnie A. Starr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Starr, of this place, to John P. D. Kirch, a well-known lawyer of Plainfield, took place yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends The officiating clergyman was Rev. Edwin W. Husted, pastor of the Baptist church, this place.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Maggie Field, of Staten Island, and the best man was Wm. H. Abbott, of Plainfield. Immediately after the wedding an informal reception was held, soon after which Mr. and Mrs. Kirch left by boat for Boston, where the groom is to represent Protective Conclave, Improved Order Heptasophs, of Plainfield, at the Supreme Conclave of Heptasophs, as a delegate. tasteful and effective. The reading desk had been removed from the platform, along the front of which were massed daisis, roses, fleur-de-lis and other flowers, gracefully arranged and with colors well harmonized.

An excellent musical programme was rendered by a quartette composed of Messrs. Powell, Ryan, Holmes and Barnes, of New York. This included a quartette, "Remember Now Thy Creator," by Rhodes; a duet by Messrs. Powell and Holmes, "Seek Ye the Lord," by Bartlett; and a solo by Mr. Holmes, Gounod's "Sabbath."

The members of the primary department marched upon the platform and sang a bright little carol, "Merry Little Robin." Three members of the department were also graduated into the larger school, and resited the books of the Bible and some Scripture selections in an excellent manner. It being the habit of the pastor, Rev. Charles L Goodrich, to give a Bible to each child baptized by him when the child reaches the age of seven years, a Bible was given on this occasion to Miss Emma VanAistyne One other ceremony appropriate to the day was the christening of two of the infant children of members of the church.

The sermon, which was an informal talk to the boys and girls, had as its subject "Springs," and as its text, Isaiah LVIII:11, "Thou shalt be like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." The talk was illustrated with a large drawing showing the origin of springs, and many practical lessons were drawn from the text.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Children's Day was observed in an interesting manner at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning, when that edifice was thronged with members of the Sunday-school and church. The decorations were very attractive, consisting of ferns, daisies, roses, etc. These were arranged by Mrs. G. P. Hinman, Mrs. John S. Johnson and Miss Gertrude Hazeltine.

The programme, which was in charge of E. M. Cave, superintendent of the Sunday-school, consisted of recitations by Miss Ida Englehardt, Albert Dunham, Lee Hammond, and songs and concert recitations by the primary department. Miss Mary Adelaide Luckey read Dr. Worden's annual letter, entitled, "The Children for Christ." There was also special music by a male quartette, composed of Harry Baldwin Drake, E Maxwell Honeyman, Louis Tallamy and Wilson R. Derby. A feature was the short address by Rev. C. E. Herring, the pastor, who gave the children a talk on the subject of "Clouds."

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

An elaborate programme had been arranged for the Children's Day service in Grace M. E. church yesterday morning. The pulpit platform was well decorated with potted plants and the interior of the edifice looked bright and cheerful.

Recitations were delivered by a number of the members of the Sunday-school, including the Misses Bessie Taft, Emma Ryno, Ida Saums, Helen Adams and Dorothy Lunger, and Charles Martin and Arthur Martin. Solos were sung by the Misses Laura Dean and Margaret Darby. The Misses Alice Mason and Jennie DeMott rendered a duet. Miss Carney's class sang a song and fourteen little children also rendered one. A unique feature was a motion song in which seven little girls participated.

The Misses Marion Major and Stella Kline took part in an exercise entitled "Summer's Gifts" and four of the girls in the school took part in another entitled "Sunbeams." "The Sweet Story" was sung by the primary department. The entire Sunday-school also sang several songs.

Rev. G. W. Gardner, the pastor, delivered an appropriate address. Plants were distributed to the children. Dyckman Winckler played the violin at the service and Bert Simpson acted as pianist. The decorations were in charge of A. F. Wilson. In charge of the programme were the Misses Mary G. Steiner, Addie Carney and Belle Lunger, Mrs. Joseph Darby and A. F. Wilson.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

The pupils of the First M. E. church held their exercises in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon. Both the primary and intermediate departments took part. Those from the former who took part were Marion and Dorothy Lynn, Annie Christenson and Raymond Mosher, who recited and Madeline Guyer and Burnett Brown, in a dialogue. Recitations were given by Helen Joy, May Bingaman and Hazel Rose from the intermediate department. There was also a song by Helen Edgar, Frances Rittenhouse, Winifred Cadwell and Katheryn Smineck. At the close of the exercises an instructive talk was given by Professor Stewart, of the Biblical Institute, at Evanston, Ill.

Numerous pretty plants and wild flowers formed the decorations about the platform.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

At the Crescent Avenue church, the Children's Day exercises were held in the morning and were very simple. The primary department, which was stationed in the choir loft, sang a number of anthems. The remainder of the musical programme was furnished by the choir. At the close an offering was taken for Sunday-school missionary work.

MARCONNIER CHAPEL.

There was a special Children's Day programme at Marconnier chapel yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school. The chapel was lavishly decorated with ferns, daisies and potted plants. Superintendent H. W. Marshall was in charge of the programme, comprising a service entitled "Looking." There was an opening address by Willie Robertson, assisted by Raymond Payne, Clifford Morris, Karl Nelson, Russell Pyatt and Harry Brown. Recitations were then given by Bessie Campbell, Jennie Robertson, Nettie Stover, Anna Nelson, May Pyatt, Daisy and Iva Morrison and Monroe Pyatt. There was also singing by the school and an interesting address by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. Mrs. Schenck, of Oak Tree, presided at the organ and J. D. Moon had charge of the singing.

DEATH OF MRS. BECKER.

An Old Resident Passed Away At Her Home Saturday Afternoon.

Mrs. Rosalia Becker, wife of John Becker died at her home on Somerset street, Saturday afternoon. The immediate cause of death was heart failure.

Mrs. Becker had long suffered from trouble with her heart and death from this cause was not unexpected by her. She exhibited wonderful vitality and was conscious almost to the last hour.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hoefler, were natives of France, and Mrs. Becker came to this country when twenty-one years of age. She married John Becker in New York in the same year and they came to North Plainfield. Mr. and Mrs. Becker lived at 82 Somerset street, in the house where she died, for the last forty-seven years.

Together with the husband, two daughters and two sons survive her. They are Mrs. Caroline Eggerding, of Arlington avenue; Mrs. Frederica Smalley, wife of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of Mercer avenue; John Becker, who resides at home, and Frederick Becker, of Watchung avenue.

The funeral services will be private. They will be held tomorrow afternoon. Interment will be made in the family lot in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Funeral of John D Rowe.

The funeral of John D. Rowe, of Grove street, took place from the residence of his mother, Mrs. Jeremiah Rowe, on Grove street, Saturday afternoon. The services were conducted according to the rite of the Plymouth Brethern by Mr. Jennings. There were a number of floral rembrances from friends of the young man. Frederick Bimble, Charles Pawson, Lawrence Benner, William Handy, William Staggard and Jacob Gaub were the pallbearers. Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery.

Shakespeare Club's Outing

The Shakespeare Club, of this city, enjoyed its annual outing Saturday afternoon at Chimney Rock. Forty members of the club went to Bound Brook by trolley and from there they were taken to the Rock in stages. A ramble about the mountains, through the woods and to the falls was enjoyed.

Gobelin Tapestry.

So important is their artistic merit and historic value that no history of tapestry is complete that does not include a description of their design and execution. For more than 200 years the existence of the papal manufactory of tapestries was unknown to the modern world. Documents relating to its origin and productions were buried and forgotten in the mass of manuscript in the famous Barberini library, until a very recent date, when they were unearthed by Eugene Muntz, director of the National Ecole des Beaux Arts at Paris. In the popular mind all tapestries are associated with the Gobelin factories of France. Curious to relate, not a yard of tapestry was ever woven by a member of the Gobelin family. Immortality came to them from the fact that in the middle of the fifteenth century the founder of the family established a dye house, which became famous and brought the proprietors fortune. Descendants shrewdly transported skilled tapestry weavers from Flanders, whose work they directed and marketed, until tapestry and Gobelin became then, as now, synonymous terms throughout the world.—Donahoe's Magazine.

Soldiers as to Size.

The untrained big man will beat the untrained little man at fisticuffs or in a wrestling match, but in trained armies weight tells for very little. So long as their armies were recruited from the cities and villages of Italy, the small-limbed Romans defeated the large-limbed Germans in almost every encounter, and this although the men of the forest were hunters, lived in the open air, and ate, it is always assumed, quantities of meat. The wiry little Roman who took blows from a vine stock from his own officer must have been one of the best soldiers who ever lived. It was after Rome had enlisted the big barbarians in scores of thousands that her standards went back in battle. The slight and pallid Saracen drove the picked soldiers of Europe out of Palestine. If armor is any test, the heroes of the middle ages were comparatively little men. Of the men who fought with Jena, the Frenchmen were probably by ten per cent. the smaller, yet German, Pomeranian and Pole alike receded before their charge.—London Spectator.

The Crown of Portugal.

The crown of Portugal, which King Carlos has just taken out of pawn, is a most highly prized ornament. Several years ago, when his majesty needed ready cash, he gave it as security for a loan which, while considerable, was in no wise commensurate with the value of the crown. It is said that the king took the crown out of pawn not so much as a matter of pride as for future use in the way of a pledge with which to raise money. He was given pecuniary assistance by Edward of England. The gems in the royal bauble are said to be worth $6,000,000.—Albany Argus.

Beancakes of Manchuria.

Japan has a special, even unique, material interest in Manchuria, because "she is dependent on that country for beancakes with which to manure her farms." What is a beancake? It is "a large cheese-shaped compressed cake of beans after the oil has been expressed," says the Century dictionary, "used largely in northern China as food for cattle, and in the sugar plantations of southern China as manure."—Albany Argus.

Veterinary Motors.

The automobile is put to a curious use at Auteuil. When a horse has been injured in the steeplechases, if it is unable to rise, a specially constructed motor car is brought up and the wounded animal deposited in it and transported thereby to the care of the veterinary surgeons.—N. Y. Sun.

Before Braddon considered that his daughter had heard of the young man often enough even to have his existence impressed upon her, she had come to the conclusion that behind John Olmstead's nephew lay the secret why her father had never married.

Once Esther thought to please her father by suggesting that he bring the young lawyer home to dinner, but it was received with such unexpected opposition that it was never repeated.

Frequently and intensely Braddon regretted that opposition. "I was a fool. She took me by surprise," he would say to himself. He said it most vigorously after Richard Raymond came into prominence. He even tried to bring it about that Esther should repeat the suggestion. She was never before so slow of comprehension, but, hint as he would, she never repeated it.

On the evening of the 5th of December, 1892, Braddon was late and hurrying home to dinner. One of the trustees of the Olmstead estate, in passing him, briefly reported that the nephew had forfeited his rights and that another heir had filed his claim. It was merely an item of news that might interest the banker, as a good portion of John Olmstead's millions was held by Braddon & Burridge.

The two parted at once, and each went his way, but the banker's cheeks were flushed and his eyes flashed under his white brows. His blood boiled in spite of the years that should have cooled it.

"It's a regular Olmstead trick," he muttered. "He's a fool. No, he's not. Confound him, I respect him for it. I believe his mother thought I insulted her by throwing a fortune in her face and asking her to change her mind. She said so by marrying a poor farmer. If I'd stayed poor I believe she would have had me; but I never saw it in that light till this minute. This is precisely the same thing over again. Bless the boy!"

By the time he reached his home he was sufficiently calmed to hide his excitement, but still sufficiently excited to be very glad they were to sit alone at dinner.

He heard Esther talking, and smiled when she smiled, but paid little further attention. She was recounting a meeting of her reform club, that day, at which she had been elected chairman of the executive committee.

Braddon nodded approvingly.

"For shame, papa!" Esther exclaimed. "How young and unfitted I am for such a position! If I can do the every-day work of the committee I shall be glad. At least I'm determined to try and do my share. There's one thing in which I think I can accomplish something. They brought up the subject of a horrible system of matrimonial advertisements in the daily papers. I'd no idea that there was such a thing at all; but you don't know, papa, how horrible it is. A member read some advertisements she had cut out this very morning, and it seems there are the same kind in almost every day. She told of some that she had investigated in the past, and of criminal as well as moral wrong connected with them. I am to look up such cases as I can, and to engage a lawyer, at the club's expense, to punish crime where I find it. When I'm well posted I'm going to see the editors of the newspapers about it, too."

By this time Braddon was paying the utmost possible attention.

He cared no more for matrimonial advertisements than he did for John Olmstead's millions. It was John Olmstead's nephew he was thinking of. The moment there was a pause he said:

"See here, Esther; the idea is all right, but it is risky business for the shrewdest man to try and handle criminals. You want the best lawyer you can secure, and you want him at the start. Otherwise you'll drag your club into no end of trouble; for even criminals have certain rights, which they understand better than you, and which it is dangerous to meddle with or ignore. Now, the first thing you do, you go to John Olmstead's nephew. I believe he's the best lawyer of his age in the state. He'll tell you he's too busy to give the matter attention, but don't let him slip. Ten minutes of his brain-work is better than an hour from most. Take him on philanthropy. I understand it's something of a hobby with him. Don't you offer to pay him, or he won't look at you. He can earn ten times all that your club will pay with half the work you will require, but he's forever throwing away good business to give his time in charity. Call it charity. See? And if that don't work, try moral reform. He's head and front in a dozen moral reforms. And once you've secured him you're all right."

Following this advice Esther cut from the next morning's papers all the obnoxious advertisements she could find. She read them over with a shudder of horror that men and women could be so base and depraved. One in particular, signed "Malcolm," fastened itself upon her mind. Thus armed, she started, early, to consult that prodigy of genius and brilliant leader in philanthropy, charity and morality, John Olmstead's nephew.

She knew him well enough by sight, and doubtless Stanton had frequently heard her name and even seen her during the brief period when he was most in society. He might almost have seen her yesterday, and forgotten. There was a strong similarity among women as he saw them. He never tried to remember unless they were in the witness-stand.

As Miss Braddon stepped into the elevator the operator was showing another boy an item in the Morning Herald which intensely amused them both. Always interested in what interested the young, she glanced over their shoulders, to find them absorbed in the advertisement signed "Malcolm." She remembered it well, and a new horror chilled her to find that even boys found entertainment in the pernicious matter and from it formed their notions of what real life would be for them too, when they were old enough to enter in.

As she crossed the hall to Stanton's door, she whispered, indignantly:

"Malcolm. Herald. Up-town."

She paused timidly upon the threshold, fully aware of the importance of the man she was about to approach, when the office boy came forward, remarking:

"Good mornin', um. Yer lookin' fur de Mr. Malcolm as addetised in de Mornin' Herald, um? He's right in here, um."

Before she could collect her thoughts, the door of the private office had been opened, she had entered, and it had closed again behind her. It was all in an instant, and Esther Thorndike Braddon was face to face with John Olmstead's immaculate nephew—otherwise Malcolm.

Her first thought was to get herself instantly away. The next suggested that she be very sure, first, that she was right, then fly to her father with news of the clay feet of his idol. Then a vein of amusement crept into the situation, and when she found that she was mistaken for an applicant her woman's wit suggested that she had a glorious opportunity to investigate, draw him out, preach him a sermon that should wither him with shame, then tell him who she was, why she came to him, and what every true woman would think of him.

Upon this plan she began operations, and she carried out the plan—almost to the end. The end itself was not quite what she had planned. She went directly to her father. She told him about the will, with its time-limit and forfeiture, of which he already knew; about the mistake in dates, of which he did not know; about Richard Raymond, which did not greatly surprise him; about Stanton's determination to retain the property, of which he highly approved; about the matrimonial advertisement and the plan for a limited alliance, which certainly did not affect him as Esther had feared it might; about—last of all she pulled together all her courage, drew a long, quivering breath, and with fear and trembling as she thought of what she had done, began—about what her angry, indignant, sympathetic heart had prompted her to say and do to help John Olmstead's nephew and punish Richard Raymond. With wet cheeks she looked up to her father for his verdict.

If Thaddeus Braddon could have been left alone for the next five minutes, he would have given half his fortune; but he was not left alone. Esther's anxious, troubled face was right before him. He saved the half of his fortune, but he ran a great risk of internal combustion of some kind, which might have been much worse.

He did his best to look serious and grave while she continued:

"You know, papa, I didn't really want to marry Mr. Raymond at any time. I never wanted to marry anyone, and I never shall want to. It will not matter at all if I am bound in this way so that I can't. Don't you think I did right, papa?"

"Perfectly right, Esther," Braddon said, solemnly. "I will look into this matter of Raymond at once, and if the half is true I will have a word with him. He will not annoy you after that. Any arrangement you have made with John Olmstead's nephew will be perfectly safe and honorable, rest assured. Now do you go right home and rest till the time comes. Marrying is a tough pull on the nerves, however you do it, and you'll need all your strength. I'll tell you what we'll do, Esther. You go through this thing like a major. The chances are he'll offer to give up a dozen times before you see the end, for he'll think it's hard on you; but don't you let him do it. Don't let anything slip so that the boy will drop his fortune into Raymond's hands after all; and when it's settled you and I will take that trip to Europe we've been talking about. We'll start one week from to-day, if you see this thing through all right. Now run home—that's a good girl."

At last he was able to lock the door of his private office and be alone. It was none too soon. Thaddeus Braddon, the white-haired head of Braddon & Burridge, sank into the nearest arm-chair, helplessly convulsed.

Clasping his own hands, lacking the visible hand of his old friend to clasp, he shook them with cordial energy, gasping, between the uncontrollable paroxysms:

"Oh, Jack, dear old boy, Jack, did you ever hear of such luck in all your life? Mary's boy, Jack, and my Esther! Why, it's almost as good as if Mary was to come back herself and marry me. Oh, Jack, Jack, Jack! And just to think! the two little fools don't know what they're doing, or they'd both of them kick over the traces and balk like a pair of mules."

I took it, and an hour later found to my surprise that my headache was gone, and I have not had a trace of one since. I bought a small bottle of Ripans and they worked like a charm. THIN GOWNS.

Taffeta, Barege and Muslin For Light Summer Wear.

Long, soft scarfs of net, lace or mousseline de soie are a feature of summer costumes, as are also large collars. These mark a characteristic of the season's styles. Another development is the tucked bolero of colored taffeta—blue, pink, red, any color—which accompanies warm weather gowns. These little boleros have heretofore been seen chiefly in black.

MUSLIN GOWN.

The old fashioned material called barege has been revived and composes some attractive thin gowns. It is made over taffeta as a rule.

The illustration shows a gown of white muslin. The skirt has seven ruffles, widening toward the back and running upward, each ruffle bordered with a narrow black ribbon. The bodice is plaited and has a collar of guipure and a bertha composed of three muslin ruffles edged with black velvet. A knot of black velvet with metal tips at the ends closes the collar, and the belt is also of black velvet. The plaited sleeves terminate at the elbow with three muslin ruffles bordered with black velvet.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

NOTES OF THE MODE.

Changes in the Manner of Arranging the Hair.

The hair is definitively lowered and is now correctly worn at the base of the head, a not by any means universally becoming style. Fashion has prescribed it, however, and this method of hairdressing will consequently prevail, although, as nothing affects the appearance as much as the style of the hair, the wise woman will cling tenaciously to whatever mode is personally best suited to her features.

SUMMER TOILET.

Short, simple boas have disappeared and are replaced by very long, ample affairs, extremely fluffy, with ends falling to the foot of the skirt.

A picture is given of a pretty summer costume having a skirt of dark blue foulard with a printed design in white, waved lines of narrowest white ribbon forming a simple decoration. The plaited bodice is of light blue silk, with a collar and plastron of cream guipure. A large bow of blue silk in front has long ends of guipure falling below the waist. The plaited sleeves have guipure bands at the edge, below which are puffs of white nainsook with a frill at the wrist. The belt is of dark blue panne with a gold buckle.

MENACE TO SOCIETY.

John Alexander Dowie, King of Religious Confidence Men.

Rules His Followers with Iron Hand, Pockets the Lion's Share of Their Earnings and Abuses All the World.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

THE religious confidence game is a money-maker par excellence. From time immemorial there have arisen so-called prophets and sons of prophets. Every nation and every sect have paid tribute or given followers to one or more impostors who posed as God-sent apostles and preached recognition and social reform by simply

"Stamping God's name upon a lie just made,
To turn a penny in the way of trade."

The religious confidence man is a cosmopolitan sort of chap; and that is why the United States, with its mixed and somewhat nomadic population, has been his favorite field of operation. And of the cities in the United States, Chicago has been his Mecca.

The oily Schweinfurth established his headquarters in the modern Babylon at the foot of Lake Michigan, after he had been driven out of Michigan, where he began operations, and his somewhat less notorious imitator, Teed, likewise selected Chicago as his headquarters. Both of these oleaginous individuals found hundreds of disciples; especially Schweinfurth, who proclaimed himself as the Messiah. Hysterical women flocked to hear him, and transferred everything they had in the world to the "community" of which he was the head—the whole thing, in fact. He might have ended his days as a very rich man had not his baser nature triumphed over his by no means inferior intellectual and business attainments. But in an hour, evil to himself and beneficial to his dupes, he established a community house near Rockford, Ill., which he called "Heaven," but which, according to others, was nothing but a harem. The people of Rockford forced him to leave their town, and in the course of time Schweinfurth disappeared altogether from public view. It has been stated that he has turned over a new leaf and is leading an exemplary life. For the truth of this rumor the writer cannot vouch, although it comes from a fairly reliable source.

JOHN ALEXANDER DOWIE, GENERAL OVERSEER OF ZION.

Before the Schweinfurth excitement had subsided there appeared in Chicago another prophet, whose name has since become familiar to the newspaper readers the world over—John Alexander Dowie. He came from Australia, spoke with an oily tongue, called himself a doctor of divinity and the founder of a new faith cure system of healing all diseases. His assumed humility secured immediate recognition. Several churches opened their doors to him, and his first proselytes were made in houses of worship whose people he has since denounced as "children of the devil." He made some remarkable "cures" and preached a series of powerful sermons. Within a short time the pauper immigrant from the Antipodes had accumulated enough capital to buy a handsome pair of horses and a carriage and to equip a large tabernacle, printing house and sanitarium in Woodlawn, the world's fair district of Chicago. These outward manifestations of prosperity were followed by the founding of the Christian Catholic Church of Zion, of which he made himself "general overseer." His "hospital" soon degenerated into a public nuisance; and the property owners of Woodlawn, under the leadership of George W. Riggs, instituted a series of legal proceedings which terminated in a victory for law and order, as far as the location of the sanitarium was concerned, but also resulted in advantage to Dowie, who posed as a martyr before his dupes, and induced them to buy a valuable piece of property at the corner of Twelfth street and Michigan boulevard, then known as the Imperial hotel. He renamed it "Zion," refurnished it throughout, and advertised it far and wide as the headquarters of the new religion. Subsequently additional real estate purchases were made and new buildings erected, and a year or so ago his people sanctioned the purchase of a valuable tract of land near Waukegan, Ill., where a modern city, to be known as Zion, is to be built.

The Christian Catholic church claims a membership of 10,000; and as each communicant is supposed to contribute a lion's share of his or her income to the overseer in the form of tithes, it is not surprising that Dowie can live in the lap of luxury. The humble exile of ten years ago assumes all the dignity of an Indian nabob and for a stranger to approach him is about as difficult as to secure an audience with the pope. He still preaches, but evidently only for the purpose of abusing those who do not agree with him. Many of his remarks are positively libidinous, others would do credit to a Hamburg fishwife. In word and action he is puffed up by arrogance, and although so far nothing has been said against his personal life his actions would indicate that he is the slave of some drug or else on the verge of insanity.

Looking at the man from a purely commercial point of view it cannot be denied that as an organizer and financier he has few superiors. Starting with nothing, he accumulated $4,000,000 worth of property in less than a decade, founded a bank conducted for his personal benefit, and laid the foundation of what may become a prosperous and important manufacturing town. In spite of opposition from press and pulpit he is holding together thousands of men and women who would prefer death to the loss of their faith. That such devotion should turn the head of any man is not unnatural; nor is it surprising that Dowie considers himself a second Elijah and the object of many of the prophecies of the Old and New Testament. As the head of the most perfect religious oligarchy of our day he occupies a position without parallel in the history of this or any other country.

Much of his success is due to hypnotic power, which he possesses in a remarkable degree. A vast percentage of the so-called "cures" performed in the early days of the movement were due to this force, and to it he owes his fame as a healer. His unprecedented financial triumphs are the result of nerve and the gift of selecting competent assistants. It is said that in employing heads for the various departments of Zion he has not made a single mistake, which, if true, stamps him as a wise judge of human nature. The men intrusted with the management of the vast machinery of the Zion organization are paid liberal salaries—more than they could earn elsewhere—and thus self-interest is made an ally of religious prejudice.

Attempts to bring the Zion bank under state supervision have been foiled by the clever managers of the institution, as well as honest endeavors to secure a statement of its resources and deposits.

The numberless slaughter of innocents—men, women and children, who die by the score, and might have been saved by rational medical treatment—has attracted considerable attention, but thus far the law has not been able to protect the victims of Zion fanaticism. Very recently the wife of one of the church's most prominent officers, H. Worthington Judd, died under the most distressing circumstances, after Dowie had "prayed" for her recovery. Physicians of all schools are unanimous in asserting that the woman's life could have been saved. At the coroner's inquest, her husband volunteered the information that his wife had not asked for medical aid, and if she had he would not have consented to her receiving it. Such is the bigotry of the followers of Dowie. This same Judd, by the way, is the man who assisted Dowie in giving an alleged expose of Free Masonry several months ago. He had been a Mason for many years, but Dowie convinced him that all Masons are "devils" and "children of the devil," hence he considered the act of violating his obligations as one of merit and entitled to Divine reward.

Such is, in brief, the character of Dowie and the work he is doing. How much longer his reign may last it is hard to say; but that it will end ignominiously may be taken for granted, because no system of religion based on personal aggrandizement and the storing up of wealth for wealth's sake has ever endured.

Golf Clubs of the Country Running to Novelty Features

NOVELTY features in golf this year promise to attract quite as much attention as the followers of the royal and ancient game. With millions of dollars invested in links and club houses, hundreds of thousands of dollars of capital installed in the factories that turn out golf material, and enough people directly and indirectly making their living out of the industry of balls, clubs and paraphernalia to form a vast army, no student of economic forces can overlook this great factor in the welfare of the United States. There is no telling where the craze for something new in golf will land the people who pay the bills.

To the Midlothian Country club, near Blue Island, Ill., was given the first honor of investing capital in an exclusively golf railroad. There is no other enterprise of its kind in the world. Even the canny Scot who has held golf so highly never dreamed of "throwing awa siller" by building a railroad that was to be used solely to carry people to a golf links. But Midlothian had to depend upon the indifferent busses and buckboards supplied by the neighborhood and the frightful roads for the transportation of its players and guests to and fro, and the business men golfers saw where $25,000 could be invested in an air line, in such a way that it would pay a dividend.

Accordingly they built and do now operate the golf railroad.

Not many miles from Midlothian is a golf club that is so ultra Scotch that none but Scotchmen may join, and no one will dare to play on the links unless he wears the kilts and turn-down stockings of his native Scotia. The course occupies a tract of land seven miles in area, and there are 27 holes.

THE ELEVATED TEE AT BAY SHORE.

For another novelty in golf the interested critic need turn only to Bay Shore, L. I., where on the private grounds of Richard Hyde is maintained the Bay Shore golf club. Some of the most exclusive people of Brooklyn play on this course. These links are on the old Merrick road and extend about three miles inland and are about a mile wide in places. Not all is actually used for golf, however, as there is a heavy and valuable timber on the land. The several hundreds of acres immediately adjoining the bay are traversed by ditches and hummocked with bunkers. There is located the course. Some years ago this site was a salt marsh, and rowboats could go almost anywhere. No one considered the place useful. But this is how rich Mr. Hyde came to decide to turn the location into a golf course—to defy the sea, as it were. One night a storm of great fury swept the coast and drove Mr. Hyde's yacht from her moorings—about where the players putt now on good turf—for fully half a mile until she landed high and dry in a small cornfield. Did the yachtsman turn the boat into a club house? Not quite that. He had a canal 10 feet wide and eight feet deep dug from the stranded boat to the shore, and in addition made a pond 160 by 350 feet as a sort of an inland harbor. The thousands of cubic feet of dirt taken from the marsh was utilized in dyking off the sea and raising the level. The canal drained the marsh and made the site available for golf. For two years golf has been played where once the native fisher boy said there was "no bottom." That is why the rich people with summer homes there think the course is so unique.

Those who have teed off the celebrated pinnacle of the eighth hole at Morris county's picturesque links and have enjoyed the climb to the tee, will appreciate the rude attempt at making a small mountain of the greens man at Bay Shore. The fifth tee is elevated so much that the players must climb quite a stairway to reach it.

J. L. Stack, a Western Golf association player, says that he has seen a great many novelties in the golf line in the United States, but none can compare with the course he discovered on an unnamed coral island off the coast of Florida.

"A wealthy man who had his winter home on this island invited me to visit his place," said Mr. Stack. "'You will enjoy a long with me,' he said. Of course I thought he meant a cigar by 'long.' But when I saw the golf course I knew that he had used the term for 'round.' There was no such a thing as 'round' to be had on that links. The island was about three miles long, and I swear that it was no wider than 100 feet at its broadest part. The sea made you drive straight, I tell you. Yet a fairly good brand of golf could be played there. Col. Bogey? Well, I guess the old fellow never called at that retreat."

But for genuine unique and interesting features, the Misery Island Golf club easily takes a foremost place in the golf world. The hand of destiny certainly wrote several hundreds of years ago that this island of about 80 acres should be reserved for the country club. In 1677, when the selectmen of Salem leased it to Capt. George Corwin for 1,000 years for $15 a year, it was covered with a dense forest.

This town of Salem regained possession of the island after the declaration of independence and the Indians never got a chance to own it. Until about a year ago the eight heirs of its last old-fashioned owner never permitted even a casual visitor to explore the novel island with its old stone barns and relics of a pasturage that extended back to the days of George Washington. Land along the shore—Beverly and Manchester—is pecked by millionaires from neighboring Boston—has long been held at from $10,000 to $40,000 an acre. Although a poor man, William Neville refused many glittering offers for the island. But the glitter of gold, thousands upon thousands offered by a little coterie of Massachusetts golfers and yachtsmen, finally won for the heirs and Misery Island club became a reality.

Two hundred men were sent from Boston to lay out a golf course. They found turf so deep and rich that the links are the pride of the 500 members of the club. A cove between two rocky points, affording a safe harbor for yachts, gives the anchorage that the salt water lovers needed. The great charm of Misery island, transformed by the altrurian ways of the golfer, is that a business man may so isolate himself on its ridges or in its cool ravines, that he cannot be bothered by office cares, may not see a newspaper unless he orders one sent, and may wear what he chooses, fish, swim or go boating and play over the most novel course in all the western hemisphere.

"The isolation and primitiveness of Labrador are gained by Misery island," said a Boston golfer in describing the strange golf course to me, "and a healthier spot I could not select. The natural beauty of the place makes it seem strange that a country club did not get the place many years ago. It is worth the trip several times over to go to this island club. No matter how hot and sweltering the city of Boston, it is always cool and refreshing on the porch of the modern club house. Far out to sea, the water tower, which really 'towers' above the old farm barns, must look like some astronomical observatory."

The only woman "professional" in the American golf world is Mrs. Georgiana Campbell, widow of the mighty golfer Willie Campbell, who was the man of the green at Franklin park's public course in Boston when he died. Gallantly did the park commissioners come to the front when the charming Scotch woman requested the honor of taking up her husband's duties for the support of the "bairns." For six years she had been Willie's guiding spirit in this country. Born within ten club lengths of the famous links at Musselburgh and a sister of two of Scotia's prominent golfers, John and James Stewart, Mrs. Campbell was able to demonstrate to the park board that she knew the ancient and royal game "like a book." Her delicious and substantial brogue and her dissertations on stymies, cleeks, brassies, bunkers and things that belong to the game, quickly earned for her a good position. She is a unique character in the golfing world, but the thousands of players in Boston swear by Mrs. Campbell. Modestly she says that all she learned about the game came from her husband, who was one of the world's most famous players and able teachers.

were made in the first two innings, Smith took his place. He struck out eight batters during the remainder of the game. The Garwood team made one good double play. Evans sent a grounder to the shortstop. The ball was put to second throwing H. Montross out, and then sent to first before Evans had reached that bag. Another double was made by the Hope boys. Hand, at second, caught a fly off Tunison, and Hegeman, who had left the base for third, was out.

In the first half of the last inning Roseberry made a two base hit and Smith, who was next up, repeated the play bringing him in. This was the only feature of the Hope's game. Hand, Roseberry and Evans of the Hope team made base hits. No account was kept of the errors made by the Plainfielders.

SCOTCH PLAINS PLAYED WELL

Defeated Clinton Avenue Team by a Score of 5 to 2 Saturday Afternoon.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, June 10.—That Scotch Plains is represented on the diamond this year by one of the strongest baseball teams the town has had for years, was evinced Saturday afternoon when the strong Clinton avenue team, of Plainfield, was taken into camp by the score of 5 to 2. The defeat to the visiting team was no disgrace as the game proved to be one of the hardest fought and most interesting game of the season.

Both teams were able to "find" the ball, and did some batting, but the able support given the pitchers by the field kept the score down, and up to the seventh inning the game stood tie, 2 to 2. Scotch Plains then placed several hits safely and this, together with errors by the Clinton avenue players, netted them three runs and won the game, as neither side were able to score again.

The batting order follows:

Clinton Avenue.	Scotch Plains.
Giddis, rf.	S. MacCauley, 2b.
Symonds, 1b.	Lee, 3b.

GOOD SPORT ON THE TRACK.

Large Crowd Saw Exciting Events At Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday Afternoon.

Nearly 500 people witnessed the races at the Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday afternoon. The track was in good condition and some exciting races were run.

In the 2 20 class there were three heats, and Charles Brower's mare won two of these. The others in the contest were "Belle," A. I. Smalley's mare and "Lady Kirk," John Osborne's mare. The best time made was 2.26.

In the 2 30 class the first heat was won by D. Smalley's "Ned Davis," in 2 32; the second heat by J. S. Irving's mare in 2 34, and the third heat by R. A. Fairbairn's mare in 2.30.

The prize contest for the best two miles within six minutes, tempted many to enter. J. S. Irving's mare came within three seconds of six minutes. Charles Brower and A. C. Vail tied for second place. Their time was half a second more than that made by Mr. Irving. J. W. Johnson's time was one second greater. In this race J. W. Johnson offered a silver set as first prize and a toilet set as second prize and they were awarded to Mr. Irving and Mr. Brower, respectively, A. C. Vail generously insisting that Mr. Brower should be given the second prize. A whip, offered by L. M. French, was awarded as third prize to J. W. Johnson.

MORE SPORTS AT DEWEY PARK

Conrad Knoth Won Anotner Race And Other Things Happened Saturday Afternoon.

The several events postponed from Decoration Day, were held at Dewey Park Saturday afternoon, in the presence of a large crowd. Interest centered in the five-mile foot race which was to be run between Conrad Knoth and several others. Only one opponent showed up, Henry Angerbauer, of this city. He was easily defeated by Knoth who covered the five miles in thirty eight minutes, which is fairly good time considering the windy weather. The trophy, a handsome loving cup, was accordingly awarded to Knoth.

The baseball game between the Plainfield Field Club and the N. J. A. C. of this city, was won by the latter. The score was 17 to 7. It was a very interesting game, the first five innings being very close.

William Pierson, of this city, was on hand to make a bicycle record for the Dewey Park course, but was unable to secure fast enough pacemakers.

Conrad Knoth, the winner of the foot race, has received and accepted a challenge from A G. Cairns, of the Brooklyn A. C. to run a five mile race on the Dewey Park course on the Fourth of July. The winner will receive a handsome prize.

CAME FROM SUN.

Peculiar Manner in Which Fire Started Yesterday Morning.

A slight fire, which occurred shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday morning in the new store in the Stillman building to be occupied by Woolworth & Co., originated in the most unique manner ever known to the local department. A quantity of oiled waste had been left in front of the store by workmen, directly behind a concave window glass. The sun's rays, striking the glass became focussed on the waste, which in a short time ignited. A passerby detected the flames which were communicating to the wood work, and notified fire headquarters. Chief Doane responded with extinguishers and soon put the blaze out. The damage was slight.

Bottles which contained a suspicious looking liquid were emptied in the street, and one of six men who were in the place, who declared the patrolman to be "out of order," was promptly ejected. No arrests were made.

UNIFORM EXAMINATIONS FOR ENTERING COLLEGE

Will be Held in Plainfield High School From June 17 to June 22.

PART OF A GREAT SYSTEM.

EXAMINATIONS WILL BE SIMULTANEOUSLY HELD AT OTHER PLACES.

General Plan and Scope of the Work—Examinations Here Will Be Under Charge of Misses Phœbe Lovell and Gertrude Snodgrass.

An uniform college entrance examination will be held in the Stillman High School building from Monday, June 17 to Saturday, June 22, inclusive. A person successfully passing this examination will be admitted without any examining test to any one of a long list of universities and colleges of the middle States and Maryland, provided the results of the examination are satisfactory to the institutions.

The examination is conducted under the auspices of the Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools of the Middle States and Maryland, and is under the direction of the Associations's College Entrance Board. In a large number of the principal cities in the United States as well as in Canada, Europe, Cuba and Hawaii, these uniform examinations will be held concurrently. Supervisors are delegated by the Examining Board to superintend the examinations. Those appointed to take charge of the work in this city are Miss Phœbe Lovell, of Crescent avenue, and Miss Gertrude Snodgrass, of Central avenue. Simultaneously with the examinations held here others will be conducted at Burlington, Morristown, Montclair, Newark, New Brunswick, Orange, Princeton and Camden in this State.

The plan is a most valuable one and it marks a great step taken in educational work. It was adopted at a meeting of the association held in Trenton, N. J., over two years ago and thus far it has been found very successful. At the present time the collegiate institutions which are members of the association and which abide by the terms of the examinations are: Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Columbia, Cornell University, John Hopkins University, New York University, University of Pennsylvania, Butgers, Swarthmore, Union, Vassar, Washington and Jefferson, Western University of Pennsylvania and the Woman's College of Baltimore.

Under the system in use, the examination questions in the several subjects are prepared by a committee of three appointed by the board. The chief examiner must be a college teacher, while his two assistants are required to be a college teacher and a secondary school teacher respectively. The question papers, in the various branches, are submitted as compiled to another committee for revision, and upon approval are transmitted to the numerous examining centres. The examinations are then held at a stated time and are in charge of a supervisor and as many proctors as may be necessary.

Immediately on the completion of an examination the answer books are forwarded in sealed packages to the board and are subsequently assigned by it to readers. The readers constitute a staff whose duty it is to inspect and give a rating to the answer books offered at the examination.

The readers report the result of the examination of the papers submitted to the board. On the strength of this report the board will issue a complete certificate. The certificate sets forth the name, residence, age, school and teacher of the candidate and also the subjects in which he was examined as well as the rating accorded him and the time and place of holding the examination.

A nominal fee is charged for admission to the examination. The candidate for admission to a particular institution must select those subjects which are required by it and in these only will he be examined. A schedule is issued by the board setting forth the exact time in which the examinations in the several branches are held.

EXCELLENT ORGAN RECITAL.

GIVEN BY WILLIAM E. MAC CLYMONT LAST EVENING.

At Holy Cross Church—Was Assisted By Two Vocalists From New York.

The organ recital given by William E. MacClymont in the Church of the Holy Cross last evening proved to be most enjoyable. Every pew in the pretty little church was crowded by those who are musically inclined and do not fail to take advantage of an opportunity of listening to a first-class recital.

As an additional incentive for one to attend, two leading Metropolitan vocalists were announced to take part in the affair. They were J. S. Thomas, the tenor soloist of Grace church, and E. H. Lockhart, the bass soloist of Holy Trinity church, in which Mr. MacClymont is the regular organist. As might be expected, both of these singers have rare voices, and the numbers sung by them greatly enhanced the musical treat.

The programme was made up of such selections only as were fitted to be rendered in a consecrated edifice. As an overture, Mr. MacClymont rendered the "Black Prophet," by Loretz, and Mr. Lockhart sang "By Babylon's Wave," by Howell. Preceding the rendition of "If With All Your Hearts," from "Elijah," by Mr. Thomas, "Pastorale," in E, by Lemare, and "Toccatta," in E, by Bartlett, were played on the organ.

"In Paradisum," by Dubois and "Allegro Appassionato," from fifth sonata, by Gullman, were also rendered by him. Mr. Lockhart sang "Fear Not Ye, O Israel," by Buck and before the recital was concluded Mr. Thomas rendered "Hosanna," by Grainer. The other selections by Mr. MacClymont were "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn" by Godard and "Fantasia," from "Faust" by Gounod.

The final number played by Mr. MacClymont was "Marche Pontificale," by de la Tombelle.

This was the first of a series of recitals to be given by Mr. MacClymont at the Church of the Holy Cross and it was a most successful affair.

FORMER FRIENDS BATTLED.

HALED TO POLICE COURT TO ACCOUNT FOR BLACKENED EYE.

It Belonged To Mrs. Hannigan And She Claimed Mrs. Edmundson Was Responsible—Sentence Suspended.

A neighborly quarrel, in which Mrs. Margaret Hannigan was the complaining one and Mrs. Nora Edmundson the defendant, occupied considerable time in the city court this morning. It was one of those little altercations which are bound to break out among the best of friends, as from appearances these two were.

According to Mrs. Hannigan's story Mrs. Edmundson was visiting at her home when the latter's son, Richard, came to the door and asked for his mother. When Mrs. Hannigan said she wasn't in, the boy then told her she didn't tell the truth in a very impolite way. This led to a dispute between Mrs Hannigan and her guest, and when it ended the former had an artistically decorated eye.

In her own defense Mrs. Edmundson said she had simply pushed her friend away in order to get the later's fingers out of her hair, but she was unable to account for the blackened eye. In view of this fact City Judge Runyon held Mrs. Edmundson guilty, but suspended sentence and advised the former friends to settle their differences between themselves.

PLEASANT SOCIAL.

Given in Vincent Chapel By the Missionary Societies of First M. E. Church.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the First M. E. church held a social and entertainment in Vincent chapel last evening. The silver offering received at the door will be used by the societies in their work.

During the early part of the evening a most enjoyable programme was presented consisting of contralto solos by Mrs. Burnett and Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell; recitations by Miss Garrison and Miss Mildred Spicer. These persons very kindly responded twice and their efforts were greatly appreciated, as was shown by the hearty applause. Samuel Bingaman was in charge of the programme and announced the several numbers.

After the entertainment refreshments were served and the rest of the evening was given up to sociability and a general good time.

No formal opening has been planned for Saturday evening. The regular hotel orchestra will not arrive until a week from that date and then a formal hop will probably be arranged to mark the beginning of the summer social season there. Last season the hotel was a very popular gathering place for the young people and many delightful social events were arranged.

MYSTERIOUS BLAZE IN A BOROUGH GROCERY.

Stock at Store of C. H. Lippencott on Somerset Street Destroyed by Fire.

ITS ORIGIN IS NOT KNOWN.

PROPRIETOR HAD JUST PUT OUT LIGHTS AND STARTED FOR HOME

Loss on Stock is Estimated at $200, Building $75 — All Covered by Insurance—Supposed Hanging Lamp Fell and Exploded.

Shortly after 8 o'clock last evening fire broke out in the store room in the rear of Charles H Lippencott's grocery at the corner of Somerset street and and Manning avenue. The entire stock was destroyed and the room badly damaged.

What the origin of the fire was is not known. Mr. Lippencott states that at 8 o'clock he turned out the lights in the hanging oil lamps, one of which is in the store room, and started up Somerset street for home after locking up. No sooner had he gotten to the corner of Jackson avenue than his attention was attracted by some one shouting "fire." Hastily retracing his steps he hurried towards the Warren Engine Company's house and learned that his own store was the scene of the conflagration.

Warren Engine Company and the West End Hose Company quickly responded to the alarm, which was turned in by Raymond Schenck, of Somerset street, who happened to be passing at the time. The flames were prevented from spreading by the good work of the department.

Every article in the room was destroyed. The oil, butter, lard and molasses were quickly eaten up by the flames. The fragments of the large hanging lamp, which was in the room, are scattered about. It is supposed that in some manner the lamp exploded.

Both the stock and the building were fully insured. The store and dwelling adjoining are owned by D. D. Smalley, of Manning avenue.

The stock was insured in the Manchester Insurance Company, represented by W. A. Woodruff, and the building in the National Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., and the Palatine Insurance Company, of London, both of which are represented by Elston M. French. Loss on the stock is estimated at $200, and on the building, $75.

PAID FOR HARES.

Bridgewater Township Settled With Owner for Hares Killed by Dogs.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, June 11.—Bridgewater Township Committee met yesterday afternoon and wrestled with a knotty problem for several hours, to wit: Are Belgian hares domestic animals, and if so, how much is their market value?

The question was brought up by Joseph Hager, of East Somerville, who had thirty-three Belgian hares killed by dogs and presented a bill of $5 apiece for each hare. Messrs. Meyers and Boyle, neighbors, were appointed appraisers. A man from Bound Brook, named Matthews, who also raises these animals, was brought in as an expert. He said that young hares were worth $5 a pair and old ones $5 apiece.

The appraisers thought the township ought to pay what they would bring dead in Washington Market. The owner objected to this, saying he ought to be paid what they were worth alive. The Township Committee finally decided to pay $50 for the damage and this the owner reluctantly consented to.

STARTED THE SEMINARY.

E. Dean Dow, a Former Plainfielder, Died at Knoxville, Tenn., Yesterday.

Word was received in Plainfield this morning of the death of E. Dean Dow at Knoxville, Tenn., who will be remembered by many Plainfielders. Mr. Dow died yesterday and he will be buried in this city. Thirty years ago he conducted a seminary for women at Easton, Pa., after which he came to Plainfield and started the Seminary on West Seventh street, now known as "The Chestnuts." It was then known as Opheleton Hall, and was conducted by Mr. Dow as a day boarding school for women.

For ten years he was most successful in his efforts. He then sold out his interest and turned his attention to developing property along Central avenue, from Seventh street out toward the city line. Many residences were erected as a result of his efforts. The health of his family finally became poor and he took the members of it south, where they remained.

UNINVITED GUESTS.

Partook Of The Desert Planned For Senior Luncheon At Borough High School.

Some of the members of the junior and third class pupils in the North Plainfield High School feasted on ice cream yesterday afternoon at the expense of the graduating class.

This desert, for a luncheon given by the senior class in the C. W. McCutchen Manual Training School building, had been ordered from Warnock, of West Front street. Knowledge of this fact got abroad and some one in the lower classes 'phoned Warnock to send the ice cream to the Watchung School in order to prevent it being taken by junior and third class boys. This was done and after the school session the practical jokers went to the Watchung School building and feasted on the cream, leaving enough, however, to satisfy the cravings of the graduating class.

CELEBRATED THEIR VICTORY.

BANQUET GIVEN TO NINE OF WEST END HOSE COMPANY.

Defeated Baseball Players Of Warren Engine Company Were Specially Invited Guests.

The West End Hose Company boys, of North Plainfield, celebrated their second annual victory in baseball over their rival, the Warren Engine Company, last evening. The affair was in the form of a banquet held at the Manhattan Hotel on Somerset street. It was given in honor of the winning team, and the defeated baseball players of Warren Engine Company were specially invited guests.

The fire laddies dined sumptuously and, after they had finished, speeches were made by members of both companies. L. B. Bodine, the captain of the losing team, congratulated the West End Company on having such a clever lot of ball players to represent it on the diamond and gave notice that the nine should be prepared to accept a challenge for next season.

Charles Keller, who successfully captained the winning team, spoke on the game and extended the compliments of his men to the Warren boys. Gustave Feiring and Herman Klinsman, of the West End Hose Company, also made speeches. Their remarks pertained to the needs of the company. Both advocated a new hose wagon as a necessity.

The chief of the department, J. J. Stahl, attended the affair. In every respect the banquet was very successful and it served to tighten the bond of friendship between the two companies.

POND MEN MADE TERMS; THEN REPUDIATED THEM

Voted to Accept Fifty-four Hour Schedule With Fifty-seven Hours' Pay.

OTHER MACHINISTS ANGRY.

POND EMPLOYES REFUSE TO STATE WHY THEY VOTED TO ACCEPT.

Action Was Reconsidered at Meeting of International Association Last Night and Committee Was Summarily Dismissed.

With the sanction of the International Association of Machinists the entire force of striking machinists of the Pond Tool Works met with the gang bosses of the shop yesterday afternoon for the purpose of talking matters over. The Pond men were expressly warned that they were not to exceed their authority in granting or receiving any concessions other than fifty-four hours' work with sixty hours' pay. In spite of this, however, a motion was made, seconded and carried, that the Pond employes return to work Monday on a fifty-four hour per week schedule with fifty-seven hours' pay.

It is not probable that they will return, although the officials were so notified, as the matter came before the International meeting held last evening and the men were roundly censured for their action. The remainder of the machinists were highly indignant and the committee, which informed the Pond officials that the men would return, was summarily dismissed.

According to the statements made last evening, the motion to return was made by John Thompson, one of the gang bosses. For reasons which the men refuse to make known, not a dissenting voice was heard and the motion was carried. Immediately after the conference, the shop committee hastened to the factory without consulting anyone, and there made known the result. It was this action which led to their dismissal.

The accepting of this concession would render it necessary for the remainder of the machinists to follow suit, including the Aluminum Plate and Press employes who are at present at work on a fifty-four hour schedule with sixty hours' pay. This the men of the Scott and Potter shops are determined not to do and they are backed by the Aluminum men, the International Association and the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. The latter organization has gone so far as to increase the rate per week paid its members while on strike, from $4 50 to $5 50 They maintain that the strikers will win in the end, as shops in various parts of the country are granting the demands in close succession. One of these, giving the men the union schedule without any demand is the L. S. Starrett Tool Co., of Athol, Mass., one of the largest tool factories in New England, having 280 employes.

USED HIS HAND.

It Made Trouble For Conductor's Nasal Organ—John Wierenga Arrested.

A fine of $3 was imposed upon John Wierenga in the city court this morning after he had been found guilty of acting in a disorderly manner on a trolley car from Scotch Plains late last night.

In company with several other young men he boarded the car and, according to Richard Schroeder, the conductor, he refused to pay his fare. Words passed between them during which Wierenga put his hand in Schroeder's face with enough force, the conductor said, to make his nose bleed. Further testimony was given by Rev. John McMurray, who witnessed the affair and who stopped the car fearing the conductor would be pushed off.

The defendant's previous good record stood him in favor, but City Judge Runyon was not disposed to suspend sentence in view of the testimony offered.

TO OFFER MEDIATION.

Rumored Movement to End the Boer War.

LONDON, June 11.—A dispatch from The Hague says the permanent committee of the court of arbitration met on Saturday to discuss the Transvaal question. It was decided to offer mediation by Germany and Holland between Great Britain and the South African countries, but no date was fixed for such a step. The chief point of the proposals will be the independence of the two republics.

Another dispatch from The Hague says:

"Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have arrived here. They drove from the railroad station at Hilversum Junction in a closed carriage and are staying at the residence of Mr. Wolmarans, one of the Boer peace envoys."

It is said that Mrs. Botha starts Wednesday for The Hague, where Mr. Kruger has been summoned to attend a conference of the Boer agents in Europe and the United States to consider the report Mrs. Botha has brought from her husband, in which he advises Mr. Kruger, as the constitutional head of the Transvaal, to sue for peace and the best terms obtainable.

Lord Kitchener reports the number of Boers killed, taken prisoners or surrendered during the month of May at 2,640. From June 1 to June 9 the killed numbered 26, the wounded 4, the prisoners taken 409 and 33 surrendered. Six hundred and fifty-one rifles, 115,550 rounds of small ammunition, 120 wagons and 4,000 horses were captured.

Trying to Starve the Boers.

CAPE TOWN, June 11.—The military authorities are enforcing stringent restrictions in the distribution of foodstuffs northward from De Aar and southward from Bulawayo. Only essentials are permitted to be distributed, and these only in limited quantities, so as to deprive the Boers of this source of supply.

CABINET SUMMONED.

President Hastily Calls an Evening Meeting.

UTMOST SECRECY IS MAINTAINED.

Messages Were Sent Out After a Short Conference With Secretary Hay—Members Refuse to Talk.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—In response to messages from the president sent late last evening after an hour's talk with the secretary of state all the members of the cabinet now in this city assembled at the White House at 8 o'clock last evening. There were five of them present. They came in evening dress. Secretary Long was accompanied by his little boy. The object of the gathering was not known to the members of the cabinet, as the invitations to them simply asked them to call at 8 o'clock.

The meeting was called suddenly late in the afternoon by messages sent the various cabinet members from the White House. The president and Secretary Long had been out driving, the secretary being especially sent for by the president to join him in the drive. When the president returned, he found Secretary Hay awaiting him, and the two spent half an hour together, the secretary leaving later on a night train for Buffalo. It was immediately after this call that the cabinet was asked to assemble, and they arrived within a few minutes of each other, about 8 o'clock, none of them being advised in advance of the object. Secretary Long brought his young son. Secretaries Long, Gage, Hitchcock and Wilson, Attorney General Knox and Postmaster General Smith were those present. Secretary Root is in Buffalo, while Secretary Hay had left for the same place.

The cabinet immediately repaired to the cabinet room, where they remained less than an hour. They took occasion to express their gratification at the continued improvement in Mrs. McKinley's condition and also discussed another subject which none of them would disclose, each member saying that it was a personal matter and some of them giving out the negative information that the meeting had no relation to Cuba, China, the Philippines, the Porto Ricans, the supreme court decisions, the Boer war or any important public question. The personal injunction of each member to say nothing about the matter prevented any information on the subject being had.

Several cabinet officers said that their calls had to do with Mrs. McKinley's continued improvement.

Some announcement may be made later about the matter, which was of either a social or personal nature and chiefly concerned those present.

Woman Held For Murder.

DETROIT, June 11.—A special to The Free Press from St. Louis, Mich., says Mrs. Carrie Yates, wife of a well known farmer living near there, has been placed under arrest by order of Prosecuting Attorney Kirby, charged with murder. Sunday the dead body of Jasper Wright, a neighbor of Mr. and Mrs. Yates, was found in a thicket near their home. Yesterday while a coroner's jury was investigating the cause of death Mrs. Yates testified that while in the woods gathering flowers she discovered the body of the man and called her husband and a man, by the name of Vanderkirk, who were near by. Mrs. Yates while on the witness stand disclaimed an intimate acquaintance with Wright, but later admitted that she had been alone with him. She then became hysterical and was excused. Mr. Yates followed her on the stand and stated that he was not acquainted with his neighbor, but admitted that he had heard rumors of intimacy between his wife and Wright. Mrs. Yates on being recalled confessed that she had been accustomed to meeting Wright and that when she went into the thicket Sunday she saw Wright kneeling on the ground. He complained of being sick and then rolled over and died. When Mrs. Yates concluded her statement, the prosecutor ordered her under arrest on a charge of murder, and the inquest was adjourned until June 13. Great excitement prevails over the affair.

Illinois Day Postponed.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Illinois day at the Pan-American exposition has been postponed from June 25 to Sept. 16. Governor Yates has decided that it would be impossible for the state to make as great a showing as was desirable if the day was as early as at first planned, and in order to give plenty of time for preparation he arranged for the new date. The decision was reached by Governor Yates after a long conference with Colonel H. P. Rucker, western representative of the exposition. The new date for the celebration will be not merely an Illinois day, but also a Chicago day. The various committees will at once begin preparations for what they will call Illinois-Chicago day.

Negro Gives Himself Up.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., June 11.—Hunted by armed men who threatened to lynch him for assaulting Miss Lizzie Gossard, a young white woman living across the line in Franklin county, Joseph Powell, colored, has given himself up to the officers to escape the vengeance of his pursuers. He was hurried to Chambersburg and placed in jail, and a strong guard was established about the building to prevent him from being taken out.

Predictions About Berry Crop.

OSWEGO, N. Y., June 11.—Relative to a recent report from Syracuse that heavy rains have disheartened Oswego county berry growers and the crop will be a failure if the weather does not improve, a prominent strawberry buyer says that the Oswego county crop will not be affected by rains and cold weather. The state crop will be the largest in recent years, he thinks.

The Pope Again Ill.

ROME, June 11.—The pope is again ill. He has been unable to take his customary drive. His physicians have recommended him not to leave his apartments during the entire summer. His recent fainting fit has left him weaker than before, and the extreme heat experienced here makes it desirable for his holiness to take the utmost precautions.

Rough Riders' Reunion.

COLORADO SPRINGS, June 11.—The rough riders have decided to hold their annual reunion in this city during the quarto centennial celebration, Aug. 1-3. It is expected that Vice President Roosevelt will attend the reunion.

ISLAND FREE TRADE.

Governor Allen Considering the Matter For Porto Rico.

REVENUES RENDER CHANGE POSSIBLE

Next to American Citizenship, Free Trade Is the Boon Most Desired by the Insular Inhabitants.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 11.—Since Governor Allen has returned here he has given the free trade problem earnest consideration. Treasurer Hollander has presented him with a report showing in detail the workings of his new revenue act. He shows that when the law shall have gone into full force on July 1 the island revenues will be sufficient for the island's maintenance without the customs duties on trade between Porto Rico and the United States.

The governor shows some hesitancy in acting, as he is yet undecided when it would be proper to call the legislature in extraordinary session for the purpose of declaring that the island has in operation an adequate system for collecting revenues, as it has the power to do under the Foraker organic act.

Were it known now that free trade would be declared on a given date the island sugar, still unshipped, would be cornered by speculators to the detriment of the planters. This Governor Allen wishes to avoid.

It is safe to say that the legislature will be called to meet in extra session as soon after July 1 as is practicable. July 25 has been suggested. By recent act of the legislature that date, which will be the third anniversary of the landing of the American troops and also Santiago (St. James') day, the feast of the patron saint of Spain, has been made a legal holiday.

The announcement that the government here was preparing to bring about free trade coincided with the decision of the supreme court that the tariff is valid. The two came together, but had no connection, as the governor and his cabinet had been considering the matter of free trade long before the supreme court's decision was known. Porto Ricans have been clamoring for free trade since the beginning, and nothing, unless it be American citizenship, would please them more.

Our Locomotives In France.

PARIS, June 11.—The assistant chief engineer of the Orleans railway when questioned regarding the report that the company was dissatisfied with the American locomotives purchased last year said: "All 30 have been running since November, and there is no idea of withdrawing them, but it is true that they burn more coal and that it is slightly more expensive to maintain them than other locomotives doing the same work. They were purchased because they were needed in a hurry. For this reason the company does not regret the purchase, but the experiment is not encouraging, and the company does not contemplate further purchases except in similar circumstances, as the French locomotives are equally satisfactory and more economical."

Honduras Building Opened.

BUFFALO, June 11.—The Honduras building in the exposition grounds was formally inaugurated last evening. Senor Francisco Altshul, the minister of promotion and public works in Honduras, personally superintended the construction of the building and the installation of the exhibits, which show a variety of tropical and subtropical products, including tobacco, and also some interesting specimens of native handicraft. A display which will greatly interest the people of the United States is that of 176 different varieties of hard woods, said to be the finest exhibition of its class on the grounds.

Dr. Tubbs States His Case.

SALINA, Kan., June 11.—Professor Frank D. Tubbs, recently removed from the chair of natural sciences in the Wesleyan university for alleged heresy, says of his case: "I knew nothing of the movement to oust me until the thing was actually done. It is usual to give notice of a month or so before action of that kind is taken. I am not a heretic. I challenge any member of the board of trustees, any preacher in the northwest Kansas conference or any one else to point out a single utterance of mine that he has heard that is in opposition to the doctrines of the Methodist church."

Heavy Rainfall In Nebraska.

CHADRON, Neb., June 11.—For three hours yesterday rain fell in torrents in Chadron and vicinity. The sewers were unable to carry the water off, and all basements and cellars are flooded. The rain was accompanied by a heavy hailstorm. Some houses in the low parts of the town were inundated, but the occupants were rescued. Meager reports from the country indicate great damage to crops and live stock. There were many narrow escapes from drowning in the canyons north of town. It was the heaviest rainfall ever known in Dawes county.

To Strengthen Central's Bridges.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The board of directors of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad company have appropriated $1,500,000 out of the surplus for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, toward the strengthening and renewal of bridges. This, with the $2,000,000 appropriated last year, will complete the work on the main line and West Shore and Pennsylvania division, leaving only some minor work to be done on branch lines.

They Cooked a Cartridge.

ROCHESTER, June 11.—Albert and Augusta Wilhardt, aged respectively 11 and 5 years, found a "funny piece of brass with a lead end" on the sidewalk in front of their home on Lincoln park yesterday and proceeded to cook it in the kitchen stove. The cartridge exploded, injuring the two children severely. Albert will lose a hand. Augusta will probably carry a fragment of the bullet in her shoulder for some time.

Modern Woodmen Meet.

ST. PAUL, June 11.—The twelfth biennial head camp, or national convention, of the Modern Woodmen of America was called to order in this city this morning, and many thousands of delegates and others are in the city. Each of the 629 delegates represents 1,000 members.

Secret Session Postponed.

HAVANA, June 11.—Owing to the absence of Senor Capote, president of the Cuban constitutional convention, the secret session that was to have been held yesterday was postponed until today.

MACHINISTS' ASSOCIATION.

Aid Voted to Nonunionists—Socialism Resolution Killed.

TORONTO, June 11.—The International Machinists' association in convention has decided to extend financial aid to nonunion men who went out with members of the association. President O'Connell stated that officials were not restricted as to the amount nonunion men should receive, but he added that in any event it would be sufficient to induce them to remain in the fight to the end. Since May 20 over $40,000 has been distributed among strikers, and as yet no regular system of benefits has gone into force.

A resolution was passed asking the American Federation of Labor to levy an assessment as provided for in their constitution to provide funds for the strikers. In the event of a long drawn out fight an appeal for aid will also be made to the trade organizations of Great Britain that were assisted by the machinists in their struggle for an eight hour day.

Regarding the question of finances, President O'Connell stated that a special strike fund amounting to over $150,000 was still intact.

The convention almost unanimously voted down a resolution pledging the association to socialism. It was also decided that a certificate of death from a Christian Scientist doctor would not be recognized in the future in a claim for death benefits.

The convention will conclude this evening.

Milwaukee is the favorite for the next place of meeting and will likely get it.

To Enlarge Governors Island.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Officers of the war department are considering plans for the enlargement of Governors Island, in New York harbor. The last congress appropriated $260,000 for this purpose, $200,000 to be expended by the engineer's and $60,000 under the direction of the quartermaster's department. The improvements contemplated will cost much more than this sum if carried out, as it is estimated that $1,500,000 will be necessary to enlarge the island, building the sea walls, filling in with earth and building a pier and warehouses for the army. It is probable, however, that plans will be approved by the secretary of war by which a part of the improvements can be undertaken, leaving the larger plans to be authorized by congress.

Y. M. C. A. Convention at Boston.

BOSTON, June 11.—Streaming into Boston from nearly every quarter of the globe come delegates to the semicentennial and international jubilee convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of North America. Practically every civilized country in the world was represented today when the convention was called to order in the exhibition hall of the Mechanics' building, and it is confidently expected that there will be nearly 5,000 delegates from the different associations in attendance during the six days the convention is in session.

Truesdale Denies Reports.

NEW YORK, June 11.—President Truesdale of the Lackawanna railroad, being asked as to the truth of the report from Scranton, Pa., that he had resigned, states that there is absolutely nothing in it, that it is only one of the many falsehoods that are being circulated among the company's shopmen now on strike by the leaders of the strikers for the purpose of misleading them and to keep them in ignorance of the real situation.

Tried to Steal Regents' Papers.

ALBANY, June 11.—An attempt was made to burglarize the department of the state board of regents at the state capitol for the evident purpose of obtaining question papers to be used at the coming regents' examinations to be held throughout the state. Two shots were fired by the watchman. The would be burglar escaped, but blood stains show a wound was inflicted. There is absolutely no clew as to whom the person is.

New Hospital at Yokohama.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The navy's new hospital at Yokohama is about completed, and a letter to Surgeon General Van Reypen of the navy states that the building is greatly admired, occupying a commanding location on one of the bluffs and looking from a distance like the capitol at Washington. The Japanese government has given a lease in perpetuity for the site occupied by the hospital.

Manley a Candidate.

LEWISTON, Me., June 11.—A special to the Lewiston Journal from Augusta, Me., says that Hon. J. H. Manley has announced that he is a candidate for the nomination for governor of Maine at the conclusion of Governor Hill's term. Mr. Manley declares that he favors a one year term for the governor and the suppression of the whisky traffic.

Remedy Worse Than Disease.

SALEM, Mass., June 11.—Alexander J. Pride of this city applied three gallons of naphtha to some articles of clothing and to his parlor carpet to destroy moths and then, going to the kitchen, attempted to light a fire. The explosion which followed wrecked the building, injured Pride, damaged surrounding property and caused a fire.

Rioting Renewed In Belfast.

BELFAST, June 11.—The rioting which began here on Sunday in an attack upon the Corpus Christi procession was renewed last night, when the crowd vigorously stoned the police. The latter were finally compelled to invoke military aid, and the rioters were dispersed by lancers.

DEMOCRATIC REORGANIZATION.

Colonel Breckinridge Gives His Views of the Party's Need.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 11.—In reply to a letter asking for his views on the reorganization of the Democratic party and future issues Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge, former Democratic congressman says:

"The American people will never consent to such legislation concerning the currency as will put into a statute the views of Mr. Bryan. It is equally true that the American people will not approve of the territorial policy advocated by Mr. Bryan. For the next few years the currency issue and the expansion issue tendered by the Democratic party and accepted by the Republican party have been settled."

In the same letter he says:

"We are therefore confronted with this actual state of facts. It is impossible to win without such a nominee and platform as will secure the support of those Democrats who refused to vote for Mr. Bryan in 1896 and 1900, and it is also impossible to win without the cordial support of the regular Democratic party.

"It has occurred to me that the issue in 1904 might be our relations with our new possessions. That these will be retained is now certain. That the principles promulgated by the supreme court in the late opinions will be accepted by the people is certain."

After outlining the questions involved, Colonel Breckinridge says:

"To adopt this policy does not require that any Democrat should retract any utterance heretofore made or apologize for any course heretofore pursued."

Gifts For President and Wife.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The president and Mrs. McKinley have received from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh of Colorado the exquisite gifts that were to have been souvenirs of the presidential visit to Colorado had Mrs. McKinley's illness not cut short their western visit. Yesterday, according to the official programme marked out for the trip, the presidential party was to have breakfasted with Mr. and Mrs. Walsh at Glenwood Springs. The souvenir selected for the president is a book of views bound in Russian leather and mounted in gold and a name plate with date and place engraved thereon. The views are steel engravings and show all the points of interest which the party were to have visited. For Mrs. McKinley there was a gold cardcase suitably engraved with name and date.

College to Change Location.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 11.—At a meeting of the trustees of the Bible Normal college of this city it was decided to move the location of the college from Springfield to Hartford. The purpose of the change is that the college may be near the Hartford Theological seminary. An arrangement has been made by which each institution shall freely extend its advantages to the other. It is not proposed that the two shall coalesce. Each will retain its separate individuality and responsibility, its own board of management, its own teaching force, its own separate buildings. Each will continue its own line of work.

Fifty-nine Chinamen Drowned.

VICTORIA, B. C., June 11.—The steamer Kinshia Maru has arrived from the orient, being the first of the reorganized Nippon Yusen Kaisha service, which now gives bimonthly instead of monthly steamers. She brought news that a Chinese passenger boat bound from Chusan to Ningpo was upset during a squall on May 8, and out of 68 on board only 9 were saved. Thirty bodies were washed ashore. George W. Schilling, who left New York in August, 1897, to walk around the world, has reached Kobe from India, being unable to walk through China owing to its unsettled condition.

A CHICAGO TRAGEDY.

Mysterious Death of Two at the Great Northern Hotel.

BULLET WOUND IN TEMPLE OF EACH

Man and Woman Registered as L. Hartman and Wife of New York Found Dead In Bed—Evidences of a Carefully Planned End.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Side by side, each with a bullet wound in the temple, the dead bodies of L. Hartman and his wife were found in their bed at the Great Northern hotel last evening. The room showed no evidences of a struggle. Both lifeless forms were composed, the covering of the bed well tucked about them, but the revolver clutched in the right hand of the husband told the story of the double tragedy.

Of the pair that courted death so successfully nothing is known by the managers of the hotel beyond a report that the man has wealthy connections in New York and that the woman apparently was once an actress under the stage name of Rose Violet. From information given by a woman who inquired for them in the morning it is supposed that the case is one of a runaway marriage, with death as the result of despondency over the obduracy of an unforgiving father.

Hartman and his wife registered at the hotel June 6, giving as their address New York. Both were stylishly dressed and appeared to be persons of means. They did not mingle with the other guests and spent most of the time in their rooms. They were reserved in manner, but from the evidences of affection they displayed it was surmised by attaches of the hotel that they were on their wedding trip.

Early Sunday night they retired to their apartments, and nothing was seen of them until last evening, when they were found dead in bed. The chambermaid tried to gain entrance to the room in the forenoon, but was unable to do so. Later in the day she repeated the attempt, with the same result. Repeated knockings failed to obtain an answer, and, the hotel office being notified, the room was broken into, and the discovery was made of the double tragedy.

Telephone Company Hard Up.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Central Union Telephone stockholders have received a shock in the form of a special circular from John I. Sabin, the new president of the company, requesting them to consider the best way of securing $3,000,000 during the coming year to finance the company. Mr. Sabin was placed in charge of the Central Union Telephone company by the American Telephone company, the owner of the Bell patents, in order to put it on a paying basis. For three weeks Mr. Sabin has been devoting most of his time to a study of the conditions of the company and the possibilities of the field in which it operates, and his conclusions are embraced in the terse language of his circular. The Central Union Telephone company was organized 12 years ago and operates exchanges and toll stations in the smaller cities of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

Unger and Brown Guilty.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Dr. August M. Unger and F. Wayland Brown, on trial for conspiracy to defraud insurance companies through the death of Miss Marie Defenbach, were last evening found guilty and sentenced to the penitentiary under the indeterminate act. Frank H. Smiley, indicted with Unger and Brown, pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence. It is likely that he will escape with a light sentence. The evidence in the case showed that Unger, Brown, Smiley and Miss Defenbach entered into a conspiracy by which Smiley was to appear as the affianced husband of the woman. She was then to be ill and apparently die, leaving the insurance, which included one policy in a stock company and two in fraternal organizations, the total aggregating $25,000.

Constitution's New Mast.

BRISTOL, R. I., June 11.—A new stick from which the topmast for the cup defender is being shaped out on Herreshoff pier is of tamarack wood, and there is not a check or a knot in the stick. Some members of the crew gave the main boom, which is propped up on blocking on the boat's deck, a coat of paint, covering up the patches where the paint was chaffed off last week. The shells of the boom blocks which were left hanging to the boom were varnished in the afternoon. Just before 6 o'clock last evening the old cup defender Columbia arrived. The last visit of the Columbia to Bristol was in the fall of 1899.

Ancient Landmark Destroyed.

BAYFIELD, Wis., June 11.—The old Catholic church at La Pointe, Madeline island, has been totally destroyed by fire. The church was an ancient landmark and had been visited by hundreds of tourists annually. The original church was built in 1835 by Father Baraga and rebuilt at a later date. It contained an ancient painting, "The Descent From the Cross," which Indian tradition says was a gift to the La Pointe mission in 1869 by Father Marquette. It is the opinion of some that the picture was stolen and the church set on fire to cover up the loss.

Locomotive Offices In Schenectady.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 11.—According to the articles of incorporation filed with the county clerk, the principal offices of the American Locomotive company are to be located in this city. Sunday Street Sprinkling.

Those who had occasion to be on the street last Sunday, and there were many of them, found both city and borough extremely dusty. They made the discovery that the sprinkling wagons were not on duty. As it was the first really pleasant Sunday of the summer, when there has been any chance for dust, there had been no previous opportunity to make that discovery. The fact is, however, that it has never been the custom in either city or borough to have the streets sprinkled on Sunday.

While there is no objection to Sunday spinkling on the part of the owners of the local wagons, provided the people are willing to pay for the additional help required, it is a question how the public at large would view it. With Sunday's high wind, the fact was brought very prominently to mind that the streets can get extremely dusty even in twenty-four hours. There were probably more people on the local streets the day in question than have been there for a long time. Most of them, too, were their holiday attire. The question which those in authority would like to have answered is whether or not the people prefer the clouds of dust to having the men employed on the watering carts busy all the day usually set aside for rest for both man and beast.

While many pedestrians complained about the dust, those who most strongly objected to it were the proprietors of the hotels, restaurants and other places of business which are permitted to keep open seven days in the week. They were either compelled to close their doors and endure the heat or else open them and bear the dust.

Chief Kiely, of the city police force, has evolved a new method of dealing with those offenders who have been in the habit of dispensing intoxicants without a license and on Sunday. It savors somewhat of the methods adopted by Mrs. Nation in her crusade against the saloons of Kansas. Last Sunday the Chief detailed Patrolman Higgins to visit a place on South Second street against which many complaints have been made. The old method of procedure was to raid the place, secure the necessary evidence and then allow the matter to drag its weary way through the courts. The new scheme was much more energetic and, judging from the results, more effective. Patrolman Higgins walked into the establishment and promptly "cleaned house." No other words express the situation so well. No arrests were made but the police believe that the establishment will be more law abiding in the future.

There are many subscribers of The Daily Press who spend a portion of their summers at one of numerous seaside or mountain resorts in this part of the land. While they like to get away from home and familiar things for a time, they still like to keep in touch with Plainfield. The Daily Press furnishes the best medium. It will be mailed to any address for 10 cents a week and the address may be changed as often as desired without extra charge.

Copies of Councilman Lee's proposed ordinance regarding city weights and measures have been sent to the members of the Council. This was done at the request of Councilman Dumont so that all the members might have an opportunity of considering the proposed ordinance before it came up for second reading.

Both of Plainfield's summer hostelries, the Hotel Netherwood and the Moutain Park Inn, are to be opened soon and there is every prospect of a successful season for both of them. They will bring a host of strangers to Plainfield during the summer months and city and borough will be benefitted accordingly.

Now that North Plainfield has provided for street signs, it will be up to that borough to join with Plainfield in a crusade to see that the houses are properly numbered. Part of the borough sadly lacks the proper house numbers.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has put into service a number of new passenger coaches which are being used chiefly on the Plainfield express trains. The Plainfield commuters find them very satisfactory.

The only man who worked hard in the Hope chapel's baseball game at Garwood Saturday was the scorer. As it was, his book wasn't large enough to accommodate the errors.

All over the country reports are heard to the effect that there is a wonderful renewal of interest in tennis. It was felt in Plainfield some time ago.

The automobile is no longer a strange sight in Plainfield. On Sundays, particularly, they have grown to be a very common sight.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

The competitive drill among the three companies forming the Plainfield High School battalion, held in Washington Hall last week, was a closely contested affair. The winning company received but twenty-one points more than the next highest. Captain Tweedy's Company, A, which was awarded the prize, scored 249 points, while Company C, composed of the younger pupils and commanded by Captain C. Ames Brooks, obtained 228, and Company B, in command of Captain Fred Mason, received 218 points. In the competition among the cadets of the battalion for the individual prize it was difficult for the judges to decide upon the winner. All the young soldiers drilled well and many excellently. When the weeding out process had reduced the ranks to ten members the increasing interest among the spectators was manifested by repeated applause. The drilling of one little man in Company C, Cadet Cyril Brown, attracted much attention. He was selected as fourth sergeant of his company.

Gave Rare Coin By Mistake.

In payment for a ticket at the St. Mary ball game, Saturday afternoon, a spectator gave a rare coin, which is doubtless very valuable. The management is desirous of restoring it to the owner, who undoubtedly gave it by mistake. The person can have it by applying to the secretary, Thomas Comerford.

Solo By Small Boy.

At the children's exercises at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Saturday, a solo was rendered by Master Alfred Manley. The young man possesses a voice of much merit, and his selection was one of the features of the programme.

Morning Sessions.

Crescent Marks Africa for Its Own.

The most interesting field of Mussulman activity is Africa, the land which saw the glory of the faith, and which the cresent seems to have marked for its own. Here is fanaticism which recalls the middle ages; here, too, on the other hand, is Moslem learning at its highest and best. The people of northern Africa believe that it will be possible for them some day to recover their ancient glory, and do not look favorably upon the Christian usurper. History and the talk of the faithful have taught them of the religious wars and the time when the crescent flag floated over Spain and seemed to dominate all Europe. Then, too, in an oasis of the Sahara, is situated the great convent of the Senouissia, that society from whose ranks, legend says, shall arise the Mahdi who will put all things under his feet. It is no wonder that missionary zeal finds a fertile field in Africa. N. Y. Tribune.

Why Apes Cannot Talk.

The latest retouching of Darwin's theory of the descent of man from monkeys has been given by Dr. McNamara in a lecture before the Royal College of Surgeons in London. He said it had been proved that man and the anthropoid ape were derived from the same stock, but that the nerve center which controlled man's faculty of speech was absent in the ape, so that the latter could not learn to talk. The anterior lobes of the ape's brain, containing the part controlling speech, are defective, he said, because the skull is ossified during the creature's first year, into a rigid closed case that keeps the brain from expanding. The skull of man does not consolidate until adult age, and so the anterior lobes and speech nerve centers can go on developing until the twentieth year.—Little Chronicle.

English Royal Customs.

Everybody may not know that in royal households it is not the custom to relight a candle. For however short a time it has been burning, if once extinguished, it is never used again—at least not in the precincts of the palace. Another quaint monarchial custom is that there are always two sets of servants, to insure better service. The one set goes on duty for three weeks, and when that time has expired another set will take their place, so that in the sovereign's palace there is always one complete retinue at work while their duplicates are resting until their three weeks of service comes round again.—London Onlooker.

"What's the matter with you; are you crazy?"
"Never formed any opinion."
"Well, say, tell me what you mean by such answers."
"Stranger, don't tell any of the fellers round here, but I'm in trainin' for jury duty at th' next session o' court."—Baltimore American.

First Beggar—Why didn't you tackle that lady? She might have given you something!

Second Beggar—I let her go because I understand my business better than you. I never ask a woman for anything when she is alone; but when two women are together you can get money from both, because each one is afraid the other will think her stingy if she refuses. WELCOMED NEW MEMBERS.

Reception Given to Members of Confirmation Class at Grace Church.

The Girls' Friendly Society of Grace P. E. church gave a reception in the parish house last evening to the members of the confirmation class, twenty-two in all, and a most profitable and enjoyable time was had. The new members were given a most hospitable welcome by the members of the society.

A pleasant feature was the informal programme including piano and violin solos by Miss Emma Hyatt and Miss Cornelia Hyatt and recitations by Miss Whitney, all of which was well received. After the entertainment refreshments were served by the members. Miss Adams is president of the society, and under her direction the reception was arranged so successfully.

CHAPTER VIII.

Thaddeus Braddon's best developed faculty was that of holding his peace and letting matters take their course, especially where women were concerned. It was enough for him that the two who represented all the world to him were well married. He started for Europe with his daughter, and Stanton reached San Francisco none the wiser for what the old banker knew.

The young lawyer had almost a week to dispose of before the sailing of the steamer. The thought of it was horrible. He knew no one. He did not wish to know anyone. If he had seen a familiar face approaching he would have fled from it.

He was unknown in California, and the common civilities accorded to a stranger were responded to by him so coldly that they were rarely repeated. Very soon he found himself in his ideal condition of being let alone. And yet it was not his ideal.

He called in vain on common sense to help him. He upbraided himself. He denounced himself. "I'm making an idiotic fool of myself," he groaned. But between fact and philosophy the unfortunate shuttlecock was mercilessly battledoored, while a very common disease developed, in accordance with very well known laws.

If he could only have realized that he was desperately in love, the case would have promised much more satisfactory recovery. He insisted upon considering his symptoms the upheavals of remorse for having cruelly wronged a woman. He felt that she must despise him.

He knew that she was his wife.

A few business telegrams arrived and were quickly answered. A few friendly inquiries were forwarded, and were utterly ignored. A letter came from Dr. Borden, requiring a reply, and Stanton struggled with it.

The good doctor wrote:

"My Dear Boy:—I trusted you that night, and I trust you still, but I am greatly troubled by reports and lack of facts. If you led me into marrying you to a blank, simply that you might secure your uncle's fortune (however wise that step might be), you betrayed my love for you. It was a crime. If she was a woman whom you are ashamed to acknowledge, I have still done you an injury rather than which I would willingly have sacrificed both my hands."

"I shall land in the insane asylum before the steamer starts," Stanton groaned, as he walked the room with Dr. Borden's letter in his hand.

Passing a mirror he paused, folded his arms, and stood, for a time, calmly looking into it.

"Robert Stanton, you are a disgrace to humanity," he muttered. Throwing himself down at the table, he wrote to Dr. Borden:

"I am leaving for Japan, and must answer you briefly. You did not marry me to a blank or to a woman I am ashamed to acknowledge. She was precisely what I represented, a true woman, and I would that I were as worthy of my wife as she is of me."

With a thrill of supreme delight Stanton hailed the first motion of the wheels as the steamer started, but it was of very short duration.

He looked about the deck with a shudder. It was crowded with the promiscuous company always to be found on the Pacific.

Before the land had disappeared Stanton discovered that it had been all a mistake to imagine that the starting of the steamer would better his condition. It had only changed it for the worse.

As the dark fringe sank into the eastern horizon he clutched the rail, by pure muscular resistance to prevent himself from leaping into the water; not to suicide, but in an overwhelming desire to get back again to that fading fragment of America.

The thought of imprisonment in that steamer while she crept over the thousands of miles of blank ocean was more horrible than anything he had suffered on the land.

"Oh, Stanton, you fool!" he gasped. Turning his back upon the east, he walked deliberately up to a company of passengers and began conversation with one of them.

Before the sun had set the second day the passengers generally had discovered that there was entertainment wherever Stanton chanced to be, and that he was always the center of it.

There is a wide diversity of taste and sentiment upon those steamers, yet no one seemed to take exception to the New York lawyer.

"He's the jolliest fellow I ever met," said a somewhat wayward government clerk to two or three near him, when a week from shore.

"Don't often find a jovial chap like him on board, that's a fact," replied a purchasing agent.

"He is a great addition to our company," said a venerable returning missionary, whose only objection to Stanton was that such men spoke well of him.

"Jolly? Jovial?" the captain of the steamer repeated, as his gray eyes wandered down the deck to where Stanton, as usual, was the center of a merry, laughing company. "Either I don't know what those words mean or I don't agree with you. We've been out for a week, but that man hasn't smiled since he came on board."

It was difficult to believe, but the three watched and waited, only to discover that the captain's eyes were sharper than their senses.

He was the source of many a merry peal of laughter, but he never smiled,

He thought of the imprisonment on that steamer.

and the fact sank into the missionary's heart. He knew that there was something wrong with a man who never smiled. He set himself to investigate, in the hope that he might render some assistance, and came, very correctly, to his preliminary conclusions. Then he tried to secure an interview, but Stanton was never alone.

In reality the young lawyer had simply discovered that of all disagreeable things which he would instinctively put away he was himself the most disagreeable, and in a choice of evils he was putting himself away by keeping others about him. Many a troubled soul had done the same before, but he knew nothing of such sentiments, either in himself or in others.

At last the missionary succeeded in finding Stanton alone on deck early one morning. He made a few preliminary remarks concerning the human duty of bearing one another's burdens, and said:

"You have more friends on board than any of us, yet you seem to me to be in need of a real friend and to lack one. I wish that you could accept my sacred office, rather than its unworthy holder, and give me your confidence."

"Do I act like one depressed?" Stanton asked, absently.

"You do, sir, and you are," replied the missionary. "You are the life of the steamer, but your own heart is not in it. Do not be angry, sir. Remember that my only desire is to serve you. Let me even say frankly that you have seemed to me like one struggling with an unfortunate love-affair. Am I not correct?"

"You are correct," said Stanton.

"I am sorry, very sorry," the missionary replied, with a look and voice saying plainly that he too had suffered, long ago. "Was she unworthy?" he asked, gently.

"She was exceptionally worthy," Stanton said.

"That is something to be thankful for," the missionary exclaimed, glad to find something consoling. "It is well that you do not repent having cast your pearls to swine."

"I am thankful," Stanton replied, with more energy than had been in his voice for many a day. He was looking backward.

"Does she love another?" the missionary asked.

"No."

"There again you are fortunate. Surely you must still have hope."

"I have."

"Good. Keep it. Hope deferred makes the heart sick, and your heart is sick. I knew it. But hope is the anchor to the soul, after all. Don't let the anchor go. Was there opposition?"

"No."

"Sometimes a little opposition is really a necessary stimulus. Why did she refuse you?"

"She did not refuse me."

"Can it be that you are so sensitive as to suffer all this simply for some fancied lack of reciprocation in her face?"

"I never saw her face."

"My friend, you astonish me. I've heard of matches made by correspondence or by mutual friends, but I never believed much in them. Tell me of this one. Was it by writing?"

"I never wrote to her. I never saw her handwriting but twice."

"Then the mutual friends who have brought about this suffering must have a weight of responsibility."

Mrs. Wm. H. Ludlow, of 88 Jackson avenue, says: "I had backache and a sort of dull pain across my loins for several years. If I sat for any length of time and tried to rise I had a sharp pain in my kidneys. Walking any distance or standing aggravated the difficulty. I could not rest well at night from the fact that I had to be constantly changing about from one position to another trying to free myself from pain. I used quite a number of remedies but got no permanent relief. I was prevailed upon to get Doan's Kidney Pills from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I must say they did me a great deal of good. It is seldom that I feel any pain in my back and when I do a few doses of this remedy never fails to relieve me. I know others who have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results."

WASHABLE GOWNS.

Cotton and Linen Fabrics Greatly Employed.

For tailor made gowns of pique, to be much worn this summer, there are large Louis XIII collars of ecru batiste ornamented with white open embroidery.

Shirt waist costumes are already shown in great variety. They are of linen of the natural and other tints, of pique, zephyr, galatea and batiste, and consist of a bodice and skirt of the same material trimmed to match, the bodice being some one of the many variations of the shirt waist style.

The picture shows a costume of biscuit tinted linon. It is made over taffeta of the same shade, and the skirt is loosely plaited all around, with a band of lace at the foot. The plaited bodice has a guimpe and plastron of lace and a bertha of embroidered bise silk, terminating in front in two long tabs with gold buttons. The collar is of black velvet, and the crossed black velvet cravat has long ends, terminating in gold tips. The belt is also of black velvet. The sleeves of plaited linon have a band of lace down the outside and terminate in a linon frill at the elbow. The hat of two toned straw is trimmed with a drapery of embroidered tulle and a cluster of roses.

DIFFERENT BODICES.

They Are Universally Worn With Plain Skirts.

The fashion of wearing a bodice different from the skirt is one of the most convenient ever invented, especially for warm weather, and it seems to have become so firmly imbedded in public favor as to be permanent. It permits of many changes of costume at comparatively small expense, for a plain skirt worn with a cambric shirt waist looks quite different from the way it appears when accompanying a bodice of silk or lace. One skirt serves various purposes in this way and is suitable for many different kinds of occasions.

The cut shows a corselet skirt of thin cloth. It is quite plain and is closed down the left side by little loops and buttons. It is worn with a corsage of guipure trimmed with bands of taffeta, which form stripes in front and on the full sleeves and edge the collar. The accompanying hat is of plaited taffeta trimmed with a wreath of flowers and a jeweled buckle. JUDIC CHOLLET.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county.

Gentlemen: Whereas, at a previous meeting of this board a special committee was appointed with power to proceed with the building of the necessary extensions to the bridges on Westfield avenue, from Orchard street to the Cranford township line. Your committee would report that they have examined said bridges, and estimate that the cost of the extensions would be in the neighborhood of $2,000, but believe it would be advisable and a saving to the county too, at the time of making said extensions, the present existing bridges be repaired, which, in the opinion of your committee, can be done at an outlay of $1,000 to $1,500, and would recommend that said committee be authorized to make said necessary repairs at the time of making said extensions.

Signed,
Noah Woodruff, Henry Krouse, John Farrell, Committee.

Freeholder Robison moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By committee on line bridge between Morris and Union counties:

May 23, 1901.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union:

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to meet a similar committee of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Morris county regarding the advisability and probable cost of constructing an iron truss bridge over the Passaic River at South street, in the township of New Providence, would report that said committees had met and that it was the opinion of said committees that said bridge should be built, and your committee would recommend that said bridge be built at a total cost not exceeding $3,200, and that the cost to Union county shall not exceed $1,600.

Signed, Jno F. Wahl, Benjamin King, Henry Krouse, N. W. Bonnel, Committee.

Freeholder McCandless moved that the report be received and recommendations adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By committe on bridge, Mountain avenue, Springfield, N. J.

May 23, 1901.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen: The committee appointed as to the advisability of repairing bridge on Mountain avenue, near golf grounds, respectfully report that they have examined said bridge, and recommend the building of a brick arch, iron girder bridge, not exceeding $500 in cost.

Signed,
N. W. Bonnel, E. K. Adams, Henry Krouse, Committee.

Freeholder Robison moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the committee on appropriations:

Elizabeth, N. J., May 23, 1901.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union:

Gentlemen: Your committee on appropriations, after carefully estimating the probable necessities of the various departments of the county government, providing for the payment of the bonds falling due, and the interest on the bonded debt, are of the opinion that with the same economical administration of the county affairs there will be no necessity of raising any more than was raised last year, and that two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000) will be all that it will be necessary to raise by taxation.

We would therefore respectfully report and recommend that the sum of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000) together with the sum of twenty-eight thousand dollars ($28,000) assets now on hand, and all miscellaneous items which may be collected during the present fiscal year, be appropriated for the expenses of the current year.

Your committee would further recommend that the amounts hereafter mentioned be certified by the County Board of Assessors, and placed in the tax levy for the year nineteen hundred and one, as per accompanying resolution:

Resolved by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, That the sum of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000) be raised by tax for the use of said county for the fiscal year commencing May 8th, nineteen hundred and one, to be appropriated, together with the sum of twenty-eight thousand dollars ($28,000) of the assets of the county, for the following purposes:

For courts	$36,000
For county jail	6 000
For lunatics	43 000
For compensation and lawful expenses of Chosen Freeholders and Committees, and Salaries of their offices	12 000
For fees of coroners	500
For elections	14 000
For stationery	2,000
For advertising, publishing and printing	2,000
For incidental expenses and schools, burial of soldiers and monuments	22,000
For children guardian account	2,000
For payment of principal on bonded debt	5,000
For payment of interest on bonded debt	14,000
For payment of bank interest on temporary loans	1,000
For permanent improvement of public buildings and grounds	8,000
For erection and repairs to culverts and bridges	35,000
For repairs on county roads	17,500
For hospitals	8,000
Total	$228,000
Less Assets of the County	28,000
Total Amount to be Raised by Taxation	$200,000

To be assessed and collected in the manner and at the times prescribed by the laws for the assessment and collection of taxes for the use of the State, and the laws for assessment and collection of taxes in the cities of Elizabeth, Plainfield, Summit and Rahway, in said county respectively; and that the board hereby direct the assessors of the respective townships and wards in said county to assess the said sum of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000) together with the sum of four thousand six hundred and thirty-eight dollars and fifty-four cents ($4,638 54) interest on county road bonds, on the inhabitants and their estates, agreeable to the law for the time being for the raising of money by taxation for the use of the county of Union, State of New Jersey; and that the said assessors meet at the Court House in the city of Elizabeth on the third Monday of July next, at 10 o'clock a. m., to adjust and ascertain the proportion of said sum to be levied in each township and ward in said county, and that the clerk of the board send a copy of this resolution to each of said assessors.

Signed,
John Farrell, Noah Woodruff, Henry Krouse, Jacob Brucklacher, W. A. Westphal, Committee on Appropriations.

Freeholder King moved that the report be received and the resolutions therein contained adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Farrell:

Resolved, That a committee of five (5) be appointed to examine the bridge on Jaques avenue, Rahway, and report on the advisability and probable cost of widening said bridge to the full width of said avenue.

On motion of Freeholder King the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Farrell, Adams, King, Scudder and Gerstung.

By Freeholder Farrell:

Whereas, The commissioners heretofore appointed in the matter of the application of this board for the appointment of commissioners to condemn lands belonging to Jonathan P. Glasby and others, have filed their report, which report was duly confirmed by the court; and

Whereas, Exceptions were filed to said report by George T. Parrot, attorney for the estate of John A. May; and

Whereas, Upon conference with said attorney of said May estate the county attorney recommended that the numerous exceptions filed by the various parties in interest were without merit with the exception of the above named; and

Whereas, For the purpose of avoiding any litigation over said report recommended that this board pay to the estate of said May, or its attorneys, the sum of $200, in addition to the award made by said commissioners; therefore be it

Resolved, That E. M. Wood, county collector, be and hereby is authorized to pay said J. A. May estate, or its attorney, the sum of $200, in addition to the award made by the commissioners in said matter, and that said sum of $200 be paid by said county collector from the funds received by him from the sale of buildings in said proceedings herein referred to, he, the said collector, taking full receipt and releases therefor.

Freeholder Farrell moved the adoption of the foregoing preamble and resolution, which was duly seconded.

County Attorney Codington briefly explained that of the exceptions to awards filed with commissioners none were of much merit except in the case of the May estate, in which the award made appeared to be insufficient, and he would advise the payment of the additional $200, as in the event of the matter being referred back to the commissioners, the probable cost to the county would be about $500.

Freeholder Farrell's motion was then on roll call unanimously adopted.

Freeholder Farrell moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned until Thursday, June 6, 1901, at 2:30 p. m.

S. Rusling Ryno, Clerk.

Attempt to Grow Cotton on West African Coast

An Effort to Be Made to Develop Competition for Our Great Southern Staple

ENGLAND is going to make an effort to raise cotton in her West African colonies. At the present time practically all the cotton used by England is grown in the United States, but English manufacturers and shipowners have long believed that the right conditions existed along the west African coast for the successful cultivation of cotton.

Attempts are being made to threaten American supremacy in cotton production, not only by this proposed experiment in West Africa by England, but by the same class of experiments by Germany in her African colonies, and by an increased production of Egyptian cotton owing to the increased productiveness of the Egyptian cotton lands that will come with the completion of the wonderful irrigation system that is now being constructed along the Nile.

It is a Liverpool firm of shipowners who are arranging to make the first experiment at cotton cultivation in West Africa. For this purpose they have employed six American cotton-growing experts who are to conduct the experiments in that region. They will select such territory as they think best suited for cotton cultivation, and in this will be limited only to English territory, or possibly Liberia. Of the West African English territory it is thought that either Lagos or Sierra Leone will be found the best adapted to all needs. At Lagos during the past year some little effort has been made toward cotton cultivation, and a small shipment of the staple was made from there this spring. Other minor experiments along the same line have been made in French West African colonies, but with only a partial success.

The history of the cotton cultivation in West Africa really dates back to the breaking out of the civil war in the United States, when the blockade of southern ports shut off the supply of cotton from this country to Europe. The cotton manufacturing industries of England in particular had to have raw material, and with the supply from this country shut off, had to seek elsewhere for a new source. It was then that they turned to West Africa, and many predictions were made that it would be but a few years at the most when England would be independent of American cotton fields for her supply of raw material for her mills. The agitation of the subject caused a small rush of immigrants and the investment of considerable capital in West Africa for the purpose of cultivating cotton. But the men who attempted the introduction of the staple into the new fields were without practical experience, and though cotton has been grown there in small quantities ever since the results of the experiment it cannot be said to have ever proven a success. During these years of cultivation Liverpool has received all the cotton grown in West Africa. In 1864, 1,710 bales were received in Liverpool. The largest number of bales received since then was in 1869, when 19,300 bales went to Liverpool. Since that date the figures have fluctuated, showing a tendency, however, to a steady decrease. In 1870, 13,000 bales of West African cotton were imported into Liverpool; in 1880, the number of bales was 574; in 1890, 3,333 bales arrived there; in 1895, 207; the next year not one bale was received; in 1897, just one solitary bale was shipped, and since then a few hundred bales have annually been imported. The West African cotton that has been sent to Liverpool has been of the short-staple variety, and not of a very good color. It is, however, a fairly good cotton, with a better staple than the east Indian. When "middling American" was quoted last year at 11 cents, "West African was quoted at 9¼ to 10 cents.

Liverpool cotton men do not attach much importance to this new enterprise, although some interest is being taken in it. The general opinion there is that our southern states will always have a monopoly of producing the cotton mostly in favor, not only in the United States, but on the continent and in England, for general purposes. Suggestions have been made that Egyptian cotton might in time be produced in such quantities as to be a formidable rival to American cotton; but there does not seem to be much foundation for this suggestion, the Egyptian cotton being best suited, owing to its long and fine staple, for special purposes; and, what is more important, the production will always be comparatively very limited, even when the great irrigation system, now in course of construction, is in full operation. Experiments on the west coast of Africa may, however, develop into the actual, though comparatively small competitive trade with the cotton-growing industry of the southern states. It is only a bare possibility, however. An attempt will be made to acclimatize American cotton seed on the west coast; but the chances are that the cotton which will be produced from this seed will not be identical with, nor as good as, the home product. This has been found from other experiments made in different parts of the world with American cotton seed.

It might occur to American cotton men that the extra distance from the west coast of Africa to Liverpool (Lagos is 4,387 miles from Liverpool), as compared with that from the American seaboard, would permanently prevent west coast cotton from competing with American cotton. It should be borne in mind, however, that the American cotton, or rather the English buyer, is handicapped by the fact that in most cases ships which take over cotton from the United States to England, have to make the return trip largely in ballast, so that one voyage across the Atlantic must practically pay for two. This is because the ships have little or no cargo to carry westward. With the west coast, however, it would be different. The trade between Liverpool and the west coast of Africa is profitable both ways, the ships carrying all sorts of raw materials from Africa to Liverpool and taking back full cargoes of manufactured articles. Its West African trade is one of the most prosperous that Liverpool has, and it is growing all the time. The development of cotton growing on the west coast would undoubtedly greatly increase the export trade of Liverpool to that region. It is easy to see, therefore, that the freight charges from Africa, while for a much longer distance, need not necessarily be greater than from the American coast—that is, the shipowners can afford to charge less freight rates for the reason that they make money both ways. If, therefore, this experiment on the west coast be successful, American cotton growers may be faced with a competition, even though limited, which heretofore has been thought absolutely out of the question.

SCENE IN THE COTTON PRODUCING TERRITORY OF WEST AFRICA.

But there is not the same confidence expressed in the coming experiments that marked those begun in the sixties, even though the present experiments are to be made along scientific lines of cultivation. The Liverpool shipowners who are undertaking the enterprise look upon it as purely experimental, and are only hoping for success. It is safe to say, however, that if they do not succeed it will be useless for others to try where they have failed, for they are noted for the thoroughness with which they conduct any enterprise which they attempt. They are familiar with West African conditions, and are strong believers in its future greatness as a producing territory. They have given the cotton-growing industry a great amount of careful study, and have carefully investigated every experiment that has been made in transplanting American cotton seed into other localities. One of the greatest obstacles that confronts them is the indisposition of the natives of West Africa to perform hard physical toil, and the tropical climate makes it impossible to import foreign labor for their purpose.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Glen Ridge team defeated the Morristown team Saturday in the East Jersey Golf League tournament, by a score of 8 to 0

Miss vanHerwerden, one of the best players on the Hillside course, has been playing an excellent game this season. She plays from scratch and generally finds a place among the leaders.

As soon as the college boys get home for the summer vacation some fine playing at golf may be looked for on both the Park and Hillside courses. As yet they have little opportunity to play.

A baseball match has been arranged between the clerks of the butchers and bakers of this city. The game is scheduled to be played at Dewey Park on Independence Day. A silver cup will be given to the winning team.

The third class nine of the Plainfield High School defeated the "High School Relics," a picked nine captained by Cyrus Kinsman, in a seven inning game yesterday afternoon on the Hope chapel grounds. The score was 13 to 11. VanAuken and Ulrick for the winning team and Phillips and F. Mason for the "Relics," were the batteries.

Lawrence Doyle, who has been pitching for the P. A. A. team, has signed in the same capacity for the remainder of the season with the St. Mary club. He was put in the box for the last two innings at Saturday's game and gave entire satisfaction. He is one of the crack pitchers in this city and will be a valuable addition to the team, which already possesses two excellent twirlers in Winn and O'Keefe.

GOLF.

Rather than have the competition for the Chapman cup continue for an indefinite time, it has been arranged that Howard deP. Wright, the last winner, shall draw with Glenny, Wadsworth, Stockton and Charles Fisk, to see which one of the four Wright shall play in final competition. Each of the four have two wins to his credit. The event will probably come off very soon. If Wright wins, that will bring him nearer to eventually becoming the owner of the cup, and if any of the other men win, it will finish the play. In case Wright does win the event the play off will be at match play.

CHESS.

Julius Finn, the noted chess expert, of New York, will give an exhibition of blind-fold chess playing at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday evening. Mr. Finn is a player of considerable note, and will play several simultaneous games blind-folded against local players. All men interested in chess are invited to be present; no admission fee will be charged.

These Going To Jubilee.

Those from this city who will attend the thirty-fourth jubilee convention of the Y. M. C. A. now in session in Boston, include W. D. Murray, F. H. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, C. E A. Heywood, Eric Moraller, J. H. Manning and Curtis M. Thorpe. They will attend at different times, as they cannot all be present throughout the session which continues until next Sunday night.

Illustrated Lecture.

Dr. M. S. Simpon, of LaGrande avenue, will give an illustrated lecture at the Camera Club rooms Monday evening, June 17. It will describe life in the Philippines.

Contributions Needed.

In the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross today contributions are being received for the Jacksonville, Fla., sufferers. Any material will be acceptable.

DEVOUT CHRISTIAN WOMAN

MRS. MARY M. HALL DIED AT THE HOME OF HER SON.

Passed Away Yesterday Afternoon at Residence of George E. Hall, of Belvidere Avenue.

Mrs. Mary Monroe Hall, wife of George F. Hall, aged seventy years, died yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her son, George Edward Hall, of 633 Belvidere avenue, Netherwood, where she has lived a little less than a year. During the past year she has been an invalid, and her death was not wholly unexpected.

Mrs. Hall was born near Springfield, Mass., and spent all of her early days there. After she was married, she and her husband took up their residence in Brooklyn, where they lived for many years. Mrs. Hall was closely identified with the work of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, for years. She then became a member of the Marcy Avenue Baptist church, and was very active there.

She was a member of the Board of Managers of the Baptist Home for Aged Men, and was interested in this work up to the time she was taken ill. She was a sincere and devout Christian wife and mother, and greatly beloved by all who knew her. Last summer she came to Plainfield and spent the winter with her sons at Fanwood. When her son, George Edward Hall, moved to Netherwood, she took up her residence there.

Besides a husband, she leaves five sons, George Edward Hall, Robert E. Hall and Harold M. Hall, of Netherwood; Henry Leslie Hall and Burton P. Hall, of Fanwood. She also leaves a brother, L. J. Powers, former Mayor of Springfield, Mass. The funeral services will be held from the residence, 633 Belvidere avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be in Woodlawn cemetery, Brooklyn, and will be private.

FUNERAL OF C. N. CORTRIGHT.

Held From the Late Residence on East Sixth Street Yesterday.

The funeral services of George N. Cortright were held from his late residence on East Sixth street yesterday afternoon and were largely attended by sorrowing friends and neighbors. Many floral tributes had been sent as the remembrances of intimate friends. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated, and preached an impressive sermon on the character of the departed.

He also paid a tribute to the gallant conduct of Mr. Cortright in voluntarily serving his country amidst the greatest dangers in the hour of need. Besides his record as a soldier Rev. Dr. Schenck also referred to the blessedness of his conversion to Christianity through the efforts of the Mission Workers, who had visited him constantly during his long illness.

A number of the members of the G. A. R. and U. V. U. attended the obsequies. The pall bearers were: Robert Love, N. Whitfield French, John Chedore, Nathan C. Pennington and A. C. Perry.

Interment was made in the soldiers' plot at Hillside cemetery.

POISONED FINGER.

C. E. Ball Is Having Much Trouble With Injured Finger.

C. E. Ball, superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company, is experiencing considerable trouble with a finger on his right hand. Last Saturday the finger first gave him trouble and he believes that it is caused by poisoning of some kind. The finger swelled and he had excruciating pains in the hand and arm. He immediately sought his family physician, Dr. Jenkins, who is now treating the trouble. Yesterday the pain was so intense that morphine had to be administered to alleaviate suffering. It will be some time before Mr. Ball will have the use of his hand.

DAMAGES REDUCED.

Supreme Court Gives Its Verdict In Spicer-Runyon Damage Suit.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, June 11—The Supreme Court yesterday rendered its decision in the matter of the rule to show cause why the verdict in the case of Spicer against Boice, Runyon & Company should not be set aside, on the ground that the damages were excessive.

The court decided that unless the plaintiff would agree to accept the sum of $7,500 in full settlement for all injuries sustained, in place of the sum of $15,000 for which the verdict was originally given, the rule to show cause would be made absolute.

Funeral of Miss Morgan.

The funeral services of the late Miss Bessie Morgan were held from the residence in Madison avenue yesterday forenoon, and were largely attended by friends. Rev. E. M. Bodman, rector of Grace P. E. church, conducted the services. The interment took place yesterday afternoon in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

REASONS WHY THIS CITY HAS PROSPERED

E. C. Martin Writes To The Morristown Board Of Trade Regarding Plainfield.

HIS IDEA OF THIS PLACE.

MORRISTOWN BOARD IS TRYING TO INFUSE NEW LIFE IN THAT CITY.

Wants To Know The Reasons For Growth Of Other Cities—Manufactories And Good Stores Are Prominent Reasons For Plainfield's Progress.

Many Plainfielders will be interested to see just how this city is viewed by those who are but comparatively new residents of Plainfield. Edson C. Martin, junior member of the firm of Woodhull & Martin, who has been a resident of Plainfield now for four years, has written to the Morristown Board of Trade regarding the two cities. The Morristown Board has been trying to discover some means of putting new life into that city, and this letter was written to give some idea of what one of many other cities was doing.

The letter reads as follows:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of the 27th inst. I shall be glad to give you the desired information in so far as I am able.

Having resided in Morristown about twelve years and in Plainfield only four years, I am more familiar with the affairs of the former place. Morristown, as you are undoubtedly aware, has a population of about 10,000 people—Plainfield about 20,000. Both are so-called 'commuters' towns,' Plainfield having about 2 000 regular commutors and Morristown a proportionately smaller number.

Neither city owns its water, gas or electric light plants.

Being about the same distance from New York city, (we are two miles nearer), we have better train service, our express trains making the distance in forty minutes.

Morristown has no manufacturing interests of any consequence. Plainfield has three large factories, employing about 1,500 men, a large proportion of whom are skilled mechanics, who command good wages. We have also a number of smaller factories of considerable importance. A variety of industries are represented, viz.: printing presses, machine tools, safes, skirts, kid gloves, silk, clothing etc.

About $7,000 in wages is paid out each week by the above-named factories, nearly all of which is put into immediate circulation here in Plainfield. Plainfield supports two daily newspapers and two weeklies, whose advertising columns are well patronized by the local merchants.

Plainfield's population has increased about 5,000 in the last ten years and is still increasing. Morristown probably has had little or no increase in population in that time. Business has grown in volume each year. Morristown business, to say the least, does not grow.

We have a complete system of sewers, installed six years ago at a cost of $170,000, paid by a direct assessment of $45,000 and placing bonds at four per cent. for the balance. The concensus of opinion is that sewers are cheaper than the old arrangement of cesspools and far more convenient.

We have a trolley service covering the city thoroughly and making through connections from Newark to New Brunswick. This has proved of great value in bringing trade from suburban towns and has helped wonderfully in developing suburban property, causing a healthy growth in population and value of real estate. Both Morristown and Plainfield have excellent public schools, libraries, hospitals and fire departments.

The conclusions I draw from my observations as a resident of both cities are these, viz:—The location of desirable manufacturing interests in a town assists materially its growth and development. The wages paid out and put into circulation benefit immediately local merchants, and stimulate them at once to greater effort, resulting in better stores and larger stocks, which in turn have a tendency to draw trade from outside sources.

The nucleus of skilled labor employed by such manufacturers is an inducement for other factories to locate where there is a possibility of obtaining the necessary skilled operatives. The absence of such industries in a city sooner or later results in the stagnation of city development, building and dry rot conservatism upon the

RUMMAGE SALE.

Is Now Being Conducted By The Local Corps Of The Salvation Army.

The Salvation Army is successfully conducting a rummage sale at its headquarters on East Front street.

Under favorable auspices it was opened yesterday afternoon, and during the evening a considerable quantity of the goods on sale were disposed of by those in charge. Furniture, bric-a-brac, dresses, bonnets, men's clothing, hats and books go to make up the large and varied assortment of articles on sale.

Superintending the entire affair is Ensign O'Neill, and he is ably assisted by a corps of workers. Mrs. Harriet O'Neill is in charge of the hats and millinery counter; Mrs. Fred Pangborn, women's clothing, and Wm. Root, men's clothing.

The sale will be continued this afternoon and evening.

TO BUILD ARMORY AT ONCE.

SOMERSET BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS TOOK ACTION YESTERDAY.

Again Failed to Elect Counsel—Considerable Other Business Done at the Meeting

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, June 12—The Somerset Board of Freeholders met at the court house yesterday and transacted considerable business.

Objection was made to an item in County Clerk Somers' bill of $9 for four fountain pens. Mr. Somers refused to strike out this item and so his bill of $110 20 was laid on the table.

Director Logan reported that he was unable to procure an option on the Richard Grover property, on Grove street, east of the jail. Mr. Grover asked $3,000 and the board was not willing to pay more than $1,500.

Two ballots were taken for counsel, John A. Leech and Nelson Y. Dungan each receiving five votes. The matter was laid over again for a month.

Augustus Mobus, as chairman of the armory committee, reported favorably on constructing an armory on the county property on Grove street, costing not more than $10,000. He recommended that the building be constructed of brick, 60 feet front and 125 feet deep, with a two story front, to be divided into rooms for Company M and the Board of Freeholders. The drill floor is to be 60x100 feet. He recommended that the construction be commenced at once in order that it will be ready for the fall drills.

The report was adopted nine to one, E. B. Hoagland voting against it. E. B. Hoagland and R. W. Hoagland were added to the armory construction committee.

The board decided to meet Thursday, June 20, at 10 o'clock, at the court house, to receive bids for the masonry work on the bridge to be constructed near A. A Clark's.

The board adjourned to meet Thursday morning, at 10 o'clock, at East Cliff street, to view the site for a proposed new bridge, connecting Cliff street with Union avenue. The latter is macadamized, and there is a little stretch not macadamized between Cliff street and Union avenue, which it is now proposed to complete. The board also decided to go over the macadam work now being done on the Pluckemin road the same day.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BECKER.

Service Held From the Residence on Somerset Street Yesterday.

The funeral services of Mrs. Rosalia Becker, wife of John Becker, were held from her late residence on Somerset street yesterday afternoon.

A large number of friends, who mourn the loss of the good woman gathered at the home to listen to the impressive service conducted in the German language by Rev. G. Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, according to the beautiful ritual of that church. After the officiating minister had concluded his sermon, he made a few remarks in English, praising the Christian character of the departed one. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

The pall bearers were Jacob Voehl, Sr., H. N. Spencer, Andrew Zeisz, M. Koller, Adam Fritz and Joseph Blatz. Private interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mr. Maxson Is Improving.

The report in another paper, last evening, to the effect that Superintendent Henry M. Maxson had become decidedly worse since the operation performed upon him at Roosevelt hospital, is declared by a member of the family to be utterly without foundation. Since the operation was performed, Mr. Maxson's recovery has been steady and at no time has he been in any danger. It is thought he will be able to return home very shortly.

ATTEMPTED TO END LIFE WITH POISON.

Miss Lydia Messler Again Unsuccessfully Tried to Commit Suicide by Taking Laudanum.

DONE IN FIT OF MELANCHOLIA

PROMPT ATTENDANCE BY DR. PITTIS SAVED HER LIFE.

Took Three Ounces of Poisonious Drug—Kept Her Walking in Order to Prevent Fatal Sleep—Made Several Similar Attempts on Previous Occasions.

Miss Lydia Messler, of East Second street, who gained considerable notoriety two years ago by attempting to commit suicide in the hallway leading to the Codington building in Park avenue, made a second attempt last evening to take her life. This effort, like the first, was unsuccessful and the young woman is now considered out of danger, which is due to the quick and earnest efforts of Dr. Pittis, who was called in time to prevent the deadly poison from doing its work. It is alleged that this makes the fourth time that Miss Messler has attempted to take her life. She is subject to fits of melancholia and it was while suffering from one of these attacks that she took three ounces of laudanum.

Miss Messler was in her usual health during the early part of the evening and she took a trolley ride with her sister to Westfield. Upon her return she went into her home, and taking a bottle of laundadum from the closet, swallowed three ounces of it. She then left the house and met Harry Montross, of East Second street, whom she expects to marry. She told him what she had done, and he at once became alarmed.

It was about 11:30 o'clock when she took the poison, and it was not long afterward that the effects of it were apparent. The family became frightened and Dr. Pittis was sent for. By this time Miss Messler was in a stupor, and it required heroic treatment to get the young woman out of danger. Mr. Montross remained with Miss Messler all night and kept her walking so that she would not go to sleep.

Dr. Pittis remained with Miss Messler until nearly 5 o'clock this morning, when he considered her out of danger. When the young woman was questioned regarding her act she had nothing to say and would give no reason for taking the poison. Today she seems greatly improved.

This makes the third case of poisoning that Dr. Pittis has treated during the past year, and in each case he has been successful in effecting a recovery.

SYNOD'S DEADLOCK UNBROKEN.

Fourteen Ballots Without Choice of Professor for Seminary.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, June 12—Efforts to break the deadlock of Synod in the selection of the professor of ecclesiastical history for the Reformed Theological Seminary proved fruitless today. At the end of the fourteenth ballot the votes stood as follows: Rev. E. G. Reed, Somerville, 77; Rev. W. H. S. Demarest, Catskill, N. Y., 25; Rev. M. H. Hutton, of New Brunswick, 13; Rev. N. M. Steffens, of Orange City, Ia., 13; Rev. H. B. D. Mulford, of New Brunswick, 5; scattering, 5. Total, 137. Necessary for a choice, 106.

The report of the Board of Education shows total receipts for the year of $22,790; expenditures, $20,545; and balance on hand, $2,245. The place chosen for the next meeting was Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park.

The forms of ordination and installation were adopted in accord with the recommendation of the committee, few changes being made.

Ladies' Day was observed at Kirkpatrick chapel by meetings in charge of the women's executive committee. There was a meeting last evening at the Second Reformed church in the interest of domestic missions.

Stole Miss Wadsworth's Jewels.

The case against Mabel L. Burt, the Smith College student, who has been indicted by a Massachusetts grand jury for larceny of money and jewelry from her college mates, has assumed a local interest. One of the victims of the young woman's nefarious acts is Miss Mary G. Wadsworth, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Wadsworth, of West Eighth street. The articles lost by Miss Wadsworth include pearls, gold watch chain, and diamond and pearl pin.

Miss Rosalie, of this city, is stopping at the Hawthorne, Asbury Park.

CHARLES HYDE, BANKER, DIED THIS MORNING.

Prominent Plainfield Millionare And Philanthropist Passed Away At His Home.

DIED AT 11:20 O'CLOCK.

REMARKABLE CAREER OF A SELF-MADE MAN.

Held Large Interests In Oil Fields Of Pennsylvania—One Of Prominent Founders Of Crescent Avenue Church—An Enthusiastic Golfer.

Surrounded by his entire family with but one exception, Charles Hyde, philanthropist, banker and citizen, passed away at his beautiful home, "Edgewood" at 11:20 o'clock this morning. Death came quietly and peacefully. To the sorrowful watchers, the husband and father seemed to be passing into a deep sleep, and it was with difficulty they realized its dreaded import.

Mr. Hyde's illness began about four weeks ago, and was practically the first sickness of any account he had ever experienced. Last week he rallied wonderfully, but yesterday the malady took a sudden turn for the worse, and he continued to sink until the end. Death was due to cancer of the stomach.

Charles Hyde was born of English ancestry at Eagle, N. Y., February 27, 1822. He received a common school education and when still a young man removed to Pennsylvania, where he engaged in the lumber business at a small place afterward called Hydetown in his honor. He was largely interested in the development of oil fields in that region, and, in 1865, located at Titusville to be nearer his holdings.

His residence at Titusville, though of but four year's duration, was a remarkable one in every respect. He took up the banking business as a pursuit, founding and becoming president of the Second National Bank at that place, which position he held at the time of his death.

In later years, he founded the private banking establishment of Charles Hyde and Sons at the same place. At this time he was also associated in the lumber and oil trade with J. B. and J. L. Grandin, the well-known lumbermen who afterward founded the city of Grandin, Missouri.

In 1869, he retired from active business life and came to Plainfield, locating in the house where he died. Since then he lived a quiet unostentatious life, contenting himself with engaging at various times in small enterprises.

With other influential citizens, he founded the City Bank, of which he was always president, and also the Netherwood Hotel, being the largest owner. He helped found the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and was always one of its largest contributors, but of late years has been an attendant of the First Presbyterian church, as it was more convenient for himself and wife.

Until last February he was president of the New Orleans and Northwestern Railroad, and he and his sons were practically the sole owners. At the time of his death he was probably the largest individual land owner in this vicinity. He also owned considerable property, mostly apartment houses in New York city.

Although well advanced in years, Mr. Hyde was fond of all outdoor sports and was an enthusiastic golfer. Only four weeks ago he played eighteen holes. He was particularly fond of traveling and spent much time in Europe, always accompanied by members of his family. It was during these trips that he did much reading and observing, until he acquired a great deal of practical knowledge which he used to advantage in his career.

His contributions to worthy charities were large and numerous, and it was through these bequests he became respected and admired by hundreds of citizens in this city.

Mr Hyde was married twice, but his first wife lived but a few years. She left but one son, Dorsey W. Hyde, of Netherwood. In 1862, he married Miss Elizabeth Kepler, of the well-known Philadelphia family of that name, who survives him.

They had four children. They are Charles Livingston, of Tuxedo Park; Louise Kepler and Francis DeLacy, of Titusville, and an only daughter, Miss Edith Hyde, of this city.

The funeral services will be held from his late residence, "Edgewood," Saturday afternoon at 2:30. They will be in charge of Rev. Charles E. Herring of the First Presbyterian church. Interment will be at the convenience of the family.

YOUNG WOMEN GAVE CLEVER AMATEUR PLAY

"Catch As Catch Can" Was Presented By Older Pupils Of The Plainfield Seminary.

MARKED CLOSING EXERCISES

WAS WRITTEN BY MISS FRANCES ELVIRE KENYON, OF THIS CITY.

Authoress Was Called To The Stage At The Close Of The Performance—Clever Plot Furnished Much Amusement—The Cast.

The study hall at the Plainfield Seminary on West Seventh street was crowded to its fullest capacity last evening when a farce, written by Miss Frances Elvire Kenyon, was acted by the older pupils of the Seminary. Many beside those present sought admission but the limits of the room forbade the issue of more than two hundred tickets.

The play, "Catch as Catch Can," was full of happy hits and funny situations, into which the young performers entered with a spirit that would have been creditable to other than amateurs. The story of the play grows out of the desire of an ambitious play wright, Grenville Lodge, to describe dramatically a lover making a proposal, and believing that no knowledge is so valuable as experimental, his friend, John Stanhope, urges him to propose to a charming girl, Marguerite Burnett. The girl, comprehending the situation, accepts and the fun begins.

A fascinating side play is that of F'weddie Thachah, who has proposed to five girls at different dates, who by concerted action, accept him on the same date. The pleasure of acceptance by the first, followed by the dismay of acceptance by four others was a scene so well acted that shouts of laughter greeted each step of the performance. In the final scene where the prime catcher is caught, Grenville Lodge, who had proposed for experience, proposes in earnest and Marguerite Burnett, who had accepted to punish the offender, accepts for her own pleasure. One of the best characters of the play was that of the aunt, Miss Prince, who acts as chaperone and assists in making complications.

The cast was as follows:

Greenville Lodge	Margaret Mead
John Stanhope	Ruth Titus
F'weddie Thachah	Grace Kaufman
Miss Prince	Annie Jennings
Marguerite Burnett	Nanon West
Mary Stanhope	Florence Curtis
Patty Huger	Florence Beebe
Dorothea Chisholm	Ursula Rowland
Leonore Crowninshield	Maisie Day

The two scenes, a man's college room and the old arbor in the college yard, were effectively put on the stage. The masculine characters were costumed as college students with mortar board caps and long gowns.

Bouquets and floral offerings were showered upon the successful performers, and at this point, amid prolonged applause, were mingled cries for the author. It was only after persistent clapping that perseverance commanded success and Miss Frances Elvire Kenyon, who had been superintending her play, appeared at the rear of the stage to receive another round of enthusiastic applause.

Music and dancing closed the entertainment.

Want Two Cars

As the summer season is now in full swing, there are many people who believe that two trolley cars should be operated on the Arlington avenue line. The traffic is equal to that on any other line and a half hour is too long to be compelled to wait for a car.

Broken Ground For Two Dwellings.

J. D. Lotzbeaux, of East Second street, has broken ground for the erection of two frame dwelling houses on Evergreen avenue in Woodland Park. The estimated cost of each, equipped with all modern improvements, is $6,000.

Settling Accounts.

Gradually delinquent taxpayers are calling on Collector F. H. Smith and settling their accounts. The number of properties to be sold under the Martin Act are being materially decreased.

Big Deal Rumored.

There are rumors of a very important deal in real estate wherein very valuable property in this city is involved. A decision will be reached within a few days.

Tour Of Boston Schools.

Charles L. Lewis, instructor of music in the city and borough schools, has gone to Massachussets, where he will make a tour of inspection among the public schools.

MARSHAL WON.

Thrilling Bicycle Race Was Ridden In The Borough Last Evening.

Although he has not received a silver cup yet, Chief Marshal Campbell won an exciting open-to-all bicycle race in the borough last evening.

The entries were: Street Commissioner William B Emmons, Contractor Joseph W. Manhattan and Chief Marshal Wm. Campbell. The course of Somerset street and Lincoln place was selected as the starting point. As agreed upon, the course extended along Lincoln place to Grove street, to Craig place, to Somerset street and to the place of starting. Borough Recorder Doud was chosen timer and Jed M. Smalley starter. Campbell won the race with Emmons coming out second. The time made has not been reported to the L. A. W. headquarters.

NEW TROLLEY IS PLANNED.

WILL CONNECT NEWARK AND MORRISTOWN WITH PHILADELPHIA.

Pan Is To Absorb The Rockaway Valley Railroad And Build Through New Section.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, June 12—J. E Melick, of Hunterdon county, who was prominently identified with the construction of the Rockaway Valley Railroad, proposes to build a trolley line from New York to Philadelphia. It is understood that a New York financier is backing the scheme. There will be no attempt made to compete with the Johnson Brothers line, inasmuch as the route agreed upon is through an entirely different territory.

The plain is to extend the line from Newark to Morristown and then over the Rockaway Valley road to Whitehouse. From this point the route extends through Flemington to New Hope, Doylestown and Willow Grove and thence to Philadelphia. The route covers a distance of 107 miles and is between a number of towns heretofore not connected by trolley.

It is not proposed to use the line for through passenger traffic as the necessary changes along the route would forbid this plan. The only line to be absorbed is the Rockaway Valley Railroad which is not an unusually lucrative plant. Its rolling stock consists of one passenger and three freight cars and its engine is rented from the Jersey Central Railroad.

MAY APPEAL.

Not Yet Decided Whether Or Not Supreme Court Decision Will Be Accepted.

It has been estimated that the interests and costs will bring the amount allowed J. D. Spicer by the Supreme Court in the Spicer-Runyon damage suit up to $8,000. It is considered that he is improved somewhat since the first trial of the case, but another examination will be made soon. If in the opinion of the physicians, Mr. Spicer is considered much improved, C. A. Marsh, Mr. Spicer's counsel may decide to accept the proposition of the Supreme Court. If the decision of the physician is adverse then the case will be appealed.

Gone With Telephone Company.

Joseph M. Hawkins, of LaGrande aqenue, has severed his connection with the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, and has accepted a position as solicitor and collector for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. His territory will extend from Westfield to Raritan, taking in all the intervening places and including New Brunswick. He will be attached to the Plainfield office of the company.

Programme for Festival.

The first night of the strawberry and ice cream festival at Trinity Reformed church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, which will be tomorrow night, there will be vocal and instrumental music and recitations. The second night the Ladies' Orchestra, of Dunellen, will be present and give one of its enjoyable programmes.

Opening Of Mt. Bethel Hotel.

The grand opening of the Mount Bethel hotel will take place July 3. During the afternoon there will be a carnival of athletic sports and in the evening, a dance and exhibition of fireworks. A large number of this city expect to attend. Professor O'Reilly's full orchestra will furnish music during the afternoon and evening.

In Justice Mattison's Court.

In Justice Mattison's court a summons has been issued in a case on contract instituted by Felix A. Boericke and Adolph L. Tafel, trading as Boericke and Tafel, against Alfred A. Marsh. The writ is returnable Monday.

BRIDE FRON HUNTERDON WEDDED PLAINFIELDER.

Charming Home Wedding This Afternoon at Home of Bride's Brother in the Borough.

FINE FLORAL DECORATIONS.

ONLY RELATIVES AND INTIMATE FRIENDS WERE PRESENT.

Ceremony Took Place at 1:30 o'Clock and was Followed by Informal Reception—Rev. G. W. Nicholson, of Bridgeport, Conn., Officiated.

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season took place this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, when Miss Jane Elizabeth Huff, daughter of Mrs. Alletta Huff, of Centreville, was married to Arthur Seely Mosher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Mosher, of Brooklyn. The event took place at the home of the bride's brother, Horace Huff, Codington avenue, in the presence of the relatives and a few intimate friends.

The home was attractively decorated with ferns, potted plants and flowers. These were arranged about the parlor and dining room. In the parlor the decorations were tastefully arranged in a bow window, and it was here that the ceremony was performed.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Jessie Huff, of Somerville, who was maid-of-honor, the former being gowned in white organdie, trimmed with white satin and illusion. The maid-of-honor's gown was also of white organdie, trimmed in light blue. She carried a bouquet of white and pink sweet pease. The bride carried white roses. The groom was unattended. The officiating clergyman was Rev. G. W. Nicholson, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Bridgeport, Conn. He is a life-long friend of the groom, having been his pastor in Jersey City.

After the guests had arrived, the bridal party descended the stairs and entered the parlor, while the wedding march was being played by Herbert J. Harold, of this city. Following the ceremony which united the happy couple, a reception was held and a wedding luncheon served. During the early part of the afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Mosher left for Buffalo, where they will take in the beauties of the Pan-American Exposition. Upon their return they will take up their residence in West Fourth street, the groom being employed by Salmon C. Baker, of this city.

The bride is well-known among a large circle of friends, having been a frequent visitor to this city. She is a most estimable young woman and popular. The groom is also popular and well-known. He has been a resident of Plainfield for several years. He is a talented violinist and in musical circles and he has many friends, all of whom will wish him and his wife many years of happiness and success. In the way of gifts, the bride and groom were handsomely remembered by their relatives and friends, and the collection is not only large, but useful and pretty.

The bride's gift to the maid-of-honor was a gold stick pin, and the groom's gift to the bride was an opal ring.

Among the guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Spencer, of Montclair; Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Mosher, parents of the groom, Clinton Edward Mosher and Miss Ethel Gunn, of Brooklyn; Miss Laura Dexter, of Jersey City; Mrs. Alletta Huff, mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. George Brokaw, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dalley, Mrs. Hoagland, of Centreville; Mr. and Mrs. Minor Griscom, of Philadelphia; Miss Frederica Anderson, of Whitehouse; Miss R. Belle Sharkey, of Rhode Island; Mr. and Mrs. Miller Huff, of Metuchen; Miss Anna Hall, of Newark; Miss Lizzie Parker, of New York; D. C. B. Huff, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Huff, Harry Huff, of Roycefield; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, Mr. and Mrs. Salmon C. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, Mrs. Mary J. Hawkins, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, J. M. Hawkins, Chief and Mrs. T. O. Doane and Miss Adelia Runyon, of Plainfield.

Those who served as ushers were Oscar Huff, brother of the bride, of Centreville, and Clinton Edward Mosher, brother of the groom, of Brooklyn.

part of its merchants. Then again, a city should not be content with taking care of its own legitimate business, but should be reaching out after more and still more business.

Its authorities should endeavor in every honorable way to induce the investment of outside capital in the opening of new streets, the erection of buildings, etc. Its merchants should by judicious advertising and liberal inducements endeavor to attract custom from the surrounding country and nearby towns.

This can only be done by increasing facilities for cheap transportation. This the trolley does. Our experience here in Plainfield proves that the trolley induces travel in a marked degree. Personally, I believe that good, up-to-date stores have great influence in the welfare of a city, as they tend to hold a large proportion of the volume of trade so prone to go to large centres of trade like New York and Newark.

There is a warm place in my heart for historic old Morristown, which was my home for many years, and I wish you success in every effort to promote its welfare.

If at any time in the future I can be of service to you, I shall be glad to hear from you. Believe me,

Very truly yours,
E. O. Martin.

Southern Industrial Delegates Gather in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—Delegates numbering several hundred and representing all of the southern states and most of the principal cities of the south are attending the annual Southern Industrial convention in Horticultural hall here. This is the first time the convention has been held in the north, and it is expected that great benefits will accrue to the commercial and industrial interests of the north and south through the deliberations of the delegates.

Preparations for the present gathering had been in progress since last February, when an invitation was extended by the allied commercial and business organizations of Philadelphia to the Southern Industrial association to come here and discuss ways and means for furthering the trade of the two sections.

The delegates found a heartfelt welcome awaiting them, the state and city joining in the effort to render the visitors' sojourn as pleasant as it is expected to be profitable. The business houses in the center of the city have been gayly decorated with flags and bunting, and last night the exterior of the city hall was a blaze of electric lights in honor of the occasion.

Our Trap Shooters Abroad.

LONDON, June 12.—The betting on the American team, which began at 6 to 5 against, closed last night at 10 to 1 in their favor. Nevertheless Paul North and the American leaders declare that all the members of the team are shooting far beneath their usual level. It was fully expected that the team would kill 90 per cent of the birds, but yesterday's result showed less than 87 per cent. The high winds and the unfamiliar surroundings had much to do with this. Crosby led the American score with 93 birds. Budd secured 89 and Tripp and Heikes 88 each. Frank Parmelee of Omaha won the live bird contest with 25 straight kills out of a possible 25.

SEVENTEEN KILLED.

Port Royal Mining Disaster Proves Very Serious.

OFFICIAL LIST OF THE DEAD.

Explosion of Fire Damp Set the Mine on Fire and Prevented Escape of Miners—Talk of Flooding the Mine.

PORT ROYAL, Pa., June 12.—As a result of Monday night's explosion in the Port Royal mines of the Pittsburg Coal company 17 are dead, 7 injured and thousands of dollars' worth of property destroyed. The official list of dead and injured as made public by the coal company's officials last night is as follows:

The dead recovered are William McCune, superintendent of the company's mines along the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, whose body was found lying in the passageway about 1,000 feet from the shaft and who leaves a wife, three sons and a daughter; Taylor Gunsaulus, Sr., loader, who leaves a widow and several children, and Fritz Kruger.

Those still entombed in the mine and known for a certainty to be dead are William F. Allison, assistant superintendent of mines, who leaves a wife and five children; Dennis Wardley, foreman of mine No. 1, who leaves a wife and four children; John Kock, foreman of Darr mine, who leaves a wife and several children; Michael Roy, foreman of Euclid mines, who leaves a widow and small boy; Bernard Ball, who leaves a wife and two children; Taylor Gunsaulus, Jr., son of man taken from mine, who leaves a wife; Jerry Daly, who leaves a wife and several children; John Peebles, who leaves a wife; David James, who leaves a wife; John Carto, machine boss of Darr mine; Samuel Hadley, assistant foreman of mine No. 2, who leaves a wife and two children; Peter Marchando, boss driver of mine No. 1, who leaves a wife and child, and John Stickle, pipeman of mine No. 23, who leaves a wife and three children.

Late yesterday afternoon the officials of the Pittsburg Coal company issued an order refusing to allow any more men to enter the shaft, as the danger was too great. They are now considering the advisability of flooding the mine for the purpose of extinguishing the fire. There is now no hope of rescuing the entombed men.

Harry Beveridge and Arthur Smith cannot live. Twelve of the dead were men who went into the mine as rescuers. What caused the explosion and loss of life is something the mine inspectors of the Ninth and Eleventh districts spent the greater part of the day trying to find out. The officials of the coal company declare that none but regulation mine lamps were used, while others are of the opinion that one of the men carelessly lit a match which ignited gas and caused one of the greatest catastrophes in the history of Westmoreland county.

It was ascertained that for several weeks men have been at work in mine No. 2, where the first explosion happened, erecting cribbing between entry No. 9 and entry No. 21. Much of the cribbing had been placed in position, and it was while doing this work Monday afternoon that Peebles, Davenport, Stickle and Daly met death.

The explosion was a terrific one, and for fully three hours after it happened no one entered the shaft.

The situation here yesterday again reached a climax when Mine Inspector Bernard Callahan, accompanied by seven men, descended the shaft and started upon an investigating tour of the mine. The men gave the signal to be lowered down at 9:04 o'clock, and about an hour afterward a terrific report was heard. It was another explosion, and grave fears were entertained for the party. The experience of the men was told by Callahan. He said the escape of the party was a miracle and detailed their experience. He said further: "I never had been in a mine in the condition that this one is. I am nearly exhausted from swallowing so much damp. My lungs are like coals of fire. There is no hope of saving any person in the mine, and it may be a year before the bodies are recovered. It will take two days to fill the mine with water and 12 months to pump it out again."

Locked Out Miners Evicted.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 12.—Sheriff H. W. Osler has evicted the families of two of the locked out miners of the State Line and Sullivan Railroad company's colliery at Bernice, Sullivan county. No show of force attended the eviction on either side. The goods of the evicted miners were placed in the street and subsequently carried by their owners to the homes of friends at Mildred. Scarcely had the evictions begun when the striking miners and their wives, about 250 in number, formed in line and, headed by a band, paraded through Bernice and the neighboring town of Mildred. The women were the most enthusiastic of the paraders, many of them carrying dishpans, old tin boilers, buckets, etc., with which they kept up a serenade that at times drowned out the music of the band and the cheers of the men.

Gifts to Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, June 12.—At a meeting of the trustees of Syracuse university it was announced that donations had been made as follows: Lyman C. Smith of Syracuse, $25,000; John S. Huyler of New York, $25,000; Clarence W. Seamans of New York, $25,000; S. W. Bowne of New York, $12,500; William Nottingham of Syracuse, $12,500. This amount is to go toward duplicating the recent gift of $400,000 made by John D Archbold of New York. Aside from this $33,000 was subscribed to make up a deficiency for the year.

Strike at Hazleton.

HAZLETON, Pa., June 12.—The 250 machinists in the employ of Coxe Bros. & Co. at Drifton struck upon refusal of the company to grant their demand for a nine hour day and ten hours' pay. The molders, who made a similar demand, went out last night.

Insects Attacking Apple Trees.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 12.—Fruit growers throughout this section are alarmed at the appearance of small worms resembling caterpillars, which are destroying apple buds and stripping the trees of foliage.

A Fatal Tornado.

LARCHWOOD, Ia., June 12.—A baby was killed and several people were badly injured by a tornado near Lester. Many buildings were destroyed. Slight damage was done here by the same storm.

TWO TERMS ENOUGH.

President Puts Quietus on Third Term Gossip.

A FIRM AND DECIDED STAND.

Letter Issued From the White House After Consultation With the Cabinet—Would Not Accept Renomination if Tendered.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—President McKinley has put an effectual quietus on the third term talk which has gained some currency in the newspapers through interviews with certain well known Republicans favoring the renomination of the president for a third term. Shortly before the cabinet meeting adjourned Secretary Cortelyou gave to the press a signed statement by the president intended for the American people announcing that he was not a candidate for a third term and would not accept a renomination if one were tendered.

A decision to issue such a statement was reached Monday night, when the president read to the members of the cabinet his proposed statement, at the same time personally pledging each to secrecy until public announcement was made. The cabinet on hearing the reasons the president advanced, which are substantially set forth in the public announcement—namely, that talk of a third term would react on the national policies the administration is endeavoring to promote—coincided with the view of their chief that the present was an opportune time for its promulgation. The phraseology of the announcement was considered further by the cabinet, and after a change or two from the first draft Secretary Cortelyou was directed to make it public.

The following is the statement given out at the White House:

"I regret that the suggestion of a third term has been made. I doubt whether I am called upon to give it notice. But there are now questions of the gravest importance before the administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of the thought of a third term.

"In view, therefore, of the reiteration of the suggestion of it I will say now, once for all, expressing a long settled conviction, that I not only am not and will not be a candidate for a third term, but would not accept a nomination for it if it were tendered me.

"My only ambition is to serve through my second term to the acceptance of my countrymen, whose generous confidence I so deeply appreciate, and then, with them, to do my duty in the ranks of private citizenship."

The Largest Coal Production.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Official reports show that the year 1900 closed the century with the largest coal production ever recorded in the United States and continued the supremacy of the United States among the coal producing countries of the world. Practically completed returns to Edward W. Parker, statistician of the United States geological survey, show the total output of coal in 1900 to have been 267,542,444 short tons, an increase over the preceding year of 13,802,452 tons, or a little more than 5 per cent. The value of this product was $297,920,000, an increase of 16 per cent over 1899.

A Suicide Epidemic.

EMPORIA, Kan., June 12.—An epidemic of suicides in this town, culminating in three attempts, all exactly similar to recent successful suicides, caused the mayor and board of health to forbid the publication of details of suicides or attempts in local papers. The board is acting on the theory that publication spreads the contagion of suicide by psychic suggestion. Mayor Morse contends that the liberty of the press is secondary to the public health and is prepared to use force if necessary.

The president went out for a long drive in the afternoon, his companion being Mr. James Barber, Sr., of Canton, O., who arrived in the morning and left on an early train in the evening.

A MANILA SENSATION.

Surgeon Welch Turned State's Evidence In Hemp Trial.

MANILA, June 12.—There was a sensation in the court martial of Captain Michael Spellman, Lieutenant Delbert R. Jones and Surgeon Dudley Welch of the Forty-third volunteer infantry in southern Leyte on the charge of trading in permits to ship hemp from closed ports.

Surgeon Dudley Welch turned state's evidence and gave testimony incriminating Captain Spellman and Lieutenant Jones, who will probably receive terms of imprisonment. Welch, who appears to have been a tool of the others, has returned $1,000, his share of the spoils, to the government.

The evidence disclosed that the value of the hemp cleared from Maasin was about $500,000 in the last six months. The officers indicted levied, it was asserted, half a peso on each picul of rice entering insurgent territory, while steamships, schooners and bancas trading with closed ports in Malitbog bay paid from 30 to 500 pesos to their tonnage.

The presidente of Maasin and a go between who is connected with a Spanish firm have also been arrested.

Spellman was formerly a major in the Sixty-ninth New York regiment.

Surgeon Welch was an appointee at large in the volunteer army. Lieutenant Jones was appointed from Connecticut, having served in the Spanish war as first lieutenant of the First Connecticut infantry.

Aguinaldo Has a Successor.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Emilio Zurbano of Tabayas province has proclaimed himself the successor of Aguinaldo and "governor of Tabayas and the Philippines," according to a copy of a Manila paper just received at the war department. Emilio is said to have been always a rather theatrical insurrectionist and to have sworn to fight the Americans down to the last bolo. The publication does not take the Filipino's announcement seriously and warns him that he will find "that the office carries with it certain grave responsibilities which will sooner or later result in heart failure and a sudden demise."

MISSING GIRL FOUND.

Sadie Biddle Tells Story of Brutal Treatment by Parents.

MALDEN, Mass., June 12.—Sadie Biddle, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Biddle, who had been missing from her home and who was supposed to have been drowned in Fellsmere pond with her sister Lilian, whose body was found Monday, has been located in Jamaica Plain doing housework. She was brought here, and at the police station her parents tried their utmost to induce her to return home.

The girl absolutely refused to see them and told the police that she had been brutally treated by her parents, claiming that she had been beaten until her body was black. She declared that if forced to go home she would commit suicide. The parents tried to get legal assistance to secure their daughter, and finally Chief Emerton outwitted them by placing the girl under detention as a neglected child.

The girl claims that her sister Lilian threatened many times to kill herself because of her parents' alleged brutality. Last Wednesday, the last time she saw Lilian, the latter said she was going to get some carbolic acid and kill herself. Sadie told her that they could not buy it, and then Lilian suggested that they go to the reservoir. They parted, and Sadie wandered about Boston for two days and finally got housework to do.

Miller Syndicate Dividend Promised.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Referee Robert F. Tilney, in Brooklyn, has presented to the creditors of the Miller Franklin syndicate the accounts of Trustee John B. Lord in the settlement of claims pending against the defunct concern, and it was decided to accept the proposition of a 6 per cent dividend on the 3,000 proved claims, amounting to $287,000, making the net sum about $17,300 to be divided among the anxious investors drawn into the Miller scheme when it flourished last year. William F. Miller was sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing for his management of the syndicate and the acceptance of moneys on a guarantee of weekly returns of 10 per cent, or 520 per cent a year. The dividend money will be paid as soon as Mr. Tilney has completed the computations of the 3,000 claims.

German Battleship Launched Today.

BERLIN, June 12.—The launching today of the new German battleship Zaehringen in the presence of Emperor William, Empress Augusta Victoria and the Grand Duke of Baden was a ceremony of more than usual significance. She takes her name from the Baden dynasty. She is of a new type, like the Wittelsbach, the Wettin and two others still in process of construction. Her displacement is 11,800 tons, and she is entirely of German steel. The Zaehringen was built at the Krupp Germania yards.

CONSTIPATION

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement; is is such a relief." AYLMER L. HUNT, 1059 Russell St., Detroit, Mich.

ALABAMA'S CONSTITUTION.

A Sweeping Suffrage Scheme—Criminals and Negroes Barred.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 12.—The first part of the new constitution was adopted yesterday by the constitutional convention. The office of lieutenant governor was created and the governor's salary raised from $3,000 to $5,000. The terms of the executive officers were lengthened from two to four years, but they are ineligible for re-election.

The governor cannot become a candidate for United States senator within one year of the expiration of his term.

The most sweeping suffrage scheme yet brought forward was that introduced by Burns of Burnsville. It provides that the following classes shall not vote:

"Those who are bastards or loafers or who may be infected with any loathesome or contagious disease.

"Those who have been convicted of treason, bribery, forgery, larceny, robbery, bigamy, seduction, incest, murder, rape or attempt to rape, arson or burglary.

"Those who are descendants of parents who are of or descendants of two or more different races; those who shall have married any woman having a living husband from whom she has not been legally divorced; those who have committed any assault and battery on wife or stepdaughter."

This law destroys 90 per cent of the negro vote, and the ex-slaves who are not debarred will be less than 5 per cent.

Severe Storm at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, June 12.—A terrific electrical storm, accompanied by a high wind and heavy rain, passed over this section last evening, doing much damage to property and causing at least one death. When the storm reached Homestead, Francis Morris, aged 17 years, and his sister, Minnie, aged 14, were in the yard of their uncle's home on Seventeenth avenue. The house was struck by lightning, and the current took its course along a wire clothesline reaching from the house to a fence 80 feet distant, where young Morris was standing. The boy was instantly killed and his sister badly shocked and hurt by falling bricks. The same bolt struck three other houses in the vicinity, shattering them, but resulting in no other fatalities. At McKeesport the Baptist mission, a frame building, was blown from its foundations into the street and had to be torn to pieces to clear the thoroughfare.

Guam Heard From.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The governor of the island of Guam, under date of April 22, reported to the navy department that the health of the island and of the naval station remains about the same. There has been but one death in the command—namely, P. Ahearn, private, United States marine corps, who died April 20 and was buried in the naval cemetery. A few weeks ago a subscription was started in the naval station for a civil hospital to be built on a suitable piece of ground to be donated by the government. The result was most gratifying, about 1,800 pesos having been subscribed, and an equal amount will be appropriated from the island treasury and the establishment maintained by the government when completed. The ground has been cleared, the materials are being collected, and the work of construction will soon begin.

Mabel Burt Indicted.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 12.—The grand jury has found an indictment against Mabel L. Burt, the former Smith college student, on 11 counts for the larceny of money and jewelry. She was arraigned before Judge Pierce and on motion of counsel waived the reading of the indictment and pleaded not guilty, retracting her plea of guilty in the lower court. Counsel asked for a continuance on the ground of unreadiness and the nervous condition of the girl. He asked for moderate bail. District Attorney Hammond said many articles of jewelry are missing, and he wished bail to be sufficiently large to insure the girl's attendance at the December term of court. In an interview Mr. Burt said that he should return to Bridgeton, N. J., and that he would place his daughter in a sanitarium in Pennsylvania.

Violent Electrical Storm.

CLEVELAND, June 12.—A violent storm of thunder, lightning and heavy rain broke over Cleveland and vicinity yesterday, causing considerable interruption to telegraph and telephone wires, with other minor property damage. There was little or no wind. The telegraph lines west were all cut off between Cleveland and Toledo. Lightning struck a street car on Bank street, tore a hole in the roof and set the car on fire. The passengers were panic stricken.

HARVARD MAN DEAD

Life Crushed Out by a Chemical Engine.

ANOTHER STUDENT BADLY INJURED.

Small Fire at Cambridge Results In a Serious Affair—Fire Company's Driver Accused of Malicious Intent—Crew Nearly Mobbed.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 12.—H. S. Bigelow, a Harvard freshman of Buffalo, was killed by a chemical engine at a fire last night. Another student was injured. The students nearly mobbed the engine crew.

Bigelow belonged in Buffalo and had come to Harvard from Exeter, where he had been a prominent student and class poet. His parents are dead, but his aunt and grandmother live in Buffalo.

A fire was found among a pile of boards near the Harvard architectural building by one of the Harvard professors. An alarm was run in, but before the firemen responded Professor Hollis and students had put out the fire. The alarm, as usual, caused the undergraduates to assemble, and as the firemen drove up there was much jeering. The chemical engine was very late, and the crowd hooted the men.

The accident is described differently, the firemen claiming that the horses on the engine became excited at the howling crowd and dashed forward, scattering the crowd. The students claim that the driver, John Dowdis, deliberately drove his engine into the students, Bigelow being caught under the wheels. Other students were knocked down, but only one had any injuries to speak of. As soon as the students realized what had happened they made a wild demonstration. But cool heads maintained control, and the firemen were allowed to return to their stations.

Driver Dowdis is prostrated by the accident. It cannot be determined at present on whom the blame for the accident lies. The wheels passed over Bigelow's body, crushing his lower chest.

Y. M. C. A. In Boston.

BOSTON, June 12.—A sea of upturned faces greeted President Edwin L. Shuey of Dayton, O., as he called to order the great international jubilee convention of the Young Men's Christian association in Mechanics' building yesterday. Those faces were for the most part strange to Boston. From all over the globe the delegates had come, bringing with them individual enthusiasm in the great work for young men, and that enthusiasm, grown mighty in its unison, made the scene before President Shuey one that was powerfully effective. The big hall was radiant with color, while standards on the floor told the location of state delegations and the seats of distinguished men from other countries and lands. The opening exercises were quite brief and to the point, President Shuey not making any preliminary remarks. The afternoon service was held in Trinity church, and Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D., of New York preached the sermon. William E. Dodge of New York presided at the evening meeting in Mechanics' hall.

Cubans Will Not Reconsider.

HAVANA, June 12.—The question of reconsidering the former vote on the Platt amendment came up for a short discussion yesterday afternoon in the Cuban constitutional convention. In order not to arouse opposition the conservatives took the stand that there was no necessity for reconsidering the vote, inasmuch as the form in which the amendment had been passed was not satisfactory to the United States and could not be accepted by the United States as a part of the constitution of Cuba. Ultimately the convention unanimously agreed not to reconsider the vote. Senor Morau Delgado offered a substitute motion for the committee's report embodying the amendment without the interpretations, but the conservatives, who were not ready to bring the question to an immediate decision, asked for an adjournment until today.

The Assyrian Still Fast.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 12.—There is general disappointment over the failure of the first attempt to float the Assyrian. It is believed that she is more firmly fixed to the rocks than was at first thought. Additional pumps are being fitted, power from the attending steamers is utilized, more cargo is being jettisoned; and all the deck gear in the forward part of the ship will be removed. It is hoped that the attempts to float the liner will meet with better fortune today.

Five Times Tried Case Decided.

KINGSTON, N. Y., June 12.—The case of Townsend against Bell, just decided in the court of appeals at Buffalo, is quite a famous one. It was tried five times in Ulster county. The plaintiff appealed for an injunction restraining the defendant from operating a dye factory. He proved that geese swimming in the stream into which the dye factory opened turned red, blue and green. The court decides this is not an unreasonable use.

Dead From Carriage Accident.

Supreme Court Decision.

A very important decision has just been made by the Supreme Court of New Jersey regarding taxing of the street railway franchises. The question on which the Supreme Court passed was as to whether the roadbed of the trolley companies should be assessed as real or personal property. On this point hinged several millions of dollars of revenue to the State and the individual municipalities.

The particular case in which the question came up was that of the Mayor and Aldermen of Newark against the North Jersey Street Railway Company. The Newark assessors assessed the company's property at $3,100,000. An appeal was taken to the State Board of Taxation, which reduced the assessment to $2,265,000. The State board held that as the trolley company had no greater rights than other vehicles the company was taxable only for the tangible property within the city—that is, as personal property.

The decision of the Supreme Court was to the effect that the property of the trolley company was real estate. If the Court of Errors and Appeals, to which the case will surely go, decides the same way, it will affect every municipality in the State through which a trolley line passes.

Justice VanSickel, who wrote the decision of the court, said in part:

"The State board justified the reduction of the assessment upon the assertion that the trolley company had no greater right in the street than the traveller upon it on foot or in the ordinary vehicles, and that it, therefore, has no taxable interest in the soil of the street. * * *

"The underlying question, therefore, in this case is whether the defendant company has an interest in the soil or highway, which is taxable as real estate.

"As between the public and the trolley company, has the latter an interest in land? It will not be controverted that the right in the highway which the public authorities have acquired as against the abutting owner is an interest in land. * * *

"The company has the grant of part of the public estate for its own permanent exclusive use, and that is an interest in real estate. This part must be of the same character as the whole.

"The assertion that the right to the soil of the highway acquired and used by the trolley company, is no greater than that enjoyed by the public in general is not only in conflict with the evidence of our senses, but is rejected by the adjudged cases on the subject. If the right is no greater why may not every individual exercise and enjoy it without an express grant? Take like from like and nothing remains to be the subject of a grant."

It is particularly desirable that every good citizen of Plainfield should co-operate with Street Commissioner Gavett in his efforts to see that the houses of the city are properly numbered. While the numbers are now conspicuously posted in many cases, there some homes that lack numbers entirely while others have them so hidden away that it is next to impossible to find them. Now that the city has put up the new street signs, the property owners and residents ought to do their share by putting up the proper numbers. The street signs are assured for the borough as well and it will be well, indeed, if the people of that community will also see that their homes and stores have the numbers properly placed.

There has been considerable discussion in this county about the advisibility of the county providing for its own insane instead of paying for their care at the State institution. It has been repeatedly claimed that the county could achieve the same results at a much less expenditure. Burlington county is now trying the experiment and all the other counties of the State are watching it with much interest. The attempt has been made before and without success, but not under favorable conditions as now prevail in Burlington county.

When a man shall have learned that to get a fair share of business he must advertise, says the Philadelphia Record, and that he should depend chiefly if not exclusively on the daily newspaper of large circulation and high character, and when he shall have decided on the amount of money he may expend on advertising, he will meet the problem of what to say. Here is the advice of a successful merchant: "An advertisement should be made to talk to the readers as a salesman talks to his customers."

This is commencement week at many of the universities and colleges of the country and soon the throng of young people, who are now studying at these higher institutions of learning, will return to their homes in Plainfield and elsewhere. The influx of the college young folk always gives renewed interest to the social life of the city.

What a shame it is that the property owners of the land abutting on Green brook, on the city side, visible from the new bridge, connecting Duer street and Madison avenue, do not take enough pride in the pretty appearance of their home city to keep them in good order.

These are the days when the enthusiastic golfer is in a state of continual happiness. Never have the local courses been in as fine condition as at present, while an unusual number of events have furnished plenty of amusement for them.

GETTING JOBS ELSEWHERE.

Local Machinists, Tired of Waiting For End of Strike, Are Leaving Town.

Instead of waiting for the local machine shops to open and resume their former positions, machinists in this city are securing positions in other places. Hardly a day passes but what one or more leaves town for distant points, and in the event of the local shops resuming, many of the familiar faces will be missing. Among the latest to leave Plainfield are James Brown, of South Second street, and James McInnis, of Grant avenue, who will leave today for Pittsburg and enter the employ of the Westinghouse Electric Company.

Dunellen, June 12.—Just as he was on the point of alighting from his wheel in front of the postoffice, early yesterday morning, the fork crown of Rev. S. K. Doolittle's wheel gave way, throwing him heavily to the ground. He landed with great force upon his left shoulder, bruising it very painfully. He was assisted home and Dr. Brakeley was summoned. The latter made an examination but found no bones broken. The injury is very painful, but Mr. Doolittle expects to regain the use of his arm in a few days.

While fumigating his father's hen house, yesterday afternoon, Harry Ising accidentally set fire to the structure and it was totally destroyed. Several neighbors attempted to extinguish the flames, but were unsuccessful. Luckily the hennery was too far from the barn to ignite that building or the result would have been far more serious.

South Plainfield, June 12.—Three tramps caused quite a disturbance Monday evening by their threatening behavior. They went from house to house collecting food, until refused at the home of Mrs. J. Thuma. Here they then walked in and proceeded to hunt around. In the meantime, Mrs. Thuma notified the neighbors and the tramps left. Justice Weaver, assisted by Mr. Reilly, then went after the three and chased them until they were joined by a number of their fellows, but did not succeed in catching any of them.

MR. RUNYON'S SIDE.

Thought There Was No Possible Danger As Long As Place Was Fumigated.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Permit me through the columns of your paper to correct an impression that the photographer who took a picture of my dead child, May 19, was misled or deceived in the true condition of things at my apartments.

According to your editorial of June 10, he claims he did not know the place was quarantined. He was certainly told about it when he was sent for, and also the nature of the disease and that the room had been thoroughly fumigated. And could he not see the card for himself when he came to the building, no matter what door he entered? From the fact that the room had been fumigated no thought of danger of spreading the contagion occurred to me, and no doubt the photographer was of the same mind.

STORY OF THE SIEGE BY ONE WHO SAW.

Rev. Courtenay H. Fenn, Presbyterian Missionary, Related Experiences at Pekin.

TOLD ABOUT THE BOXERS.

GRAPHICALLY PICTURED SCENES IN THE BRITISH LEGATION.

Ate Horses and Mules When Other Food Supply Ran Out—Why the Boxers Fought So Hard—Their Methods.

Rev. Courtenay H. Fenn, a missionary of the Presbyterian church, who has lately returned from China, gave a talk last evening in the Crescent Avenue church, under the auspices of the Boys' Mission Band. In view of the fact that Mr. Fenn was in China during the memorable siege and was an inmate of the British Legation at that time, his talk had a special significance. He is a magnetic speaker and he graphically described the terrible scenes enacted in China last summer, relating many things that have thus far not appeared in print.

In speaking of the Boxers, he said that this organization is nearly 200 years old, and its purpose is to exterminate all foreigners and to maintain the empire.

"How long would the United States tolerate a dismemberment of its territory by other nations?" said Mr. Fenn. "Yet we blame the Chinese for doing that which we would blame ourselves for not doing. They were barbarous in their treatment of others and they violated every righteous law.

"The Boxers had the sanction of the Imperial authorities and they thoroughly believed themselves invulnerable. They would go through their incantations, after which they would go forth and work their deadly wicked practices, believing that they were doing that which was best. They would first attack the native Christians, because they followed the foreign nations and were considered traitors. They had a feeling that the Christians were trying to get political influence to overthrow the Chinese Empire."

Mr. Fenn then told how the Boxers would go about setting fire to buildings, destroying schools, chapels and churches. He described the scene of gathering the foreigners together in the Legation, and how they protected themselves. They appealed to Minister Conger, who gave them twenty U. S. Marines out of the fifty-three at the United States Legation, and these together with a number of armed natives, were the sole defense. Mr. Fenn made the surprising statement that not one missionary died during the seige, and this accounted for by the fact that God was with them in their hour of trial. He believed that a special Divine Providence saved those at the Legation. There were nearly 4 000 to feed and clothe during eight weeks, and provisions and clothing was there in abundance.

The speaker mentioned the fact that during the siege ninety mules and horses, some trotters, very valuable, were killed and eaten. There was a good water supply. When the question arose as to where cloth could be found to make sand-bags to be used for protection, a diligent search revealed plenty of material. There were 20,000 sand-bags made by women and used for fortification.

Throughout Mr. Fenn's talk he showed conclusively how God's protecting hand saved those at the Legation from destruction and made it possible for them to live to tell the story. In conclusion he made an earnest appeal to those present to continue their contributions to redeem China. He told how faithfully the native Christians have been and how they would rather die than sacrifice their belief in Christ.

Killed in a Fight.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, June 12—David Gorman, aged thirty years, a resident of this place, was found at daybreak yesterday morning, lying along the railroad tracks near the gas house, in an unconscious condition and with a deep gash in his head. People living nearby had heard a row in the night, and it was thought that Gorman was hit by a beer bottle. He died last night and County Physician Wagner has ordered an inquest, which will be held today.

A Key to Success.

Through The Daily Press "want ad" columns, James Frisbie, the mail-carrier, recovered a bunch of keys yesterday afternoon, which he had lost the previous day. Within two hours after the paper was issued the keys were returned to The Daily Press office awaiting to be called for by the advertiser.

ICE CREAM WITHOUT CHURNING.

Those Twentieth Century freezers that created so much talk last summer are here again.

Pack the freezer with pieces of ice the size of a pea and pour over it brine (equal parts of water and table salt) put your cream in the fibre pail and let it stand. After five minutes scrape down the sides of the cylinder with a wooden knife mixing the frozen parts of the cream and repeat this operation ten minutes later. That's all there is to it—in twenty minutes or so your cream will be ready to serve.

"We have no mutual friends," said Stanton.

"Sir, you amaze me. Who and what can this woman be?"

"She is my wife," said Stanton.

"Sir, you are jesting."

"Sir, I am not jesting. You appealed to your position for the right to ask me such questions as you chose. I have answered each truly, so help me God."

"Sir, you bewilder me. You astound me."

"Sir, the same conditions have perplexed, amazed, bewildered and astounded me too, quite enough to account for any slight depression which may have attracted your attention. It must be obvious to you that little benefit can be derived through conversation, where the immediate effect upon you is the same as the more deliberate effect on me. I trust that you will respect what to me is a very painful subject, and never refer to it again."

Whatever the conclusions at which the missionary arrived they were surely not unkind, for during the last dinner on board he rose at the table and cordially thanked Robert Stanton, Esquire, on behalf of the passengers, the officers, and the crew, for his unfailing cheerfulness and his untiring good offices to all, making the voyage so much pleasanter and making them all better for his being among them.

The sentiments were incomprehensible and intensely disagreeable to Stanton, and yet there was something in them which set him thinking and gradually opened his eyes.

"It was small thanks to me," he said to himself, as he thought the matter over on shore. "I never exerted myself in that way before, simply because I never had a right good selfish incentive. Misery drove me to it, but it surely did make others happier. I believe it was the first time in my life that I ever attempted to make others happy, and it surely made me less miserable, too. There's an idea there that is good straight philosophy. If I think continually of myself, I've no time to think of others. If I think sometimes of others, I've less time to think of myself. I brought myself into a fine condition, thinking only of myself. It is high time I took the hint. I don't wonder Esther Thorndyke didn't want me, but it may be, if I make myself a different man, that I may yet be worthy of her as a real wife. I will try."

Instantly the world about him began to assume an attractiveness which only his office and profession had ever possessed for him before.

He found humanity an intensely interesting study the moment he looked upon it as anything but a means to professional comfort. More than that, he was astonished to find it instantly reciprocative. Giving, it was given unto him, till he had more abundance of precisely the same commodity which he endeavored to impart.

His enthusiasm for the new idea constantly increased as he went on through the orient, following the itinerary, date for date, with careful precision. Increasingly the new theory worked wonders with the world as he saw it and it saw him.

He was passed along from friend to friend, by letters and telegrams in advance of him, till it soon became evident to him that there was no possibility of taking the initiative, and that at the best he was only reciprocating. Strangest of all to him, he found himself enjoying the condition, especially each opportunity to reciprocate.

He was conversing with a Brahmin scholar, in Delhi, when the argument turned upon the value of men.

"Surely we are all but atoms," said the pundit. "We are aiding to the ultimate if we make men happier and better, and we retard the progress of things when we wrong ourselves or others. An atom is of value to the ultimate, and to itself, only as it is of value to others. The men who built these walls, thousands of years ago, aided to the ultimate. Do not you?"

"I hardly know," said Stanton. "Of late I have been trying to follow vague hints, at least, in that direction; and I confess if I had known, long ago, what I was losing by not following them before, I should not have lost so much."

"Happiness is the highest state attainable," said the pundit. "It is the highest conception of which the mind is capable, and the time to be happy is surely now. There is but one way to be happy and that is in making others so."

Stanton grasped his companion's hand as he replied:

"That is neither pagan nor Christian. It is simply Truth."

Even in the heart of Persia—even in Bagdad—he found himself making friends, appreciating them, and pained at parting. They were new and delightful sensations. Even the pain was a counter-irritant that served a good purpose.

In Bagdad he found a young Persian, Shiekali, educated in Europe, who met him when the steamer arrived, warned of his coming by friends in India. He proved not only a most agreeable host, but a profound antiquary, who was just pushing forward to completion his discovery that the base of the great river wall on the old Bagdad side of the Tigris river was laid of Babylonish brick.

One of these bricks was discovered while Stanton was in Bagdad, bearing the imprint of Nebuchadnezzar, proving the city to be of far greater antiquity than modern historians had been ready to admit, and identifying it as the site of the Bagdad mentioned in the Assyrian geographical catalogues of the days of Sardanapalus.

At first it seemed of little consequence or interest to Stanton; but Shiekali had a faculty of enriching a subject the moment he touched it, and before he left Bagdad Stanton was not only an enthusiastic admirer of the Persian and his theories, but an ardent participant in his researches.

"What fabulous resources for enjoyment are within our reach in every direction, if our eyes are only open to them!" he exclaimed. "And yet I came within a hair's breadth of living my life out and dying in the theory that the only interesting thing in the world was a question of law."

At last he reached Jerusalem—poor Jerusalem!—when she was staggering under the Christian orgies of Passion Week.

It is a pity to see Jerusalem then, and Stanton sat in silent disgust in the gallery of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, looking down upon the mob of fanatics, and wishing himself back in heathendom, when suddenly his thoughts flew far away to his office in New York on that morning of December 6.

He heard the voice of his first caller, speaking. He saw her eyes, bright, flashing, beautiful.

He had thought about that day as little as possible of late. It was by no means forgotten, nor was his struggle to become worthy of the end in view one whit abated, but thoughts of the past still roused only the morbid sentiments he was struggling to dispel.

Again and again he tried to put the memory out of his mind, but he saw only those eyes. He moved restly, and involuntarily looked across to the opposite gallery.

She was there.

Her arm rested on the rail, her cheek on her hand. Her head was bent forward as though she had been watching the rioters, but her eyes—as plainly as though they two had been alone, he saw that those beautiful eyes were fixed on him. For the moment he could not move. Then, either because she saw that he was looking or because she did not see him at all, her eyes turned slowly to the crowd below.

Instantly he rose, and as quickly as possible made his way to the opposite gallery.

She was no longer there.

CHAPTER IX.

"If she recognized me at all, she surely saw that I was coming, and left to avoid me," Stanton said to himself as he looked in vain along the gallery. "And really, now, I don't blame her for not running to meet the fellow for whom she found a wife. I hope I shall be able to show her some slight improvement if ever we do chance to meet."

With that he dropped the subject and went on with his itinerary; but the incident had roused in him an intense longing for home, which grew stronger and stronger the more he tried to shake it off. He faithfully obeyed his mute director, following its commands through North Africa and Europe, till months later he was strolling through the Place de la Concorde with a prominent Parisian, congratulating himself that only Spain and Italy remained before him.

The obelisk attracted his attention, and he paused as a hieroglyphic carried him away to his friend in Bagdad.

Suddenly her face shut out the obelisk. Her voice drowned all other sounds. Her eyes flashed in his thoughts.

With the quickness of reflex action he turned, as a pair of fiery cobs dashed past him towards the Bois de Boulogne.

She was driving them. Beside her sat a white-haired man, and even in the first shock Stanton realized that he had seen his face before. Behind them sat the footman.

Her eyes met his in one flash of recognition, but before he could move she was gone. He stood silently watching while the carriage disappeared between the marble groups. Only vaguely he realized that the Frenchman was saying:

"So you know her. Happy man! But you cannot win her, nor can anyone else. They say she has the wealth to purchase a prince, but she is always beside her father. She has beauty to capture anything, but she will look at nothing. There are noblemen without number who would give their titles for such a glance as you received. Happy man! How I envy you!"

Stanton winced as he thought how he had questioned that woman, in his office, less than a year before.

"How she must have laughed at me. even if she did pity me and provide me with a wife!" he thought, as they walked away. The idea grew and developed, till he said to himself: "I'm under no obligations not to see this woman. She came to me without an apology, when she had business. I will go to her. I'll tell her I am determined to be a different man and make myself worthy of a real wife. She helped me to win Esther Thorndike's assistance. She may be willing to help me to win her love."

He finally recalled the father's face as that of Thaddeus Braddon, of Braddon & Burridge. One of the last victories he had won at the bar was an almost hopeless case against Braddon & Burridge. Stanton had noticed only the junior partner in the court room, but Braddon was there, and chuckled in a most unaccountable way as John Olmstead's nephew twisted his witnesses about till they said precisely what they did not mean and the case went against him in spite of glaring facts to the contrary.

Stanton easily learned the location of their lodgings. He found the place the next afternoon, and learned from a servant that Mr. Braddon and his daughter had left Paris quite suddenly and unexpectedly that morning, even forgetting to tell him where they were going or when they would return.

The tips of his teeth showed under his mustache as Stanton walked slowly away, saying to himself:

"So she did know me, and there's no doubt she intends to avoid me. Well, I'll not keep her away from Paris, right in the height of the season. I'll leave myself in the morning. But we shall meet sometime, my beauty, on this side of the ocean or the other; and when we do I have a word to say to you. I'm ashamed of the man you knew me, but I'm not ashamed to look you in the face and tell you so. You are my only possible means of reaching Esther Thorndike, and you must help me. You must. That's all there is to it."

Stanton took pains to have definite statements appear, in the two journals which all Americans read, that he had left Paris for Spain and Italy, whence he should sail for America late in November, without returning to the capital.

"If we meet again it will be your own fault now, and you will have to listen to me. See?" he observed; but the weeks slipped away without such an incident, and he found himself in Naples upon the eve of sailing home.

Home?

How he had longed for that time to come!

Now it suddenly appeared to him that he had no home.

The stately, old-fashioned mansion that he loved would be well aired and warmed to receive him on the 6th of December, for he had already sent the order to Sam and his wife. But was that all there was of home?

The good old couple would welcome him back—back to sleep and bath and breakfast. But even that would increase their cares, and necessitate more servants in the house to annoy them. It could not prove any real pleausre to them.

"What is there, after all, in this going home that I've been longing for?" he asked himself, and the loneliness in him answered: "Nothing."

PRINCESS GOWNS.

They Stand In High Favor This Season.

The princess gown is obtaining marked precedence this season. Its most popular form is really a modification of the two piece costume, for the skirt is made separately and runs upward into a tight corselet of greater or less height, which is often held over the shoulders by bretelles or suspenders.

WEDDING GOWN.

The short bolero is a frequent addition. The accompanying bodice is of silk and is in its simpler form a shirt waist.

The princess style is always preferred for wedding gowns. The one illustrated is of ivory satin, closed at the side under a plaited scarf of mousseline de soie, forming jabots below the waist and a form at the foot. Orange blossoms are mixed with the jabots. A plaited scarf of mousseline de soie borders the bodice, which has a chou of mousseline and a piquet of orange blossoms at the left side. The collar and small plastron are of plaited mousseline de soie, and this material also finishes the wrists of the tight sleeves. The veil is of illusion, and there are two piquets of orange flowers in the hair. JUDIC CHOLLET.

TRIMMINGS.

Lace Is Much Employed as a Decoration.

Lace increases in favor instead of diminishing. On summer gowns it is immensely used, and collars, circular flounces and boleros are often entirely composed of it. There are also detached incrustations of guipure for cloth gowns, and for foulard and taffeta there have been produced silk guipures of different colors to be chosen to match the silk of the gown they are to trim.

As a set off to all this decoration there are very effective plain gowns seen now and then. The model illustrated is in the princess style and is of nickel gray corkscrew. It closes at the side with buttons of the same material, and around the front are three flat circular flounces edged with a silk and gold cord and terminating under two gold buckles. The same sort of decoration upon the bodice forms a crossed bolero, fastened by three smaller gold buckles. The flaring collar has a velvet cravat with metal tips. The sleeves are trimmed at the top to match the bodice, and at the wrist are puffs of white silk. The scarf is of gray mousseline de soie, the hat of gray straw draped with embroidered tulle and ornamented with flowers. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SIGN OF THE CROSS.

Historians Consider Its Origin Shrouded in Mystery.

Has Been a Religious Symbol for Thousands of Years, But Was Not Adored Until After Christ's Crucifixion.

[Special Correspondence.]

THE objects with which we are most familiar cause the least conscious thought unless brought to our notice by some means a little out of the common. This is especially true, perhaps, in the case of some religious emblems. Echoes of Christian associations remain with us so insistently that a desire to inquire into the origin of certain of our symbols, forms and ceremonies takes definite form. It is well known that many of these antedate the Christian era by many centuries, but were incorporated into the early church system for various reasons. The cross has probably the best claim of all upon us because of its connection with the time when the Lord ceased to be visible to earthly eyes, but it had then been used emblematically for thousands of years. Wherever great excavations have been made some form of cross has been found under circumstances proving it to have been employed as a religious symbol. A bronze crucifix, believed to have been carried to Ireland, where it was found, by the early Phoenicians, bears the image of Krishna, one of the great heathen gods who was said to have been, on one occasion, fastened by arrows to a growing tree. Another, representing the veiled form of a woman, was discovered in a tomb near Cyprus. Some authorities consider it the offering of some one who had escaped death by crucifixion, others that the "mother of Life," Venus, is represented. The probabilities are that neither surmise is correct, but there is no doubt that the figure is several thousands of years old and is a rather uncanny looking object. Time has removed one arm, on the other the cords which bound it to the cross are still visible. On multitudes of medals and ancient monuments are to be found crosses grasped in the hands of the statues of Victory and of figures of emperors. They were also placed upon globes, which, ever since the days of Augustus, have been the sign of the empire of the world. The shields, cuirasses, helmets and imperial cap were all thus decorated. Spanish conquerors were astonished to find the cross an object of religious veneration among the natives of Central and South America. The brazen serpent was elevated on a cross and Moses instructed the Israelites to mark their doorposts in the form of a cross with the blood of the sacrificial lamb. The sign is frequently found on ancient Jewish monuments.

CRUCIFIX FRESCO.
(Discovered in 1584 in the Cemetery of Pope Julius.)

There is an almost endless number of forms of crosses, but the leading styles are the Greek, the Latin and St. Andrew's crosses. The first is the cross of St. George, the English emblem before the union with Scotland. The St. Andrew's cross consists of two shafts of equal length crossed diagonally in the center. This is supposed to be the cross on which the patron saint of Scotland, whose name it bears, suffered martyrdom. The Latin cross is the one with which we are most familiar. Nature seems especially fond of the cruciform. It figures in many astronomical calculations. More than 1,600 flowers in this form have been classified. The history of the cross has been divided into three periods—when it was regarded as an emblem of opening life, or springtime; when it was the instrument of the most humiliating and excruciating form of torture, and the present time, in which it stands for the highest type of religion the world has ever known. Death on the cross was considered so degrading that Cicero said of it: "Let it never come near the body of a Roman citizen; nay, not even near his eyes, or ears or thoughts." George Gottlieb Richter, a German physician, in a "Dissertation on the Saviour's Crucifixion," gives a most bloodcurdling account of the agonies of a person undergoing this method of torture and the physiological reasons for the symptoms. It does not form pleasant reading. Life was often prolonged for several days, but the Romans, out of respect for the traditions of the Jews (Deut. 21:22, 23), hastened death that a body might be buried on the day of execution. The sufferings of Christ terminated speedily, to the surprise of onlookers. From this time crucifixion was earnestly desired by the more devout of His followers as a high honor, and gradually the crucifix was adopted as an emblem of the Christian faith. The first Christian writer who mentions the making of the sign of the cross in connection with baptism is Tertullian, who wrote after the middle of the second century. The crucifix was adored, in accordance with the teachings of John of Damascus, in the seventh century, in all the churches of the east.

It began to supersede the use of the plain cross at this time, although it was first introduced into the church about 393. The early form was of dark red wood and bore the figure of a lamb, owing to disinclination to portray the form of Christ. The beautiful Greek cross which came later was free from all gruesome suggestions, and was adorned with flowers of gold, silver and gems. In the reign of Justinian, in 692, at the council of Trulle, it was resolved that in order to bring the true significance of the death of Christ to the minds of the people with whom symbolism had taken the place of true worship, the human figure should be substituted for that of a lamb. Although the Bible clearly proves that Christ was divested of His raiment, for which lots were cast, early artists could not overcome their reluctance to represent the body as it must have appeared, and the first cru-cifixes show it attired in a long robe. That which is claimed to be the oldest of this type known is the crucifix fresco discovered in 1594 in the cemetery of Pope Julius. Mary and John are represented on either side of the figure of Christ. Episcopalians and Roman Catholics do not consider all present-day crucifixes orthodox. The arms are horizontally extended in the true Roman cross with the head above the cross beam to show that Christ died for all. The head is placed below the beam and hands extended above it in the Jansenistic cross, representing an idea that the death only benefited a chosen few of the "elect."

No story in the history of the world is accompanied by more varied incidents than that connected with the true cross. Empress Helena, mother of Constantine, when nearly 80 years of age, became animated by a desire of finding the cross on which the Lord was crucified. It is said that she discovered it, together with those upon which the two thieves were executed. As the title had become separated and lay at a little distance, she was made conscious as to which was the object of her search by a miracle. Over the spot where it was found a chapel was erected, and the cross itself placed under the church by Constantine over the site of the crucifixion and burial. It remained there over 600 years, and was exhibited on each Easter to the throngs of pilgrims.

In many churches small pieces are said to exist. Their authenticity seems to be well established in some cases. This is true also of the fragment of the inscription now in the old church of Santa Croce at Rome. These bits are so nearly microscopic that if all were placed together, it is said that they would make a block only 20 inches long, eight wide and three thick. The fate of the remainder no one is able to learn. Much of the interest in the crusades centers around this object of veneration. On July 5, 1187, it was lost to the Christians. The Saracens delighted in the jewels in which it was encased, but had, evidently, no appreciation of the wood itself, for it has, seemingly, passed from the face of the earth.

A cooling drink or frozen desert and well preserved larder—all depends upon the quality of the ice.

We are prepared to give our patrons a better grade of ice this year than ever before.

It's the kind that's hard and solid. It is ice made from filtered arteslan well water. Use Hygeia Ice once and you'll wonder how you ever got along without it.

SPORTING.

GOLF.

Workmen are constantly busy about the property of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club improving it. Especially is this noticeable about the old barn, where much has been done to make it more attractive.

New Jersey State Golf Champion Archie Graham has returned home from California and will lose no time in getting himself into condition so as to defend his title at Englewood the latter part of this month.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course is now pronounced to be the equal of any in the Metropolitan district. This has only been made possible through steady hard work, all of which is due to E. T. Barrows, chairman of the greens committee, and his assistants.

In a match game of golf last Monday between the undergraduates and the graduates at Princeton, J. W. Baker, of this city, played with the undergraduates and defeated his opponent, Stelle, 4 up. In the game between the Alumni and University team, Baker played with the latter, and his team won by 19 to 17.

Although Miss Margaret Goddard now leads in the competition for the Mellick cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, she will have to play good golf to maintain that lead. There are several excellent players among the women, and it is quite likely that they will make the contest an exciting one.

Inside of two weeks all of the colleges will have closed and the Plainfield contingent will be home to enjoy play on the local golf courses. Most of the golfers have been improving some of their time while at college and they will be in good form to continue play. It is expected that par golf will be played on the Hillside and Park links this summer.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Clinton Avenue and the Hope Chapel nines will cross bats on the grounds at Clinton avenue and West Fourth streets Saturday afternoon.

J. L. Bennett, of Watchung avenue, has arranged two games to be played between the butchers' and grocers' clerks, at Dewey Park. The first game is scheduled for Independence Day and the second for Labor Day. A cup has been offered and it will be given to the winner of the first game to hold until the termination of the second match. Should the latter game be won by the same team the cup will be awarded to it; otherwise a third and deciding game will be played.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Charles Dupee, of Washington Park, one of the prominent athletes at Yale, has entered the 100 and 220 yard dashes for the A. A. U. championship to be run off at the Pan-American Exposition on Saturday. His recent performances on the track have made him a strong opponent in amateur athletic contests.

Entertained Singing Society.

The Singing Society of the Gesang and Turn Verein was entertained by Frank White, the newly elected janitor of the organization, last evening, in Saengerbund Hall. Refreshments were served and a merry time enjoyed.

PAID BY HEIGHT.

Novel Way of Charging Admittance at Social at Hope Chapel Last Evening.

As a means of diversion a pleasant social was given in Hope chapel last evening under the auspices of the Young People's Society, at which an admittance fee was levied according to the height of the person entering. It was was a novel way of charging admission, but was the means of causing much amusement.

The programme was made up of guessing charades and playing games in which all present joined heartily. When all were thoroughly tired out, refreshments were served. The social was given under the auspices of the entertainment committee of the Young People's Society.

Lost Child Found.

A telephone message was received at police headquarters yesterday from a resident on LaGrande avenue, stating that she had a lost child at her home who said her name was Helena VanWinkle. A policeman was sent for the child and, after a brief search, located her parents in the Crescent rink building. The latter had been inquiring for the lost one and were on the point of securing aid from the police when she was returned.

Metal Chip In His Eye.

William J. Hartpence, of West Second street, while at work in the American Engine Works at Bound Brook yesterday, got a particle of metal in one of his eyes. The foreign matter caused him much pain. It was necessary for Mr. Hartpence to go the Muhlenberg Hospital to obtain relief. Dr. Monroe B. Long removed the piece of metal.

One of the New Teachers.

Miss Gertrude Snodgrass, of Central avenue, who has accepted a position on the teaching corps of the borough schools, is a graduate of the Woman's College, of Baltimore, Md. The selection of Miss Snodgrass is a very fortunate one, as it is believed she will ably fill the position of Latin teacher.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May Be Of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

When the Paterson Board of Education called Principal L. A. Goodenough of this city to come up higher it took him on the recommendation of those knew him. He was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. A. B. Poland, who was called to Newark. After the Paterson people had seen Superintendent Goodenough and recognized his efficiency the Board of Education elected him superintendent indefinitely—practically for life. They intend to make him independent of political changes. Paterson knows a good thing. Now they know why Jersey City people said they parted with Mr. Goodenough with regret.—Jersey City Journal.

The statistics are lacking, but the decrease in the number of acres of land under cultivation must have been very large in Essex, Morris and Union counties during the last twenty years. The weather conditions of late have been abnormal enough to cause discussion of almost everything affected by them, but the woes of the farmer cut a small figure. He is a small factor. Nor can it be said that the crowding of population is the sole cause. There are great areas of idle land in every direction, and even where its owners are holding it at high prices for that remote boom which every New Jersey land-owner looks for, it would be available for farming if any one wanted to use it for that purpose. But there are no applicants. Other employments, requiring less work, less capital and less brains, are available, and the farming immigrant goes to the West at once. —Newark Call.

The recent decision to admit to the State Normal School only such pupils as have completed high school courses raises New Jersey to the highest plane in the matter of training teachers. It places the Normal School on a level with the colleges, instead of the secondary schools, as is the common practice. The only other State to adopt the scheme is Massachusetts, where the experiment has been completely successful. The average number of admissions during this period was 56 per cent. higher than during the five preceding years, and the yearly admissions in 1900 were nearly double those of the first year under the new regime. In 1900, 950 candidates were examined, of whom 819 were admitted. The total number of students last year was 1,712, and of graduates, 537—each the largest in the history of the schools. No State in the Union is making greater strides in matters educational than New Jersey at present.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Cossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

There is much food for thought in the recent action of Mr. Starrett, president of the Starrett Tool Company, of Athol, Mass., one of the largest tool factories in this country. This concern granted its 280 employes a 54 hour a week schedule with no reduction in pay, without any demand for such a schedule, and in doing so, the president presented each employe with a letter explaining why the change was made. He said that through the efforts of the large force of employes the concern had become a very prosperous one, and was now willing to share this prosperity with the men, whom they recognized as hard-working and industrious. The president said that this action had been decided upon for these reasons, as well as for the reason that the company considered strikes a bad and dangerous thing. When the change was made known to the employes, the latter gave three rousing cheers for the president and the company.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING AT CLOSE OF DAY.

Miss Amy Gertrude Burt And P. Louis Smith Were Married Last Evening.

BRIDE IS FROM THIS CITY.

CROOM IS SON OF PRESIDENT OF HACKETTSTOWN NATIONAL BANK.

Although a Quiet Affair It Was a Particularly Charming Ceremony—Beautiful Gowns—Reception Followed Ceremony.

Surrounded by an exclusive gathering, composed of near relatives and intimate friends, Miss Amy Gertrude Burt, of this city, and Peter Louis Smith, of Hackettstown, were married at the home of the family of the bride, 912 West Seventh street, at 6:30 o'clock last evening.

Though efforts were made to have the happy event solemnized quietly, the nuptial ceremony was a brilliant affair. The home was elaborately and tastefully decorated. Handsome gowns, beautiful flowers and mellow lights made the scene one of grandeur.

In the large parlor, to the right of the hallway, a mass of floral arrangements lent an air of gladness. At the large bow window, at the side of this room, had been improvised an imposing altar. Banked against the windows were stately palms and extending outward beyond the arch of the window a few feet above the floor a semi-circular railing of greens, supported by columns covered with daisies, joined either end of the walls. Immediately above the altar was fastened a corona of twenty diminutive electric lights and from these fell a similar number of strands of southern smilax which were tied loosly to the columns of the floral rail. On the mantel and covering the walls were greens interspersed with white peonies and daises. The spacious music room was adorned with palms and daisies. In the dining room pink peonies and roses formed the decorations. The long piazza in front of the house was curtained off with red material and brightened by electric lights of the same color.

Promptly at the time set for the wedding the strains of the march from "Lohengrin" announced the entrance of the bridal party. Warren S. Burt, of New York, and Chauncey H. Burt, of this city, two of the ushers, led the way. Preceding the bride, who walked with her sister, Miss Clara M. Burt, came the maid-of-honor, another sister, Miss Jessie Alice Burt.

At the altar the bridal party met the groom, attended by Pierre F. Cook, of Jersey City, a cousin of the groom, who acted as best man. Standing before the officiating clergyman, Rev. John McMurray, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, the young couple took the vows, which made them man and wife, the Episcopal ceremony being used. The bride was given away by her sister, Miss Clara M. Burt.

When the impressive ceremony was ended the happy pair received the warm congratulations of the assembled guests. With the reception came a bountiful repast, the bridal party being served in the dining hall, while the guests were served in the various rooms.

The bride was gowned in white crepe metia, trimmed with point venise lace. A tulle veil was caught up with a pin of pearls, about which was entwined orange blossoms. She carried bridal roses. The maid-of-honor wore imported dotted swiss over pink taffetta, with pink lace and trimmings. Her bouquet was of sweet peas.

A stringed orchestra furnished the music for the nuptial ceremony as well as the reception. After the wedding Mendelssohns' march was played and then followed for the remainder of the evening a programme of classical selections.

The bride received a large number of presents, among them being fine designs in Haviland and Dresden china, cut glass, silver and bric-a-brac. Some large checks were conspicuous among the gifts. The groom's father gave the couple a handsome property in Hackettstown, in which they will reside when it is completed in the fall.

A great aunt of the bride, who is past seventy years of age, gave a hand-painted set of plates, while another great aunt presented a unique silver fruit dish, a family heirloom. The gift of brothers and sisters of the bride was a handsome silver service.

The bride's gift to the maid-of-honor

A DELIGHTFUL COMBINATION.

STRAWBERRIES AND ICE CREAM RULED AT SEVENTH-DAY'S FESTIVAL.

Given Under Auspices of Ladies Society For Christian Work—Musical Programme Given.

Strawberries and ice cream was the delightful combination which served to draw a large number of lovers of those delicacies to the annual festival of the Ladies Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, held last evening. Neither cream nor strawberries had lost any of their popularity, and the result was a very large sale early in the evening. In addition to these a candy table in charge of Miss Louella Clawson and Miss Ernestine Smith enjoyed a liberal patronage.

While the festival was the main attraction, especially for those in search of refreshments, the entertainment committee had provided an excellent musical programme. It consisted of a piano duet, "Minstrel's Serenade," by the Misses Eva Rogers and Bessie Dunham; a recitation, "Baby Thankful," by Miss Evalois St John; a song by the primary deparment of the Sunday-school; a selected reading, "The Minister's Socks," by Miss Ethel Haven; a ring drill, given under the supervision of Miss Elizabeth Allis, by the Misses Eva Rogers, Bessie Dunham, Edith Nordstrom, Ethel Murray, Ethel Morris, Marie Rogers, Nellie Williams and Izzie Randolph, and a vocal selection, "The Heavenly Song," by Mrs. John Manley, concluded the programme.

The musical was arranged by a committee consisting of Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, chairman; Mrs. J. G Miller, Mrs. F. H Smith, Mrs. C. H. Dunham and Miss Ida Randolph. The refreshments were distributed under the supervision of Mrs. Ira West, Mrs. W. H. Rogers, Mrs. F. A. Dunham and Mrs. W. R. Mosher. Refreshing lemonade was served by Miss Mabel Mitchell and Miss Ethel Haven.

MISS MAXSON'S MUSICALE.

MARKED CLOSE OF YEAR'S WORK BY HER PUPILS.

Pupils Gave Well Rendered Selections, Illustrating The Fletcher Method Of Instruction.

The annual piano recital marking the close of the year's work was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Mabel Maxson's pupils. The affair was given at Miss Maxson's home on East Front street, and was well attended by friends of the pupils who thoroughly enjoyed the exhibition.

Miss Maxson teaches the Fletcher music method for beginners and it is remarkable what young children can do in this method. The aim is concentration through interest and it helps the pupils to read music readily. It also trains the ear in the major and minor scales, chords and intervals.

The first part of the programme was devoted to the rendition of piano solos and duets by Miss Maxson's older pupils. The selections were given with much expression and in a delightful manner from memory. Those who gave this part of the programme were the Misses Bessie Dunham, Marie Rogers, Annie and Margaret Rafferty, Lucie Budlong, Charlotte Aldrich, Leba Wightman, Crystal MacMurray and Kenneth Runyon and Howard Runyon.

Part second was given up to an illustration of some of the work accomplished by the Fletcher method. The demonstration was given by the following: The Misses Ouida Hetfield, Kathryn Sminck, Winifred Cadwell, Isabelle Taylor and Leba Wightman. The pupils performed remarkably well and won much praise for their work. After the recital all retired to the lawn where refreshments were served and a social time with games enjoyed.

No Display At Park Club.

In view of the fact that there is to be a fine display of fireworks, July 4, at the Hillside Tennis and Golf clubhouse, there is little likelihood of a display being given at the Park Club in Washington avenue. The officers and committees held a meeting Tuesday evening to discuss the matter and it seemed to be the general opinion that it would be wise to dispense with the display July 4.

Death of a Young Lad.

John Myles, an eleven-year-old son of Frederick Myles, of Elizabeth, died at his home Monday from pneumonia. The funeral services were held in that city yesterday afternoon and interment was made at Hillside cemetery, in this city, later in the day. The father of the young boy was formerly a resident of Plainfield.

Miss Adelaide Flory, of Bangor, Pa., is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. C. Martin, 87 Duer street.

PREPARING TO ENTER COLLEGE.

Young Men Went to New York to Take Entrance Examinations for Princeton.

The college entrance examinations for Princeton University are being held today. Among the young Plainfielders who went to New York to undergo the examination being conducted in that city are: Lawrence L. Tweedy, Mellick Tweedy, David S. Pond and C. Ames Brooks, all of the Plainfield High School, and Ralph Schoonmaker, Frederick Brown and David Griggs, of the Leal's School. If successful in the examinations all of these young men will enter Princeton in the fall with the exception of Ralph Schoonmaker, whose intention it is to go to Columbia University.

CITY YOUNG FOLK WEDDED.

QUIET BUT PRETTY HOME WEDDING TOOK PLACE LAST NIGHT.

Miss Ella May Sebring and James A. Stafford Were Married at Bride's Home—Reception Followed.

Quiet but very pretty was the ceremony last evening which united Miss Ella May Sebring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sebring, and James A. Stafford, of Grove street, in the bonds of holy matrimony. It took place at 6:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, 231 LaGrande avenue. Only the relatives and a few very intimate friends, numbering in all a hundred, were present.

The decorations were simple but effective. They consisted of greens, which lined the walls of the parlors and dining room, and of carnations, chiefly pink and white, bunched about the rooms. A bower of greens was arranged in one corner of the back parlor, where the ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, in which the groom is an active worker, was also present.

Bride and groom entered unattended. The bride was given away by her father, while her brother, Elwood Sebring, stood at the right hand of the groom. The Episcopal ceremony was used. At its conclusion, the guests heartily congratulated the young couple on the step they had just taken The bride was charmingly gowned in white swiss, trimmed with lace. Her bouquet was of white bride roses.

An informal reception followed the ceremony, after which the wedding supper was served. At 9 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Stafford ran the gauntlet of the guests and departed on their honeymoon. A plentiful shower of rice greeted their departure. They will spend a few days in New England and will then take up their residence at 304 West Front street, where the groom has a flat already furnished.

The wedding gifts formed a pretty collection. There were also a number of checks. The teachers of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church, of which the groom has long been secretary, gave a silver service. The groom is a trusted employe of the United Typewriter and Supplies Company, of New York, and is well known in this city, where he has a host of friends. The bride is also a very popular young woman.
